Worcester Park, Surrey, England (CP)—Local boys say the fencing in front of his church has become the most disgraceful in the district. He will investigate. "Dogs play hide-and-seek there," he says.

Lingwood Mill, Norfolk, England (CP)—F. E. Cordy timber merchants in Lingwood are developing conclusions, but it is interesting to know that it's not all honey and flowers in the Bolshevist empire.

Russ Patrols Said Molesting Fishermen

Stockholm, May 18 (Reuters) — The Governor of Sweden's Gotland Island in the Baltic, Sven Wannstedt, today complained that Russian coastal patrols were molesting fishermen in the Baltic. He reported to the Swedish Foreign Office that Russian patrols had come alongside Gotland fishing boats well outside Russian territorial waters, searched their nets, and made off with them.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Not So Fast!

In five weeks and three days, following the corrective, Protective Diet for Reducing as given in your booklet Rules for Reducing, I have gone from 168 pounds to 139, and I haven't felt so well or looked so well in years. I am 43 years old, five feet and three inches tall, and consider that I expect to be right at correct weight—for me, pounds. Dr. Brady, go my thanks for the nicest thing that has happened me. Since your third baby, now a two-year old Brady Baby, was born, (Mrs. M. B.)

Answer—That's a little too fast. Much better to reduce not more than two and one-half pounds a week. There's always the danger of gaunt, flabby and sagging and looking twice your age if you reduce too fast. Any one who wishes to reduce must follow the Corrective Protective Diet given in the booklet. For a copy of the booklet Rules for Reducing send stamped self addressed envelope and fifteen cents.

So This Is Spring

I get at least six hours sleep every night, as I do not think I should be so sleepy all the time I feel because I am only 5 ft. 4 in. 43, weigh 135, five feet tall. (Mrs. C.)

Answer—You need at least 7 hours sleep every night especially if you do any kind of housework. For that daytime drowsiness perhaps a good blood tone your iodine intake. Send stamped self addressed envelope and ask for writing (no dipping, please) for the pamphlet The Iodin Reduction.

Lemon Juice

Is it all right to drink the juice from one lemon before breakfast every morning? Told it will affect my blood. (E. J.)

Answer—Yes, if you like it. Like most fruits or fruit juices it tends to make the blood and tissues less acid.

BIRD'S EYE VIEW

Life is like a carpet. Seen from above, a fine carpet is an object of beauty, with graceful figures and glowing colors blending into a lovely and symmetrical whole. But the under side of the same carpet may appear to be an ugly and meaningless network of threads, without form, proportion, or beauty.

Notice that the carpet really is beautiful, and that it is the same carpet all the time, from the point of view differs. Similarly, the daily life which appears to many people so rich, meaningful, and challenging seems to others to be drab and sordid, with no pattern or purpose. Why do people see it from such different points of view? How can we be sure to see that from which there is real beauty and meaning?

One way to begin is to cultivate the interests which give us the view from above and help us to see the pattern. Literature, art, music, friendship, love of man, love of God. Just as surely as these pull us up to where we see the carpet above, above the interests will make us see the under side, and ugliness and sensuality are only a few of them. But the beauty of the carpet is there all the time, if we will but raise ourselves high enough to see it.

Rev. E. M. Caldwell Honored on 15th Anniversary of His Ordination

Shannonville — Holy Trinity Anglican Church was filled to capacity on Wednesday evening last, when adherents of the church, and friends, gathered to pay their tribute to the rector, Rev. E. M. Caldwell, on the occasion of the 15th anniversary of his ordination to the Priesthood of the Church of England. Vases of spring flowers adorned the altar, adding to the beauty of the setting, were six tall, white tapers. Clergymen present on this auspicious occasion were Venerable Archdeacon Arthur Smith, of St. Thomas Anglican Church, in Belleville; Rev. Canon Kidd, rector of Deseronto Anglican Church; Rev Reginald Savery, rector of the Tyendinaga Anglican Church and Rev. Maurice Oldham, Rector of Camden East.

Mrs. Cecil McCarthy, the church organist, presided at the organ, and played several appropriate selections before the commencement of the service of Evensong.

The children's choir of Holy Trinity Church assisted by the choir of Point Anne, proceeded up the aisle to the choir loft with the singing of the old familiar hymn "The Churches One Foundation." The choir presented an attractive appearance with their black caps and gowns, and all over-gown of white.

The 4th Psalm was repeated by all present, followed by the first scripture lesson, taken from Isaiah 61, read by Mrs. Ford, and second scripture lesson John 10, was read by Rev. E. H. Savery.

The congregation joined in singing a very suitable hymn for this occasion "O Love Thy Place O God," which was followed by the prayer for the State by Archdeacon Smith.

Greatest Occasion

The rector, Rev. E. M. Caldwell welcomed all present to this service of thanksgiving and to share in the anniversary to the elevation of priesthood. This day was the greatest occasion he had known in his life, stated Mr. Caldwell. He expressed his gratitude to God in the way he had led him in the past, and he hoped that in facing the future he would be more in God's strength, his own, adding that all must work from a background of peace. He expressed thanks to God that he had been placed in this particular parish, since the congregation was great and the loyalty of his people had been splendid.

Being asked by a friend what the last 15 years in the ministry had taught him, he replied, by saying 1st, that where he was God would call him to be, and wherever he was placed was a field of opportunity.

In the Parish

He found that when a man gives himself to the love of his people, in the spirit of Christ, then his work will be more successful. He had found it not too easy visit parishioners, but a Minister should visit in the homes to do successful work in his parish.

If a man will do work that will please himself, he must work from a background of peace.

Thanks were extended to the visiting clergymen, to Mrs. McCarthy, to the choir, and to the presidents of the three Guilds of the parish, Mrs. Hanley Luffman, of Point Anne; Mrs. Conden, of St. John's Mission, Belleshimer Avenue; and Mrs. Sidney Fitzgerald of Holy Trinity.

Rev. R. M. Oldham, then introduced the guest speaker of the evening in the person of Rev. Maurice Oldham, rector of Camden East, who Mr. Caldwell mentioned was an old friend over the years.

The offertory prayer was rendered by Archdeacon Smith and the old familiar hymn "All Hail the Power of Jesus Name" was followed by the address of the evening, by Mr. Oldham.

Grateful For Honor

Mr. Oldham expressed his thanks for being asked to deliver a sermon on such a special occasion. He mentioned that this was the third time that Rev. E. M. Caldwell had been neighboring rectors, and expressed the heartiest congratulations on behalf of the parish of Camden East to the Rev. E. M. Caldwell and desired that he would have God's richest blessing in his future work.

Rev. M. Oldham chose his text from John 5:11. The kingdoms of this world will become the kingdom of our Lord.

"Our aim," said the speaker "should be to make Christ king, in the heart, in the home and in the world." He said in what the clergy are endeavoring to do. We must make this world a better place to live, and the church is the most steadying interest in our world today. The church is exactly what we make it, and the rector needs to have co-operation from the congregations."

95th Anniversary

"This year will mark the 95th anniversary of Holy Trinity-church and we should thank our Heavenly Father for past blessings," Rev. M. Oldham stated that this parish has had a most worthy history during the years and it plays no small part in the Canadian Church. He mentioned also that the Church of England now comprises 28 dioceses, and three Newfoundlands entry into Confederation, the church now extends from sea to sea.

Day of Service

"We live in days of great opportunity of service and we should make Jesus King in our hearts," he said. He spoke of Solomon at the dedication of the temple, offering a prayer of thanksgiving to God as he stood at the altar. Two well known verses from the Bible should be kept in mind for the year, one another, with a pure heart dilligently," and I will walk in thy house with a pure heart."

In the moral life in the home is good, the communnity life will be the same," Mr. Oldham stated. In some homes the Bible is never read, nor prayer or grace before meals, he said. He asked the congregation to keep their homes Christian, which the church is endeavoring to accomplish. He told of a well known judge who had recently visited that 65 per cent of the children never attend a Sunday School or church. What will happen in the future?

What is up to the parents to train these children and clergymen must have the cooperation of the parents. Integrity is the architect and kindness the upholderer, Christ has made king in our hearts and homes, we would certainly make him king in our vast-Dominion; we have all the blessings of the churches to help us. "What a world we would be, king of the whole world." The Rev. Gentleman was asked to spread the gospel as they all have a responsibility, and to be thankful for the faithful for the unity of all churches in the World Council of Churches."

"It was the duty of everyone to worship God and that all could witness by their lives, words, and actions, talents should be gladly and willingly used to make the church great. A clergyman s[illegible] ways endeavors to serve to the best of his ability."

Mr. Oldham closed his remarks with a tribute to the rector and his wife. He mentioned that the rector's wife had been termed "the unpaid curate." He asked that God would bless the congregation, the rector, his wife and family. The Venerable Archdeacon Smith, of Trenton, pronounced the Benediction.

Social Evening

About 125 of the friends of Rev. and Mrs. Caldwell gathered after the Evensong Service in St. John's Parish Hall, Point Anne, where the reception and social evening was held.

A large tea table graced the front of the hall, covered with a beautiful lace cloth, a centrepiece of spring flowers with a silver tea-service at each end of the table.

An enjoyable program was presented with Mr. Harry Mewett, of St. John's Mission, Herchimer Avenue, presiding as the chairman of the evening.

Pleasing Program

The girl's choir from Point Anne rendered a pleasing number "Cruising Down the River," Mrs. Insley of Point Anne, gave one of her pleasing solos; Mrs. William Doxtator, acting as accompanist for the program. Mr. William Waudley of Shannonville rendered an interesting piano solo "Smoke Gets in Your Eyes," being called back for an encore.

Little Miss Glenda Doxtator was the next contributor to the evening's entertainment with the song "I never Walked a Sweetheart Till I Met You" which was well sung.

Four small girls sweetly harmonized in the wellknown favorite "How Dry I am," and a sing-song of both the old and new songs was then enjoyed by all. The last number on the program being another piano solo "April Showers" by Mr. William Waudley.

Rev. E. M. Caldwell expressed thanks to the ladies who had prepared refreshments; to Mrs. Gallator, the accompanist and to Mr. Wagner, the chairman. At this juncture, Mrs. Sid Fitzgerald, president of the Shannonville Ladies' Guild, read an appropriate address to Rev. and Mrs. Caldwell.

Presentations

Mrs. Conmors, president of St. John's Mission Guild and Mrs. Luffman, president of the Guild at Point Anne, presented their rector with a lovely pen and pencil set and a beautiful pair of earings and brooch to Mrs. Caldwell. Mr. Howard Fox, president of the Point Anne Neighborly Group, presented Rev. E. M. Caldwell with a six flame lighter as a token of their esteem, for which Mr. Caldwell expressed thanks.

Mrs. Fitzgerald and Mrs. Luffman presided at the tea table, and the ladies of the three Guilds of the parish served.

An enjoyable dance was the climax to a full evening's pleasure. Mr. and Mrs. Doxtator, Mr. Sid Fitzgerald and Mr. William Waudley, supplying the music for the round and square dances.

OUT OF THIS WORLD

The planet Pluto swings out as far as 4,300,000,000 miles from the sun and its maximum distance from the earth is 4,400,000,000 miles.

HAVE YOU $10 in U.S. FUNDS?

If you have more than $10 in U.S. cash you should turn it in to your bank, in exchange for Canadian dollars, without delay. Existing regulations make it illegal for any Canadian resident to retain in his possession more than $10 in United States cash.

HERE'S THE REASON

Canada must have the U.S. dollars spent here by tourists in order to make them available for the payment of imported goods and services needed to keep production and employment at a high level.

SHANNONVILLE

H. & S. Association Provides Trip For 30 Pupils

Shannonville. — An eventful day in the life of some thirty pupils of the Shannonville School transpired last Friday, when they set forth on the early morning train for a day's outing in the city of Toronto. Children left on their first ride on the train, and for a great number, their first visit to Toronto.

Mrs. Kenneth Juby, Mrs. Clifford Marsole, Mr. Carman Brentlinger assisted to assist the teachers, Miss Verna Fox and Mr. Reynolds in escorting the group.

Interested parents in the persons of Mrs. Kenneth Vivian, Mrs. Clifford Marsole, Mr. Kilburn, Mr. William Marsh, Mr. Bennett Juby, provided transportation to the 8.30 a.m. train and again met the 7 p.m. train.

Pupils from a portion of Grade III and all the higher grades were included in this "sight-seeing" tour.

A lunch served as their breakfast on the train, and by the time the train arrived at the Union Station in Toronto, all were eager to begin the tour.

Begin Tour

They proceeded through the underground passage to the Royal York Hotel where a guide showed them through various parts of this massive building. They saw one of the large convention rooms and the kitchens in operation. Quite a thrill was experienced in the elevator ride to the 22nd floor, where the city could be viewed.

Their next stop was the Parliament Buildings where a guide in the legislative chamber explained to the children the carvings on the wall, the portraits of prominent men, and the room where parliament convened. Each in turn was permitted to sit in the chair which King George occupied on his last visit to Canada. One of their number, George Reid, was permitted to be seated in this chair during the time of the guide's explanations.

The children saw a pure gold mace, and also received booklets with pictures of the buildings, a map of Toronto and a seat on the floor of the Legislative Assembly.

Visit Royal Ontario Museum

The children and escorts proceeded to the museum where they enjoyed two conducted lectures on the "Indians of Canada" and "Zoology". Especially interesting were the Indian relics, the wax figures and models of facepens.

The Zoology lecture consisted of the viewing of animals of Canada. The children were much interested in the skeletons of dinosaurs which were exceedingly large.

Mr. Reynolds, one of the local teachers, had charge of the next event which included the viewing of Egyptian mummies, armor of olden days, the mass with which parliament is always opened, and men and women's clothing of olden days.

All partook of refreshments in the Museum restaurant and enjoyed the food after having such an early breakfast.

See Renowned Sister

Mayde Lee Gardener was the next point of interest where they were fortunate in seeing Suzanne Gardener, renowned child actress seeing Barbara Ann Scott as she hurried through the room in the morning.

The children were left on their own when they visited Kresge's and Eatons on Yonge Street and it is reported that by the time they all could be assembled to proceed to the Union Station, all tired and happy crowd arrived back in Belleville at 7 p.m. sharp.

This trip materialized through the efforts of the local Home and School Association.

Much credit is due this association for their interest and work in the community.

BONARLAW

Bonarlaw — Mr. and Mrs. John A. Bell, of Fort Erie, Ont., are occupying their Bonarlaw home, and visiting friends in this district this weekend and until the middle of the week.

Mrs. Bob Cosbey was admitted to Belleville General Hospital Saturday where she will undergo an appendectomy.

Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Barlow were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wilson, Wellington, on Victoria Day and Monday, of this week and also visited the Niagara District which is at its best at this season. They were accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. John Bell, Fort Erie.

Mr. and Mrs. Chester J. Bakker and infant son, of Elmvale, have been visiting friends recently. A local doctor identified the specimens as a bear's paw.

HALLOWAY

Halloway—Large number from the neighborhood attended the music festival held in Stirling on Wednesday night, the Tyrone School being one of the eight schools who took part.

Mr. Hawn a Middlebury University in Hamilton will be the new student minister in the Sidney Baptist Church for the summer months.

Mrs. Ed Spencer returned home from Belleville Hospital where she spent the winter in Toronto with her sister.

Mr. Orin Frost spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Maxwell Reid and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Hinchey of Belleville spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Harold Sloot.

Mrs. Mabel Green of Toronto, called on friends in the neighborhood on Sunday afternoon.

The monthly meeting of W. I. was held at the home of Mrs. Cadman Bates.

Miss Marjorie Saunders left for her home in British Columbia on Saturday after spending some time with her sister, Mrs. Harold Wilkinson.

WHITE'S DISTRICT

Departing Neighbors Are Honored With Lovely Gifts

White's District— On Friday evening, friends met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Lee, to spend a social time with them, prior to their departure to their new home in Colborne. The Rev. A. C. McClelland called the gathering to order and asked Mr. and Mrs. May to take seats of honor. Mrs. Floyd Dudley read the address.

Mrs. May has been a member of the W.A.; the W.M.S.; and the W.I. and has also acted as secretary for the W.I. Mr. May has been church treasurer for the past year and both will be missed in the community.

Mr. Frank Sandercock and Mr. Walter Jones made the presentation to Mr. and Mrs. May of a tri-light electric floor lamp, and an end table.

Mrs. John Reid, president of the Fair of Colinet W.I., also presented them with an electric table lamp. Mr. and Mrs. May responded, thanking all for their kindness and wishing them well in their new home.

Mr. W. A. Jeffery and Mrs. Glen Morgan also spoke words of praise. All sang "For They Are Jolly Good Fellows".

Refreshments were served and a social time was enjoyed.

Over One Hundred Attend "Girls' Achievement Day"

Stirling—The largest "Girls' Achievement Day" ever held in Stirling took place on Saturday, in the Community Hall, when over 100 girls, from all parts of the county, representing some 13 girls' clubs, paid display.

Miss Irvine, County Home Economist, was in charge, and was assisted by Miss Dorothy Adams of Elgin, Essex, and Miss Jean Barbour, York, Halton and Peel.

Leadership Officials

Officials of the Women's Institute branch, who attended the day, give leadership during the day. Included Miss Florence Hicks, superintendent of Junior Extension, and Miss Helen McKerchie, director of Home Economics of the W.I. Branch.

It was a full day of activity as the 110 girls representing 13 different clubs within the county demonstrated how to entertain guests in their homes; how to pack a bag with the necessities for a weekend trip, or longer, and how to judge flowers and sandwich trays.

Projects chosen for 1949-50 were "The Club Girl's Stand on Guard", which will be a safety project, and "Cotton Accessories for the Club Girls Wardrobe", a Spring project. As a result of the two projects next year, there will be two achievement days.

Leaders, County Clubs

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

A case for a doctor and nobody else

Dear Miss Fairfax:

For the last few years my ears have been bothering me. I have gone to the doctor and he said that it should wear off. It happened when I had my tonsils out, and ever since it have not been able to hear right again.

I have been going out with a boy for eight months steady, and we love each other awfully lot. Recently we have talked about my deafness, and I should like to know if there is anything I can do to bring back my hearing. I have even thought of doing something desperate, but my boy friends said that maybe there is something I can do.

"Peanut"

Dear "Peanut":

The only person who can help you with the problem of your deafness is your doctor. I could not possibly give you any information on what might be done about it.

If the doctor to whom you have been going is a general practitioner and not a specialist in ear troubles then I think you might ask your parents if they would not take you to a doctor who specializes in this field and let him examine your ears and see if anything more might be done than already has been done.

It would not be right for me or anyone else to make any suggestions whatever about your difficulty, and do not be foolish enough to take the advice of anyone but a doctor who is qualified in this respect.

She's "Vexed by the Devil"

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am being vexed by the devil. That does sound dramatic but it's true.

This devil is in the form of a handsome married man, father of a two-year old daughter.

We met at the home of a mutual friend where his wife was also present and we were immediately attracted to each other. We have been meeting frequently for almost a year now.

This association has impaired my physical as well as my mental health. Last winter I suffered a nervous breakdown and am still under the doctor's care. This man is satisfied to go on as we are. He claims he loves me but he will not leave his wife because of the child.

I probably sound like a brazen husband stealer, but I am not. I come from a respectable, somewhat prominent family and attend church regularly. I have tried numerous times to break off affair up as I know it is wrong and sinful and I am afraid of what might happen. But when I hear his voice or see him, I forget everything. When I have moods of depression, I am so unhappy I just want to die. If I cannot live decently and respectably, maybe death is the only solution. I am disgusted with everything, including myself. I don't want to break up any home but what about me?

"Desperate"

Dear "Desperate":

Well, what about you? Do you think your happiness is so important that it should be attained at the expense of that of another woman? And what makes you think you're not "a brazen husband stealer"? What else is a woman who would carry on a secret romance with another woman's husband and you have been doing?

If you have no regard for decency and sportsmanship, you should think you would have some for your own physical and mental health. And you are certainly not going to be healthy either physically or mentally as long as you allow this affair to go on.

Why do you feel you have to choose between living "decently and respectably" and death? What is there to prevent you from living decently and respectably? Do you want to admit even to yourself that you haven't the will power and strength of character to do so? You say you forget everything when you hear this man's voice or see him. Why not overcome that difficulty by refusing to do either?

There is no reason in the world why you cannot be a happy girl if you will only take yourself in hand, send this philandering married man packing and begin living as a decent girl should. Once you make the decision to do this, I think you will find your health will begin to improve very soon.

ANCIENT MAGIC

Water into which glowing coals had been plunged in ancient magic was considered the best precaution against the evil eye.

Colorful Ensemble

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

Navy and mauve combination

THERE SHOULD be plenty of wear, and handsome wear at that, for this interesting and colorful navy and mauve ensemble. The jacket is of iridescent shantung in mauve, with its scarf cut in one with the body of the jacket. The dress is of navy silk shantung dotted in mauve, a nice color scheme. The dress has a wide V neckline and short set-in sleeves with natural shoulders. The skirt is fully pleated and worn over a taffeta slip to give it body.

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Today's Hint for Good Manners

"Your conversation," as has been wisely said, "is your account of yourself." Watch it carefully and appraisingly. Stop, look, listen, for fear that your conversation tells about you.

The wedding cake . . . the "dream cake"

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Will you please tell me what is the saying about dreaming on a piece of wedding cake? I've heard several people refer to this, and I'm not sure what they mean. Will you please explain the whole procedure of the service?

Kay

The wedding cake is the dark fruit cake . . . sometimes referred to as the "dream cake" sometimes as the "groom's cake" . . . . which guests are given as mementoes to take home and "dream on". A pretty, romantic idea! In olden times it was a real luxury, a very attractive and festive luxury . . . and that's why the dark fruit cage cut to fit into small white boxes, rectangular, square or heart-shaped; the pieces dropped in the box, then in tin foil; the boxes usually monogrammed in silver, with the last two initials of the bride and groom; then the boxes tied with narrow white satin ribbons . . . sometimes with a few waxed orange blossoms added to the ribbon bows. Those gala little boxes are placed on a table near the entrance, and each guest takes one to "dream on". Or you can buy the little boxes, the pieces of dark fruit cake to fit them, wrap the pieces in waxed paper, tie the boxes with narrow white satin. Or have the wedding cake placed on an ample sized table, provide small, white square napkins and have this "dream service" available for the romantic dreamer who like to take a piece of the wedding cake home with them.

(This wedding cake, the dark fruit cake, is definitely not the bride's cake, which is the dramatic and artistic cake with at least the lower layers usually made of white cake. This is the one that is cut and eaten at the wedding.)

It's always polite to answer an invitation

Dear Mrs. Beeckman

This week my husband and I have received two invitations to cocktail parties, one in honor of a friend who is sailing for abroad soon, and one with no special reason mention on the invitation. Neither invitation (one was written on the printed cocktail invitation cards that are bought and filled in, and the other was written on an informal) carried an "R.s.v.p." However, I answered both invitations, on my informals. Is this an incorrect thing to do?

E. D.

Never incorrect. . . never incorrect to reply to an invitation of any kind, even when there is a request (of any kind) for a reply. It's the polite guest, the really gracious person, who takes the thought to send her (or his) hostess a few graceful words to thank for the invitation and to say whether or not it is possible to accept it. As a hostess you, too, I'm sure, know what a comfort this is to a hostess.

Good News In Print

By ALICE ALDEN

THIS WILL BE remembered as the season of well-handled print, with something for every taste and type in every price range. Fox-Brownie is the house responsible for this most distinctive and attractive print, a delightful choice for smart afternoon wear. It is of red, white and brown pure silk, and has a slim skirt with three knife-pleated tiers and a fitted midriff below a low V neck outlined by a narrow shawl collar. The sleeves strike a happy medium between the cap and the long, full sleeve, both of which are so well represented in the current clothes picture.

Fashion Flashes

THE HIGH SCHOOL CROWD is going all out for those new sets of matched nylon sweater and socks, available in all sorts of lovely colors. There is also a matching cardigan.

NEUTRAL shades, such as beige and gray, continue to regulate. Soft sand-beige silk crepe is used for a pretty frock, the bodice with a deep plunging neckline outlined by a scant collar that tapers down to end in a cluster of roses of the dress fabric. Easy skirt with pockets in the folds.

BOOTS HAVE DASH and plenty of it this season. Brown suede dotted in white is used for a pretty dress, the bodice set off by collar and turn-back cuffs of the reverse print. The skirt looks like a pleated job but is tucked on the bias.

MANY AND VARIED are the coats that appear on nice days. A real beauty is a coat of stiff upholstery faille, very fitted through the body, with a full, flaring skirt. It closes with a row of carved jet buttons and the slanting hip pockets have tiny, bound-with-braid flaps.

SOMETHING NEW in the way of lingerie is the wrap-around slip. Scalloped French mallne lace forms the chemise neckline and outlines the very low back of a silk crepe slip that has a bias-cut bodice and a straight-cut tiered skirt that is hooked on either side.

ISN'T IT WONDERFUL to see ad after ad of nylon lingerie; we know it means quick washing, fifty drying and no ironing, a boon for busy women, and for travelers. The luxury class is a housecoat nightgown of white nylon satin with wide banding edging the sweetheart neckline, and airy cap sleeves of nylon lace. High waistline tops a very full skirt that has a wide border of the lace.

Will Plumb Deeps for Sea Serpents

By J. C. GRAHAM
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Auckland N.Z. (CP)— The ocean depths may yet yield a sea serpent to confirm the yarns spun by sailors throughout the centuries in the opinion of Dr. Anton Bruun. He is leader of the Danish Dana sea expedition which next year will attempt to plumb the greatest deeps of the world's oceans.

Dr. Bruun, who has been visiting New Zealand, dismisses many of the stories of sea serpents as deliberate stories or capable of simple explanations, but he has found that careful reading of many reports leaves something in common.

It is not yet possible to dismiss the stories as fantasy, he says, because a third of the earth's surface, representing oceandeeps of more than two miles, has not yet really been explored. How much remains to be discovered was shown with the catching of a lalimeria off the African coast in 1938.

This fish, five feet long and weighing 120 pounds had as its nearest known relative a fish that had been found in fossil remains of 70,000,000 or 80,000,000 years ago. No other fish of the species had been caught, yet it was presumably still surviving in the depths after all that time.

An eel larva over six feet long, compared with the normal eel larva of about three inches long at the age of three years, has also been caught. One could not say whether it would continue to grow in the same proportions but it might be that in deeps of greater than 500 fathoms (3,000 feet) the expedition might find eels of very considerable size. These might rise to the surface from time to time for spawning and might be seen by some sailor.

Another inhabitant of the sea which might have given rise to the sea serpent stories was the giant squid which might reach a size of 50 or 60 feet. The main enemy of this was the sperm whale, which made the squid its most important food.

look at your home
through the eyes of a stranger

Could it do with a good coat of paint and a general 'fix up'?

Strange how we are apt to notice signs of neglect in someone else's house and overlook the same things in our own. It's a costly tendency, too. For one bit of disrepair soon leads to another. Wood deteriorates when the paint wears off. A broken pane undermines the whole fence.

It pays to make your repairs promptly.

That goes for indoor improvements, too. You save money, time and material, by attending to home repairs right away — before the damage gets worse. And every improvement adds to your comfort and to your pride in your home.

If you need more money than you have on hand to pay for the necessary repairs, see your B of M manager about a low-cost loan. Save by paying cash. And save yourself trouble by paying off all repair bills at once.

Why not make a list of the repairs your house needs today? Then discuss your improvement plans with your B of M manager . . . in confidence. You'll like his helpful attitude.

Vital Decisions Made by U.N. General Assembly at Meeting

By NORMAN ALTSTEDTER
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, May 18 (CP)—Decisions which may vitally affect the United Nations' world peace were taken at the spring session of the United Nations General Assembly.

The U.N. displayed its ability to give and take in the international tug-of-war.

The session opened April 5 with forebodings of an east-west clash over the Atlantic pact which some observers believed might wreck the session's program if not the United Nations itself.

Midway through the session, Russia and the three big western powers agreed to lift the Berlin blockade. Delegates agreed the informal talks leading to the end of the 10-month stalemate could not have started except in the U.N. atmosphere.

The closing hours were marked by debates on two of the hottest issues faced by the Assembly—diplomatic links with Franco Spain and disposal of Italy's prewar Italian colonies.

The Assembly refused to ease or tighten its diplomatic boycott on Spain which it had barred in 1946 from joining the U.N. or any of its specialized agencies.

Debate Drags on

The lengthy, acrid debates dragged this Assembly—as all previous ones—over the target closing date. There were efforts underway, however, to speed future proceedings. A 14-member committee was set up to make the Assembly work more efficiently.

In voting east and west were almost always on opposite sides. There was one major exception: Both approved Israel's bid to become the U.N.'s 59th member.

Other decisions made without fanfare were regarded by many delegates as being of prehier importance in the U.N.'s role as world peace agency.

Among these were:

1. Suggestion that the five big powers abolish the veto on 30-odd types of procedure.

2. A plan under which each member would name five leaders to be available to act on U.N. panels of conciliation and mediation.

3. Secretary-General Trygve Lie's proposal to set up a 14-country committee to study his plans for forming a U.N. guard of 18,000 men to protect U.N. missions abroad.

Attacked Pact

Gromyko, a dark, dour diplomat, was brought face to face during the Assembly opening at Flushing Meadows with most of the foreign ministers who signed the pact the previous day in Washington.

The U.N. had seldom seen such an array of top western leaders. They included U. B. Pearson, Canada's External Affairs Minister; Foreign Secretary Ernest Bevin of Britain; Dean Acheson, United States Secretary of State; and Robert Schuman, France's Foreign Minister.

Hector McNeil, Britain's Minister of State, made the west's major reply to Gromyko.

The Atlantic pact, McNeil said, was purely a defensive arrangement within the U.N. charter which the west was forced to make in view of Russia's expansionist policy.

Some western delegates expressed the belief Soviet pressure in the Far East would increase with a renewed "peace offensive" in the west.

Decided to Defer Action

The Assembly decided—in the light of a reported agreement between the Netherlands and Indonesian Republic—to defer action until the fall session.

Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canada's permanent delegate, told the Assembly that debate on the subject while the Batavia talks were going on might inflame the conflict.

The Assembly heard charges of violation of fundamental human rights in debates on these three issues:

1. Trials of Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, primate of Hungary, and 15 Protestant church leaders of Bulgaria. The Assembly approved the action taken by Britain and United States to seek remedies through the peace treaties for violations of human rights in the trials.

2. Russia's restrictions barring Soviet wives from joining their husbands outside Russia. The Assembly condemned Russia for violating human rights in this connection.

3. Treatment of Indians in South Africa—The Assembly approved a French-Mexican plan calling for a round-table conference to settle the quarrel.

Another set of rights and freedoms—for new correspondents was approved by the Assembly in the form of a proposed convention on the international transmission of news and the right of correction. The convention was not expected to go into effect at least until next year after the Assembly completes a companion treaty on freedom of information.

Canterbury Gospels Completed at Last

The keeper of the manuscripts W. G. Urry, discovered the sheet in Anglo-Saxon script while cataloguing miscellaneous manuscripts saved when Canterbury Cathedral library was destroyed by a bomb in 1942.

The "Canterbury Gospels" are traditionally believed to have been presented by Pope Gregory the Great to Saint Augustine and brought by Saint Augustine to Britain.

They were presented to Corpus Christie College, Cambridge, after the dissolution of the monasteries.

When Dr. Geoffrey Fisher took the oath on them on his enthrone ment as Archbishop of Canterbury in 1945, it was the first time that the gospels had been used for the purpose for 370 years.

Another find was a parish record dater 1603, signed by John Marlowe, father of the Canterbury poet, Christopher Marlowe. John Marlowe, the records show was a member of the Canterbury Company of Archers who went to fight the Spanish Armada.

A third discovery was a copy of the "Regula Canonicorum" also in Anglo-Saxon) by Chrodegang of Metz, which lays down rules for cathedral canons. According to this, the senior canons

Sea-Going Editor Has No Easy Job

Montreal (CP)—Editors ashore who think publishing a paper has its ups-and-downs should try turning one out aboard a ship pitching and tossing in a North Atlantic briefer, says Allan Williams, editor of the Ocean Times.

Williams, a middle-aged Liverpool native (publishes the eight page daily when he can get enough newsprint) abroad the Cunard White Star liner Ascania. He proudly makes the claim that the Times has appeared daily for 32 years when the liner is at sea, except for the war years.

Editorial room of the Ocean Times is a 10 ft square cabin on the Ascania's port side. Here Editor Williams sets his type and prints the daily, then distributes it among the passengers. Williams has the biggest headaches during the winter season on the Atlantic.

"It's pretty hard trying to get a newspaper out when you can't stand up and haven't the room to get seasick," he said.

There is no charge for the Times but it is a handsome revenue maker, heavily stocked with ads from British firms during publication on the eastbound voyage and with Canadian ads the other way.

Canada is Alluring To Former Prisoners

Lethbridge, Alta (CP)— Former German prisoners of war, although kept under constant guard while held captive in Canada, studied and learned enough about the Canadian way of life to still cherish hopes of returning to this country.

Ever since the German prisoners were evacuated to England for subsequent return to their native land two or three years ago, scores of those once held in the large prisoner-of-war camp here have written to district newspapers expressing a keen desire to return to Canada.

Many of the writers of these letters request assistance in some form or other that will enable them to return here. All are of the opinion that Canada is a great country.

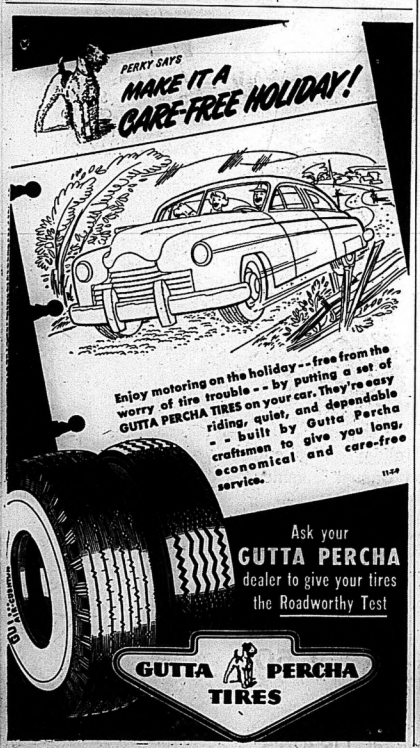
"My mind has grown up in the opinion that Canada is a country of real freedom," he writes. "Freedom which we never knew in Europe for which millions of people are longing for."

Schiborr, who claims to be 26 years old, in good health and experienced in farm work, writes in clear English that he has been living for two years to get permission to emigrate to Canada but that up to the present, he has been unsuccessful.



"The only way to get it," he says, "is if anyone in Canada should apply for my person."

Inquest Says Child Died by Accident

Las Vegas, Nev., May 18 (AP) —A coroner's jury decided yesterday baby Carolyn Dolores Allen died accidentally "the result of a bullet fired from a pistol in the hands of her father." Carl Charles Dean Allen, 23-year-old military policeman at the Las Vegas air force base, shot his 10-months old daughter through the head last Saturday as she lay in her mother's arms. He said he was sitting on the bed lading his 45 calibre automatic when it went off.

EX-AERIALIST DIES

Chicago, May 18 — (AP) — Marie Alvina Amy Lebeau, 75, for 25 years an aerialist with Ringling Brothers — Barnum and Bailey Circus, died yesterday. Miss Lebeau retired from the circus 30 years ago and later worked as a department store matron.

Proposal to Lift Representation To Spain Fails

By NORMAN ALTENSTEIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York, May 13 — (CP) — The United Nations' boycott on top diplomatic representation in Franco Spain remained in force today.

The U. N. General Assembly lost 26 to 15 Monday night in two of returning envoys with-drawn from Madrid in 1946 as a gesture of disapproval against Generalissimo Franco.

But the move failed because it was four votes short of the two-thirds majority needed for Assembly approval.

Sixteen countries — including Canada, Britain, the United States and France — abstained from voting although British and United States delegates spoke strongly against the Franco regime.

At the same time the assembly rejected by a 40-8 vote a Russian — bloc proposal to stop military and economic transfers on Spain.

Russian Moe Plan Slapped Down

Early today another Polish resolution — a crib-breaking "shock" resettlement and repatriation proclamation of the International Refugee Organization — was slapped down 31 to 6 (Russian bloc).

Gen. A. G. L. McNaughton, Canada's permanent delegate, rejected as "untrue" Russia's old charges that displaced persons now in Canada are being exploited.

Assembly delegates were scheduled to be back at work at 11 a. m. to tackle the final problem of their six - week spring session. U. N. officials said it was possible they might wind up the session tonight with a decision on a controversial proposal to split control of Italy's former colonies among four countries — Britain, France, Italy and Ethiopia.

Defeat of the proposal on Spain sponsored by Bolivia, Brazil, Colombia and Peru, leaves the status of the U. N. diplomatic boycott of the Franco regime just where it was. In 1946 the assembly adopted resolutions banning Spain from membership in the U. N. and recommending that member countries withdraw ambassadors and ministers from Madrid, leaving in their place letter officials.

Argentina and several other countries have since sent back their ambassadors despite the U. N. ruling.

The former Mississippi River barge-hand, who'll be 39 years old in three weeks, stopped off here yesterday and gave $25,000 to City Hospital, where he was a charity patient 60 years ago.

Moundsville, W. Va. — Two High School teams were playing an exhibition game for the boys in grey at the State Penitentiary.

Nine balls were fouled back into the crowd. Not one was returned. But it certainly wasn't the prisoners' fault.

They were away off behind left field, far from temptation of any kind. The athletes felt that some of the "true" spectators should have come out in the left field bleachers, too.

Thereby reclamation bureau officials said Monday, hangs the tale of what happened Sunday to the world's largest power plant, on the Colorado River at the base of Hoover Dam.

The cat, proving again that old adage, curiosity, etc., climbed atop a transformer bank and short-circuited 16,500 volts.

It will take a week to repair the damage, officials said. Las Vegas, Boulder, much of Clark County, Lincoln County and Kingman, Ariz., were without power for an hour.

GREEK FOUND DEAD NOTE IS DISCOVERED

Athens, May 13 (Reuters)—The body of Telemachos Zapirides, 38-year-old printer, from Janenna, was found Sunday night at the foot of a cliff. A note found in his pocket said: "I cannot stand Greece's defeat by the Turkish soccer team."

DEAD PATIENT "SHOCKED" BACK TO LIFE

Reid C. Lewis, of Santa Monica, Calif., shown in his hospital bed today, had good reason to smile over his broken rib. Reid got the "break" of his life when his doctor deliberately broke one of his ribs after his heart stopped during a minor operation, and he was declared dead for 2 seconds and 12 minutes. The doctor used a Boy Scout trick of rib-breaking "shock" treatment to restore Reid's breathing and heart action. Reid smilingly attests to the fact that it worked.—Central Press Canadian.

Budapest, May 13 (AP)—Hungary's Communist-led government reported today that five of the country's 11 Roman Catholic bishops took part in parliamentary elections Sunday.

The Communist party claimed a "sweeping" mandate of 95.6 per cent for its policies in the elections, first since 1947.

The government took pains at the same time to give the widest possible publicity to pictures purporting to show bishops, priests and nuns voting for the government and to official forecasts of a "reconciliation" with the church.

Joseph Cardinal Mindszenty, primate of Hungary, was jailed for life last February in treason trial that was bitterly condemned by the Vatican.

The Communist party newspaper, Szabad Nep, echoing similar official statements last night, said merely that "now comes the possibility of a settlement of the Roman Catholic question."

(Some Hungarian bishops had been reported adopting an uncompromising position of Cardinal Mindszenty against government demands for church "cooperation.")

Reported Vote

The interior ministry said complete figures for the election showed 5,230,723 voters cast single-ticket ballots.

It said 5,006,556 or 95.6 per cent voted for candidates lists prepared by the Communist-dominated People's Front of five parties. The total who voted against the list by marking a circle at the bottom of the ballot was said to be 153,962 or 2.9 per cent. Invalid ballots numbered 70,255 or 1.5 per cent.

No registration figures were announced and it was not known how many persons stayed away at home.

The returns indicated seats in the new parliament will total about 380 instead of the 411 seated in 1947. The final results, including the count of "remainder" votes under proportional representations will not be known until Wednesday.

FISHERMAN GETS DUCKED

Bluevale, Ont., May 18 (CP)—A seven - foot wall of water rushed down the bed of the Maitland River here Sunday when two gates of the mill dam broke loose, sweeping an unsuspecting angler 200 feet downstream and washing him ashore, bruised but alive, on a small recky island. The angler's identity was not known, with the exception that he was a visitor from Toronto who had stopped in the village with the hope of getting some fish.

No Sign of Bear Boy Said Chased Him up Tree

Toronto, May 18 — (CP) — Seven - year - old Albert Taylor said Monday a black bear chased him up a tree but neither police nor the suburban Scarboro dog-catcher have been able to find any trace of it.

Albert said he was taking a shortcut home from nearby Highland Creek school when the bear which was sniffing at a clump of leaves rose on its hind legs and chased him until he clambered up a tree. He said he frightened the animal away by dropping a pebble on its head.

Joseph Baron, who tramped for several hours through the area said he could find no signs of bear habitation or markings.

"I knew it was a bear because I saw one before," Albert said. "He was black and three feet high."

IDENTIFIED BY RIBBONS

Liverpool, England (CP) —Red and white ribbons were worn by Eric Hall, 41-year-old Doris Holt to identify herself to her two uncles when she arrived at Liverpool recently after 39 years in Canada.

O. J. C. Secretary Appeals Against Raised Assessment

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—Palmer Wright, secretary of the Ontario Jockey Club's Woodbine track in Toronto, told the Ontario Municipal Board Tuesday that if the city's assessment was increased from $577,308 to $1,070,133 the track would fold.

Mr. Wright said the cost of maintaining a horse had doubled since the 1939 figure of $1 daily and that wages for a boy to look after the horse had increased from $30 to $40 weekly. Fees to trainers and jockeys had also been raised.

This was reflected in a demand by the Horsemen's Association that purses be increased. The minimum purse of $1,100 had been upped to $1,350.

Eisler May be Charged With 'Departing Court'

Washington, May 18 (AP)—Officials said yesterday a new link may be added to the chain of charges facing Communist Gerhart Eisler if and when he is extradited from England: "Departing the court."

The 52-year-old Eisler, alleged former No. 1 Communist in the United States, skipped the country May 8 as a stowaway aboard the Polish liner Batory. He was taken off the Batory by Scotland Yard men when the ship touched England.

Assistant United States District Attorney William Hitz said Eisler violated the terms of his $25,000 bail and indicated the new prosecution of Eisler as a fugitive.

"Departing the court" means leaving the jurisdiction of the court which sentenced the defendant, Hitz explained.

Justice Department officials said privately that many circumstances of the Eisler case are "unique". These include the fact that Eisler is a German National — he never was an United States citizen—and was seized aboard a Polish ship in British waters by Scotland Yard men by end of his flight from the United States. He was headed for Gdynia, Poland, and eventually Germany.

Separated by War In Russia, to Wed Soon in Canada

St. Thomas, May 18 (CP)— A Polish couple who parted in Russia in 1943 and were reunited in London, Ont., last Sunday night will be married here soon.

Tekla Muzyn, 25, and Joe Protrowski, 28, were separated when Russia enlered Poland in 1943. Joe served with the British 8th Army in Italy and at the end of the war came to Canada as a farm laborer. Tekla went to England and worked in a hospital until Joe finished his two-year - probation term and saved enough money to bring her to Canada.

The couple now are working on a nearby farm. They will be married by Father Kociewski of London, Ont., who was chaplain of Joe's regiment.

MACHINE + SKILL = ACCURACY

Grinding ophthalmic lenses to designated curves represents one of the many important operations in the Belleville plant of American Optical Company Canada Limited. For it is only by exercising care and attention over every manufacturing step that AO lenses have acquired their unimpeachable reputation with Canada's professional men.

Esteemed for their exceptionally fine quality and widely prescribed by Optometrists and Ophthalmologists, basic accuracy is made possible by the use of modern, multiple unit machines such as the one shown above. But this accuracy is only assured through the skill imparted by lens technicians who take pride in the vital role they play in providing efficient eyesight for modern living.

Through these versatile machines and the skilled operators who tend them, perfect lenses that compensate for imperfect human vision are produced. Lenses that are a tribute to the skill and care of the operators who produce them.

Serving the cause of better vision . . . providing comfort and happiness to the visually handicapped . . . AO people perform tasks that are a credit to the community.

Some Sleep-Bringers For Bedtime Reading

By GRACE LUCKHART

In The Vancouver Daily Province

I think our most important choice of reading is our bedtime stories. Of course if you do a lot of strenuous physical work during the day you don't need to read yourself to sleep. I never heard of a farmer needing any help with the shut-eye.

But people whose work is entirely on the mental side, usually need something to calm them down and get them in the mood for dreams. I have a very brilliant friend, an American, whose bedtime story is usually the Constitution of the United States. This, evidently, has everything.

Another friend goes to sleep reading a history of the Highland clans. She can almost hear the lilt of the bagpipes and smell the heather in the glens. No longer does she have to worry about the feuds between the Macleods and the Macdonalds.

A young man I know likes to read a book on rope knots, their origin and how to tie them. He can lose himself completely in this, to him, fascinating study.

Another friend, an editorial writer, goes to sleep reading J. M. Keynes' book on "Money." He says it has put him to sleep, times without number.

When we were children, we were not allowed to read in bed—not with a coal oil lamp sitting on the table. Reading was discouraged, anyhow. It had its place, usually in the leisure hours of Sunday, not in the busy days of the week. I used to plan what I would read in bed, once I had some kind of light that had no danger of smoking connected with it. Edison himself was not more excited with the first electric light than I was.

Then and there I decided I would read in bed for the rest of my life. I would likewise open my window, even though the night air might give me galloping consumption. After all, you had to live before you died!

For a time I have tried reading mystery stories, but if they are any good they don't put me to sleep. Even the titles are enough to keep one awake. And they steadily get worse—or better. Witness the latest one with the title: "Til Cut Your Throat Again, Kathleen," or "I can't sleep on that! Even the Constitution of the United States would be an improvement.

I remember one time when Bill was in his teens, my being so pleased to find Tolstoy's Anna Karenna beside his bed every morning. He had never bothered much about fiction. I tactfully said nothing until I found the second volume added to the first.

Then I had to congratulate him on his choice of literature. But he calmly informed me that his bed, which was of the let-down variety in our apartment was the right thickness to put under the front corner. Later he found putting the two volumes made the bed "set" even better.

At the moment I am reading Jane Austen's "Pride and Prejudice" for the umpteenth time, and enjoying it more than ever. Even me, it is the best novel ever written. Considering it was completed when Jane was only 21, you marvel at her industry. It would have to be written entirely in longhand, perhaps with a quill pen, as it was written between October, 1796 and August, 1797, but it was actually 16 years later before a publisher could be bothered with it.

This omission must be a great encouragement to every author who has trouble in getting his book published. And doesn't it make you wonder how many more might-have-been classics are lying around desks and attics, unpublished and unknown?

It also makes you wonder how publishers could have been so completely blind when the best Intellects have been Jane Austen's admirers—Intellects such as Coleridge, Tennyson, Macaulay, Scott, Sydney Smith, Disraeli—and Lockhart!

Wasaga Beach, May 18 (CP)—Fire swept the Aberhart boat livery and a newly finished apartment upstairs here Tuesday and threatened a number of nearby wooden buildings before being brought under control. Wasaga Beach is a summer resort 65 miles north-west of Toronto.

Two hundred volunteers and the Georgian Bay resort's 10-man volunteer fire department battled the blaze in the boathouse which was next to a building in which were stored several hundred gallons of gasoline.

The fire broke out at 12:30 p.m. and was brought under control by 1:30 o'clock. Origin of the blaze which did an estimated $20,000 damage, was undetermined.

Volunteers were able to save 25 small boats stored in the livery before flames engulfed the building, and after that concentrated on saving nearby houses. Several apartment buildings were in the path of the fire and a drug store and pool shop nearby were also threatened.

Mike Eberhardt son of the owner of the livery Charles Eberhardt planned to move into the apartment above the livery and it had been newly furnished recently. Contents of the apartment were a total loss.

The livery, built a year ago was valued at $15,000.

Rail Workers To Seek Shorter Week, Bigger Pay

Montreal, May 18. (CP)— A group of International Railway Brotherhoods representing 100,000 workers Tuesday announced it will seek the 40-hour week and higher basic wage rates this Summer.

A statement from 15 Brotherhoods affiliated with the American Federation of Labor was the second announcement in two days making public intentions of seeking revisions of the 10-months-old agreement with the railroads.

The Canadian Brotherhood of Railway Employees (C.C.L.), through W. J. Smith, general secretary of its system adjustment board, made public Monday its intention of seeking a 30-percent wage increase and the 40-hour week, among other things. The C.B.R.E. has 23,000 members.

More than 150,000 rail workers in Canada, some non-union members, have granted a 17-cent wage boost last July bringing average wages to $1.09 an hour. Under last July's agreement the work week was left at 48 hours in nearly all railway branches except the locomotive shops where a 44-hour week is in force.

Tuesday's announcement came from Frank Hall, chairman of the International Brotherhood's general conference committee which has held a two-day meeting. He said the unions will seek the same take-home pay for 40 hours as now is received from the 48-hour week.

"The Unions," he said, "represent employees who are paid by the hour, day or month. Train-service employees who are paid on a mileage basis are represented by four other international unions and are not affected by these demands."

He said basic pay rates for the 15 unions involved in the new demands run from 75 cents to $1.50 an hour.

County Average Net on Sweet Corn Varies

While provincial average receipts per acre on corn produced on farms in four Ontario counties, was actually the same—$50.06—individual county averages varied greatly, the Farm Economics Branch, Ontario Department of Agriculture finds.

A summarized report on costs of producing sweet corn grown for canning purposes, has just been released. The records were obtained in Essex, Elgin, Norfolk and Prince Edward Counties from co-operating members of the Ontario Vegetable Growers' Marketing Board.

Costs of seed, fertilizer and hired help were computed from records available. Machinery, tractor and horse costs, took into consideration depreciation and upkeep. One hundred and forty-six growers supplied records for the summary.

Based on 1948 Crop

The figures are based on 1948 crop and counties involved are Ontario's main sweet corn-producing areas. A wide variation, ranging from a net return of $13.15 per acre down to a loss of $14.53 per acre are shown. In the case of the "net loss per acre" there was a serious crop failure.

Dr. H. L. Patterson is Director of the Farm Economics Branch of the Ontario Department of Agriculture and he explains that the "receipts" recorded do not include a value for silage or other feed obtained from the crop.

Essex County figures are: Receipts per acre delivered to canning factory, $50.04; for two farms with high net returns $108.63; two farms with a low net $14.18. Total costs per acre are given at $37.15 and net returns for the whole crop $104.12.

Elgin County: Receipts per acre, $54.79; costs per acre, $51.66; net per acre, $3.11 and net returns for whole crop $23.14.

Norfolk County: Receipts per acre, $41.73; costs per acre, $56.26; net per acre a loss of $14.53 and net returns for whole crop a loss of $134.09. This was due to a crop failure.

Prince Edward County: Receipts per acre 59.95; costs per acre $41.35; net returns per acre $11.62. Net return for whole crop $78.49.

Provincial average for all four counties was $50.04.

Costs Per Acre

Costs per acre are given as follows:

Essex: 26.86 and provincial average for 146 farms $33.12.

There was a variation in taxes for the four counties, and also in cost of seed used. In Essex taxes averaged 66 cents per acre; interest $3.30 and rent $3.01. Seed was free.

Elgin: taxes $1.05; rent 59 cents and seed $1.66.

Norfolk: taxes $1.22; rent 37 cents and seed $2.47.

French Canadian Group of 57 On Way to New Homes in Lumber Town of Coppell

Montreal, May 18 (CP)—Led by 48-year-old Antoine Turbides, a group of six French Canadian families arrived here Tuesday night enroute to new homes in the small lumber town of Coppell, Que., where they have been promised "land of their own" by the Ontario government.

The group, with a total of 57 persons, including 27 adults and children, left homesteads at Lac-Au-Brochet, 51 miles north of Mont Joli in Matapedia County, seeking to higher wages and furnished homes promised to them by the Ontario government.

The move to the little lumber centre near Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., after long negotiations by parish priest at Coppell, urged the families to make the transfer.

Turbides, leader of the band, said in an interview here that chief advantages of the French settlement were lower taxation, being able to own their own land and higher wages.

Turbides, who has lived at Lac-Au-Saumon for 18 years, claims that the Ontario government has offered each family a lot of 75 acres at $38 or $39 per lot.

But some of the settlers were uncertain whether they would stay at Coppell permanently expressing a desire "to see for ourselves if things are better there."

Many of the men will return to work at the five lumber companies in the vicinity. Turbides said he will do farm work until winter lumber operations resume at the Upper Canada Lumber Company where he worked last year.

The band appeared tired and anxious to arrive at their homes. Children ranging from three-months-old babies to youths of 14, accompanied the party. Their belongings were stacked into every available nook to railroad cars.

Lengthy Verdict Given by Jury In Boy's Death

The adjourned inquest looking into the death of Reginald Genereaux, nine-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Ed. Genereaux, Trent Road, was held at the county court room yesterday when the late Coroner Dr. R. Potter.

Twelve witnesses were called by Assistant Crown Attorney S. Gordon Robertson to give evidence regarding the accident on April 30th which resulted in the death of the boy on May 2nd.

The verdict given by the Coroner's jury was as follows:

"We, the jury empanelled to enquire into the death of Reginald Genereaux find that he died on May 2, 1949 from injuries received after being struck by a car driven by Derek Broadbent on April 30, 1949, immediate cause of death was cerebral hemorrhage.

"We would say a contributing factor in the accident was the poor condition of the brakes on the car driven by Derek Broadbent and also the poor vision on the left side of the front door due to the ventilator being covered with cardboard and tar paper. We feel, however, there would have been an accident regardless of the discrepancies in the condition of the car as mentioned."

The Genereaux boy was injured when he was struck by the Broadbent car as he crossed the highway in front of his home after alighting from a Belleville-Trenton bus.

E. D. Cotterell, 68, Dies Suddenly

Vancouver, May 18 (CP)— Edward Darlington Cotterell, 68, retired vice-president of the Canadian Pacific Railway's eastern lines, died suddenly yesterday in the Vancouver Club.

Mr. Cotterell joined the company in Montreal as a telegraph messenger at the age of 16.

In 1913 he became general superintendent of Canadian Pacific Railway's Manitoba division; headed divisions in Saskatchewan and Alberta, and went back to Toronto as assistant vice-president to H. J. Humphrey.

He moved to the coast on his retirement in 1947.

Surviving are his widow and two daughters, Elizabeth and Mrs G. E. Morris of Vancouver.

56-Man Field Will Contest Nfld. Election

St. John's, Nfld., May 18 (CP)—Newfoundlanders today had a 56-man field from which to choose a government May 27. It will be their first provincial election.

Magistrate Frederick Alderdice, Chief Electoral Officer, said at close of nominations Yesterday that Liberals and Progressive Conservatives have named candidates for each of the thirty-two districts voting May 27. The C.C.F. is not entering the contest.

Two independent candidates also filed nomination papers. They are confederation critic Peter Cashin, contesting Ferryland district south of here; and Lewis Penwell, paper-mill worker, who will run in the west coast district of Humber.

The 25th district, Labrador, has deferred its election to July 6 on account of weather conditions. There are three dual constituencies, St. John's East, St. John's West and Harbor Main-Bell Island.

Premier Joseph Smallwood, leader of the Liberal party, opposes Progressive Conservative James M. Way in the fishing - farming district of Bonavista North.

Progressive Conservative leader Marry Mews will contest his hometown district of St. John's West with party official Michael Harrington as running-mate. Opposing them are Oliver Vardy and James Spratt, both of whom, like Mr. Mews, are city councillors.

Robbed at Dice Clothes Taken, Man Complains

Toronto, May 18 (CP)—An Englishman who came to Canada a few months ago reported to police Tuesday night that he was robbed of his money, stripped of his clothes and assaulted by a group of men and women he had joined for a dice game.

Harris Kennedy, 40, told police he had met the pair in a hotel and they invited him to a house for a game. Several others joined the game and Kennedy lost all his money. The players then rolled the dice for his suit.

When they removed his clothes, $6 was found in the toe of his sock. Kennedy said they then beat him and put him out of the house after giving him an old suit of clothes.

Ontario Hydro Protests Clause In Election Act

Ottawa, May 18 (CP)— Jules Castonguay, chief electoral officer, said today consideration is being given to a brief of the Ontario Hydro-Electric Power Commission protesting distranchisement of some hydro workers in the federal general election.

The workers, employed in the constituency of Renfrew North, had been ruled ineligible to vote under a clause of the election act which says that temporary workers on government projects outside their home constituency may not vote in the districts where they are employed.

Some 2,000 workers are employed on hydroprojects in Renfrew North. However, many of these are eligible to vote in any case, since their domiciles are in the riding.

COLDWELL SAYS PC HEAD COURTING QUEBEC PREMIER

C.C.F. Leader Claims P.C. Party Will Lose Ground in June 27 Election

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Moncton, N.B., May 18 (CP) — C.C.F. Leader M. J. Coldwell in a speech at Moncton Tuesday night, declared the Progressive Conservative party has been "courting" Premier Duplessis, of Quebec, but nevertheless will lose ground in the June 27 federal election.

It was the second speech of his national tour and the second province in which he has spoken. He began the trip Monday in Summerside, P.E.I., and today he heads into Nova Scotia with an address at Springhill.

"... I believe it has been perfectly obvious that Mr. Drew has been courting Mr. Duplessis and his friends in Quebec. You will remembered the Dominion-Provincial conference ... would recall "the association between Mr. Drew and Mr. Duplessis."

"We are going to make substantial gains, but we don't know whether we will make large enough gains to form a government," he said. "However, whether we form the governing or official opposition, we will be in a much better position to give the people of Canada a better deal."

Critical Letter

Mr. Coldwell criticized Liberal transportation policies and said Canada's country needs a new transportation policy.

"Without efficient railways there could be no prosperity in Canada and unless the railways were efficiently and had satisfied workers there would be "economic chaos."

Much could be done to remove the discriminations resulting from the freight-rate structure without replacing the railway in an uneconomic position.

Mr. Coldwell said that neither the Liberals nor the Progressive Conservatives "were at all concerned about the freight-rate issue until the C.C.F. moved an amendment in parliament which put them on the spot."

But the Liberal party had lined up solidly against the amendment and in favor of what amounted to continuation of the "discriminations and its worsening through a flat percentage increase in rates."

Mr. Coldwell said the C.C.F. platform calls for integration, where possible, of rail, road, water and air services so that each service would be used most effectively in Canada's economy.

No Intention To Replace Merlin Engines in Planes

Windsor, May 18 (CP)— G. R. McGregor, president of Trans-Canada Air Lines, said Tuesday night the line has no intention of replacing its Rolls-Royce Merlin engines.

Mr. McGregor, commenting on controversy concerning the performance of North Star aircraft, said the line is "exceedingly happy" at lack of trouble with the Merlin engines which power the North Stars.

Interviewed while en route to make an address at nearby Kingsville, Mr. McGregor said pilots often "feather" their propellers when atmospheric or other conditions affected an engine but in the case of the North Star, ... this was no cause for concern because the plane could "operate very well" on three or two of the remaining engines. The percentage of "featherings" in T.C.A. planes was low in comparison with planes of other air lines, he said.

ONE OF TRIPLETS DIES

Kingston, May 18 (AP)— A one-pound-15-ounce boy, one of triplets born to a 15-year-old mother, died today about eight hours after birth.

"He was just too tiny, I guess," said a hospital attendant.

The other two infants—both girls—were reported doing well, as was the teen-age mother, Mrs. Jean Williams, of Brooklyn.

GENEROSITY PLUS

Halifax, England — (CP) — Middle-aged Minnie Grayson paid 2s. 6d. (50 cents) to guess the length of a ball of wool. She won the prize—a cottage, but said: "I don't want the cottage. Sell it and give the money to moral welfare work."

F.D.R. Jr. Elected To U.S. Congress

New York, May 18 (AP)— Franklin D. Roosevelt, Jr., on Monday won a seat in the United States Congress in a triumphant battle with Tammany Hall which his father fought early in his political career 35 years ago.

The lanky, handsome young scion of one of the United States' famous political families was the first of the late president's five children to run for office.

He piled up such a commanding lead in the Democratic primary district special election that his democratic foe conceded defeat an hour after the polls closed.

Roosevelt, running on the Liberal and "four freedoms" parties' tickets after Tammany denied him the Democratic nomination, garnered 41,126 votes in the 20th district's 179 voting districts.

Benjamin M. Shalleck, who got the Tammany nomination, received 24,352 votes.

William R. McIntyre, Republican, received 5,000. Louis Manfredo Rubinstein, American Labor, trailed with 3,343.

The hitherto fought contest which kept Manhattan's west side in an uproar for a month, was for the seat of the late Sol Bloom, veteran Democrat, who won 19 successive terms in Congress.

North Bay, May 18 (CP) Auxiliary train crews from here worked feverishly today to clear the main line of the Ontario Northland Railway, blocked by the derailment of a locomotive and 21 freight cars.

No one was injured when the huge locomotive jumped the tracks and hauled all but 14 of the 35 freight cars out with it last night at Bushnell, 49 miles north of here.

O. N. R. officials reported no serious damage would result from the derailment. All cars left the rails and the engine slid off the tracks in an upright position. The locomotive travelled several hundred feet after leaving the rails but did not overturn and the tender remained in the cab.

Railway officials will investigate the cause of the derailment which occurred when the train was pulling north toward Englehart with goods for northern centres. Twelve of the derailed cars were empty.

Two passenger trains were delayed early today but passengers continued their trip by bus to Temagami and to North Bay.

SPEAKS UP FOR JURISTS

London (CP) — Judges' salaries, under review for some time, should be increased, says Attorney-General Sir Hartley Shawcross. At a meeting he said salaries paid now "inadequately reflect judges' very high constitutional importance."

How Christian Science Heals

A minister, long on leave from his charge because of illness, procured a copy of "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures"

by Mary Baker Eddy

After reading the first sentence of the first chapter he thought: "Whoever wrote this had been very close to God."

He read on for several hours with such a sense of unfolding understanding as he had not known before, then realized that he was well. The healing was complete and permanent.

The complete explanation of Christian Science and its healing work is given in "Science and Health."

DREW STRESSES IMPORTANCE OF DEVELOPMENT

Five-Point Program Outlined by P.C. Leader Speaking in Maritimes

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Truro, N.S., May 18 (CP) Possibilities of industrial development of the Maritime Provinces were stressed yesterday by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, as he continued his federal election campaign tour.

Mr. Drew, who spoke today in Fredericton and St. Stephen, N.B., addressed meetings here and in Springhill and Amherst, N.S.

At all three, he stressed that there are great opportunities for the advancement of every part of the Maritimes. Transportation was one of the main problems facing the area but it could be solved and would be solved under a Progressive Conservative government, Mr. Drew said in his speeches included:

1. The Progressive Conservative party is opposed to amalgamation of Canada's two railways.

2. Parliament should accept responsibility for ironing out the freight rates issue.

3. His party advocates assistance to "veterans on the widest possible scale."

4. The CBC has become a propaganda agency of the government.

5. The Progressive Conservative platform against Communists does not call for the establishment of concentration camps.

Decentralization Advocated

Mr. Drew said his party's platform advocated decentralization of industry, improvement of transportation and reclamation of the marshlands of Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

Railway lines in the Maritimes should be realigned, he said; and some of them should be double tracked. A canal should be constructed through the isthmus of Chignecto which connects Nova Scotia and New Brunswick.

In his Truro speech Mr. Drew said that his party advocates assistance to veterans on the widest possible basis. Since the party's candidates were mostly veterans he was sure that they would look after the needs of returned men.

The Progressive Conservative party would amend the criminal code so that "agents of the Kremlin" in Canada could be dealt with in the courts.

CONSTITUTION RATIFIED

Stuttgart, Germany, May 18 (AP)—Wuerttemberg-Baden today ratified west Germany's new constitution today by a vote of 62 to 10, with only the Communists opposing. It was the first state parliament to ratify.

Ten other west German states are scheduled to vote on the constitution this week. If two thirds of them approve it can be proclaimed in effect next Monday. Then, German and Allied officials hope, the new west German government for west Germany can be set up by mid-July.

LIBERAL PARTY'S PLATFORM TO BE GIVEN THURSDAY

Prime Minister Will Deliver Keynote Speech of Campaign at Moncton

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Summerside, P.E.I., May 18. (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent left Prince Edward Island today with an early draft of a keynote speech at Moncton, N.B., in which he will bare the Liberal Party's platform for the June 27 election.

He has given no hint in his week in the Maritimes of any new major steps the government has in mind. But if there are any they would logically be saved for the keynote speech.

Mr. St. Laurent speaks in Truro and Amherst, N.S., today after a frank appeal to the 100,000 people of P.E.I. here Tuesday night for their votes and a reminder that "Conservative" of prosperity have coincided with Liberal rule" at Ottawa.

He told a capacity theatre audience he would not say there are not trade problems or that to Canada's day's prosperity can continue indefinitely but he knows of no one more able to find any available foreign outlets than Trade Minister Howe.

He spoke at Rustico - a French Canadian village which went Progressive Conservative in 1940 and said he had been informed the harbor needed attention. He promised consideration but made no promises.

Figures Quoted

Here he quoted figures to show that while Canada's population has increased 16 per cent since 1939 her workers have increased 40 per cent and her production 75 per cent.

Canadians were saving twice as much after taxes as in 1939. Savings in banks were up 140 per cent and life insurance firms 85 per cent.

"This is a pretty satisfactory situation," the Prime Minister said, "and it all happened while we were in power."

But it was more than coincidence that prosperity had always occurred while Liberals were in power, he said. Only at points that bad times have coincided with Tory rule "and even if that is only coincidence why not play safe?"

We have tried to serve Canada well and we have had some success in promoting the interests of the majority of the people and we have always won experience which will be to the profit of Canada."

MARMORA

Field Service Representative Of C. of C. Heard

Interesting facts and figures with respect to the governing body and the local branches of the Canadian Chamber of Commerce were forthcoming in an able address given by J. M. Smith, Field Service representative of that organization to the Marmora District Chamber of Commerce at their monthly dinner meeting in the Royal Hotel on Thursday evening.

Introduced by H. A. McNally, the speaker, in his opening remarks referred to the Memorial Arena as one of the finest pieces of work encountered by him on his travels. He also referred to other healthy signs of the life of the local organization and mentioned that besides these visible advertisements, there was also a lot of good work going on behind the scenes. "Five years ago", he continued, "the inauguration of the hundredth Chamber of Commerce in the Dominion was voted. Now there are 618 Chambers, in that same period, the number in the province of Ontario increased from 36 to 182. Seventy-five per cent of the Chambers in Canada are in localities of populations less than five thousand, on indication of its appeal and value to the rural areas."

Non-Profit Group

He reminded his hearers that the Chamber of Commerce was a voluntary non-profit organization of business men. As a group of business men no organization other than one can fulfil your function as the voice of business" he declared. He then referred to organizations seeking to overthrow free enterprise. The leftside clamoring for state control are noisy in their demands. It must be remembered that "ours is not essentially a social group although we have good times."

Before closing he touched upon long term and short term projects, the need to keep an eye on taxation and projects of the three forms of government, the desirability of sponsoring a get out and vote" campaign and to have faith in their enterprise.

Irwin McCoy, vice president, was chairman for the evening.

Secretary Ralph E. Neal gave those present an inkling of the main business of the director's meeting on May 5. Then it had been decided to approach a member with a view to his acceptance of the chairmanship of the Entertainment Committee.

Committee Named

A Conservation Committee had been appointed to comprise the following: Irwin McCoy, H. R. Pearce, C. H. Buskard, R. E. Bonter, Ritchie Wells and D. F. Marett with power to add. It had been also decided to observe July 6 as Marmora Day. Major Percy Gray had been appointed chairman with power to appoint committees to work in this connection. Funds accruing from this venture are to go towards the reduction of the debt upon Marmora Memorial Community Centre.

Discussion followed upon this report, and when it was disclosed that the member approached felt unable to accept chairmanship of the Entertainment Committee, Rev. Father H. J. Farrell graciously accepted the appointment. A letter from Walter Nobes of Havelock with reference to water levels at Crowe Lake led to some discussion. As the Chamber has been taking up the matter of having a water authority with regard to local waters, that immediate action could be taken on the matter referred to.

Get-Out-Vote Campaign

Subsequent to the vote of thanks given the guest speaker by Rev. D. Young the president Alex Fraser testified to the fine assistance given the organization by what he termed "Head Office". He felt that a "Get out and vote" campaign as suggested by them might well be adopted. It had been mentioned that there were more than a million and a half Canadians in 1945 who did not exercise their franchise. The following were then appointed as a "Get out and vote" committee, Major Percy Gray, James L. Shannon and Fred R. Wells. Any other committee was considered that of National Affairs, and Vaughan Clover was appointed chairman with power to add members to his committee. The June meeting will be known as "Agriculture Night."

WEST HUNTINGDON

West Huntingdon — It was Mother's Day in this district on Sunday last and inspiring services were held in all the churches. Some of the citizens were annoyed when the quiet peace of the lovely 50kph was disturbed by the excessive noise caused by the numerous motorcycles, en route to the testing grounds near the Consolidated Fuller Gravel Co. grounds.

There was an extra large number present to witness the races in the afternoon and it was the opinion that these should be held some week-day.

At the United Church, West Huntingdon, Mrs. Phillip Carr was the honored mother when she was presented with a lovely plant. Mrs. Geo. Barrager was also presented with flowers. Mr. Alex. McCurdy gave the story of "David Livingstone," adding his own comments, which made the story more interesting to both boys and girls.

Mr. and Mrs. William Bray contributed a duet. The service was under the direction of Mr. Phillip Carr, the superintendent.

Britons Still Favor Holidays At Seaside

London (CP)— Britain's hundreds of seaside resorts are the favorite holiday haunts for the 34,000,000 Britons who annually take a vacation.

That's the finding of a 12-month survey conducted by the British Tourist and Holiday Board to determine how many people take a holiday, where they go and what they like best.

The board reports that every year an average 24,900,000 Britons above the age of four—56 per cent of the population —go on vacation. Some 9,000,000 others don't go either because they haven't the inclination or can't find suitable accommodation.

More than 15,000,000 choose the seaside every year. Some 5,000,000 others like the country; 2,700,000 visit towns and 1,300,000 abroad.

The board also found that Ireland, before holiday travellers are seeking boarding house accommodation. Favorite holiday months are July and August when the sun is hottest.

The board's report said "the bulk of the people are better off economically than they were in the past. They are better educated and their living conditions have improved. As a result they expect a much higher standard in holiday conditions than formerly."

'GRASSHOPPER SEEDS'

London (CP) — Sticking to a bunch of bananas sent to London Zoo were a quantity of what looked like seeds. In fact, the place the "seeds" burst out of them hopped 50 baby longhorned grasshoppers—never bred in Britain before.

COLD PLUNGE

Napinka, Man. —(CP)— While returning from town across flooded flats recently, two local farmers driving a wagon and team, ran over the end of a submerged culvert, upset and lost groceries and mail of their own and neighbors. Except for a severe ducking, the men were unhurted.

RECEIVES HONOR — Hon. Leighton McCarthy, former Canadian ambassador to the United States and prominent Red Cross worker, has been given the highest honor the Red Cross can bestow, an honorary councillorship. Mr. McCarthy has retired and living in Toronto for the past several years. (CP Photo)

Don't Miss The Months That Really Pay!

Speed The Day Your Pullets Lay . . .

With 'MIRACLE' Growing Mash

Many a farmer nurses his chicks carefully through the first critical weeks . . . then lets them feed for themselves. The result is slow growth and a poorly developed flock. Instead of starting to lay in the fall when the price of eggs is high, they start months later when eggs are cheap. They also tend to be poorer layers than earlier-matured pullets.

Feeding your pullets "Miracle" Growing Mash is like sowing good seed in good soil. It always pays off... in a better crop... in higher profits.

"Miracle" Growing Mash gives pullets the vital food elements that build growth. It ensures sturdy, large-framed birds with the internal development and stamina needed to withstand heavy laying. Get your flock ready for early production by feeding them "Miracle" Growing Mash now.

Don't Buy Feeds . . . Buy Results!

'MIRACLE' LAYING MASH

Once your pullets begin to lay, feed them "Miracle" Laying Mash liberally. "Miracle" Laying Mash, like all "Miracle" Feeds, is a scientific blend of balanced ingredients, and contains elements to stimulate high egg production.

All "Miracle" Poultry Feeds are available in both regular and pellet form.

Plymouth Being Remodelled To Provide Greater Space

By STUART UNDERHILL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Plymouth, England, May 17 (CP)—A new Plymouth is emerging from some of the most shattering bomb damage inflicted on any German bombs in the United Kingdom.

The heart of the famous old port, home of Sir Francis Drake and other British seafaring heroes, still lies in ruins. Amid them business goes on as usual, to the tune of clattering tools that are building a new city for the 180,000 inhabitants.

Plymouth won't look its old self when the task is completed. It is being remodelled to provide greater space and efficiency.

Reconstruction plans are largely in the hands of city engineer J. Paton Watson, 49, a peppery Scot.

"We have completed five of the eight self-contained residential units that are being planned around the downtown cultural and business centre. The city has spent £2,000,000 ($8,000,000) acquiring land in the latter areas," he announced.

Some slum areas and congested sites were abandoned after being struck by bombs, and their former residents shifted to outlying districts.

Key roads are being laid through the ruins. A wide boulevard known as Royal Parade cuts across the centre of the city.

Another main artery will be Armada Way, eliminating narrow, winding streets which once choked traffic. Building of the first big new downtown store will start this summer.

Every big department store was smashed by the blitz which reached its greatest intensity in March, 1941, but did not end completely until three years later. The stores hired spaces in old houses and carried on as best they could.

Other merchants have improvised quarters in attractively decorated Nissen huts, or crowded into covered market-places. But the sites have been acquired in the civic centre for future business building.

FACES TOUGH BATTLE — Wilfred Kennedy (Bucko) McDonald, 37-year-old former National Hockey League player turned politician, is facing the biggest fight of his political career in the present federal election, Bucko, who has represented the riding of Parry Sound since 1945 for the Liberals, is opposing J. M. Macdonnell, Progressive Conservative financial expert in the last Parliament, in the new riding of Parry Sound-Muskoka which replaces the two ridings represented by the two candidates. (CP Photo)

Britain May Propose Airlift To Speed Parts Into Canada

Ottawa, May 17 — (CP) — A small-scale airlift to shuttle machinery parts into the Canadian market will be proposed by President Harold Wilson of the United Kingdom Board of Trade when he returns to London, it was learned today.

The proposal, it was learned, will be one way of meeting United States competition in Canada, and giving Canadian buyers assurance that British replacement parts will be available quickly.

This inovation means that a one-day replacement service may be available to Canadians buying U. K. motor equipment, bicycles and some types of automobiles and other equipment. It is understood to have the approval of Canadian importers.

Details of the airlift plan are expected to be made public by Mr. Wilson at a luncheon his 30-day trade tour of the Dominion. The top U.K. trade officer left for Toronto Monday night after meeting with the cabinet and speaking before a press conference and a district convention of Rotary International.

Another sales-boosting plan which Mr. Wilson may lay before U.K. manufacturers when he returns overseas is a large-scale British advertising campaign in Canada — a campaign which may equal United States advertising here.

Federal government authorities have already indicated that they will give all the help they can to increase the flow of British goods to Canada and ease the trade problem which finds the U.K. importing from Canada about 2½ times what she exports to the Dominion.

The airlift proposal, if accepted, may see a special fleet of transport aircraft shuttling across the Atlantic daily.

Mr. Wilson told the Rotary convention that American aid to Europe will decline progressively between now and 1952. Unless the United Kingdom can increase her dollar earnings faster than American aid drops "not only shall we be unable to increase our payment of purchases — we shall not even be able to maintain the present rate."

This was the only reason responsible for our present inability to buy from Canada all that Canada wants to sell and would wish to buy."

SAFETY MEASURE

Chester, N.S. (CP)— The local Women's Institute has petitioned the municipal council to have three old abandoned open wells covered over. Two of the wells were among original town wells built by Chester pioneers almost 200 years ago.

TRUE BILL FOUND

Kenora, Ont., May 18 (CP)—A Grand Jury of the Supreme Court of Ontario has returned a true bill on a charge of murder against Louis Kalbasiang, a treaty Indian, arising out of the death of another Indian, Alex Kokokopenance, near McIntosh, Ont., in February.

Kokokopenance died while being taken to Quibel for medical attention for head injuries allegedly suffered in a fight with Kalbasiang.

When a Dog Learns 'About Skunks He's Old

(From the Wall Street Journal)

When we got back to the farm after the long trip the setter was undoubtedly glad to see us. Yet there seemed reservations about the greeting, a note of reluctance without warning or explanation he had been left without companionship.

The next morning he seemed back in form but only momentarily. When he was admitted to the house, he began to roam from one room to another, jumping into and over chairs and sofas and sending rugs flying this way and that. This demonstration ended when the lady of our house—he pays attention to us only when she is not about—offered to scratch his ear. Never before had we known him to be quieted for a small price.

Further observation reassures us that his affections have not cooled nor have they in any way been alienated.

We note that no longer is this dog constantly on the go. He knows various sunny spots protected from the wind and there he will lie between forays into the wood and about the premises. This irks his offspring just past puppyhood. She wants to be up and doing. We are also that the dog no longer considers our appearance in the yard as the signal for a game which consists in his running in wide circles and attempting to hurtle himself into our midriff.

The answer is that the setter is in the early stages of canine middle age. We counted back the years that he has been with us and he is at the stage which a man reaches in his early forties. It's fun to hunt but it's nice to lie in the sun between times. And as for these humans, they will just have to understand the affection that can be expressed with a few flaps of the tail.

Well, there are compensations. Possibly he will not cause us concern by being gone all night, as he occasionally has, on business the nature of which we never revealed. If we nap on the couch, he is quite content to nap on the floor beside us instead of waking us up by sticking a cold nose in our ear. And perhaps he has finally learned to give skunks a very wide berth.

Light Winter Snowfall, Early Spring May Conspire to Blight Chances for a Bumper Crop

(By The Canadian Press)

Canadian farmers off to a one seeding progress in the Dominion seeding this year than last, are hoping—not too optimistically—for a bumper crop.

Light winter snowfall and an early spring, the very conditions which have permitted earlier seeding, may conspire to blight chances for a big crop.

A Canadian Press survey of seedin gprogress in the Dominion shows fairly satisfactory conditions in all but the Prairie Provinces of Alberta and Saskatchewan.

In these provinces, a long dry fall, light winter and an early spring has left the soil so dry farmers fear a serious effect on crops later in the year.

Throughout the west a sharp rise in wheat acreage and decline in the acreage of other principal grain crops is reported. Canadian farmers will seed about: 26,963,-200 acres to wheat this year, nearly 3,000,000 acres more than were seeded last year.

In Southern Manitoba heavy winter snowfall delayed spring operations about a week. However, in other sections of the province seeding began soon after mid-April. Wheat seeding now is almost completed and a good start has been made with oats and barley. An increase in acreage of the latter crop is predicted.

The Manitoba Department of Agriculture reports about 80,-000 acres of sunflowers will be planted this year—a marked increase over the 1946 figure. On the other hand, flax acreage will be reduced.

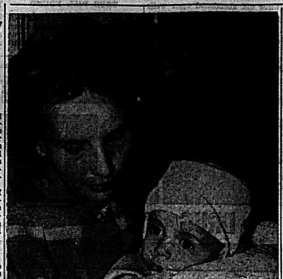
Winter Damage Slight

In British Columbia, where winter damage was slight, figures show a five per cent boost in wheat acreage from last year's 116,000 acre yield.

Excellent growing weather has speeded seeding in Ontario and in many parts of the province fields of spring grain are already green.

Preliminary estimates of oats and barley acreage indicate slight increases over last year's crops when 1,835,000 acres of oats and 228,000 acres of barley were grown. A fall in production of spring wheat, fall wheat and rye is predicted. More sugar beets will be grown.

Recent cool weather and heavier-than-normal rainfall have slowed up seeding in Quebec province. Sowing has just got under way in the Montreal region and in other sections of Quebec. Total farm acreage there will be about the same as last year—6,-000,000 acres, two-thirds of which will be devoted to hay and clover. Acreage Will be Upped



Sugar beet acreage will be upped from 200,000 to about 600,-000 acres and, if weather is favorable, barley and mixed grains will be grown in greater quantities.

Wheat 24,000 ($1,000); oats 1,-340,000 (1,478,000); rye 14,500 ($,400); potatoes 120,000 (135,-000); hay and clover, 4,000,000, (4,000,000); peas 18,000 (18,200); beans 12,500 (10,500); buckwheat 75,000 (78,000); turnips, 22,000 (22,400); alfalfa, 85,000 (86,500); fodder corn, 100,000 (106,000).

In New Brunswick, where potatoes are the most important crop, a decrease of about 11 per cent is predicted on last year's production of 17,815,000 bushels. A slight increase in production of oats and barley is predicted and it is believed that total field crop acreages will remain about the same as last year —200,000 acres.

Farmers in Nova Scotia appear to be sowing more grain and fewer potatoes this year. Planting is generally two weeks in advance of 1947. Authorities say last year's grain crop worth $2,816,-000 will be topped this year.

BLUE BABY FROM WEST — Blue Baby John Lloyd Anderson, 10 months, rests in the arms of his mother, Mrs. Ernest Anderson of Calgary, Alta., at Malton airport as they arrived in Toronto to obtain treatment which will relieve the baby's heart trouble. His condition was discovered when he was five weeks old but the cost of taking him to Toronto for treatment in Toronto General Hospital was beyond his family's means. A city-wide drive for funds was launched in Calgary and sufficient money raised to fly the infant and his mother east for an operation if it will help the child. (CP Photo)

Commons Gives Final Approval To Ireland Bill

London, May 18 (CP)— The House of Commons Tuesday night gave final approval to the controversial Ireland bill which would keep Northern Ireland in the United Kingdom.

The bill passed third and final reading without a division. It now goes to the House of Lords where government leaders hope it will be dealt with by the end of the first week in June.

The measure, known as the Republic of Ireland bill, was bitterly criticized by leaders of the new southern republic. It stipulates there will be no change in the constitution of Northern Ireland without consent of the Belfast parliament.

Under the bill, citizens of the new Irish Republic who live in the United Kingdom will have all the privileges and most of the duties of British subjects. Whether the duties will include military service in the British forces is not known.

The bill, which stirred up heated and bitter debate in the Commons, passed committee stage early Tuesday. Cries of "Traitor" were thrown in plain clothes were on guard in the public galleries in case demonstrations broke out among Unionist sympathizers.

London Letter

By MICHAEL O'MARA
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 18 —(CP)—Just about everything the school child has encountered through the centuries —from handcuffs to ha' penny "bloods" — are on view at London's latest exhibition.

The National Book League's show, "The English at School," also features those most dreaded of documents, school reports, and shows just how wrong a teacher can be.

For half a crown (50 cents) you can get the low-down on the late poet and author, G. K. Chesterton, in his schoolboy days:

"Not on the same plane as the rest. Composition mostly futile"

Field Marshal Lord Montgomery was "rather backward for his age . . . to have a serious chance for Sandhurst he must give more time to work."

Both reports come from the files of St. Paul's School, London.

For schoolgirls, maybe even more shatteperous than their brothers, there is a pair of metal handcuffs any mountie would be proud of. Lent by the Burlington School for Girls, they were in use as late as 1930.

For chastising boys, the favorite method for many years has been caning. Malacca canes and birch rods are on show, along with the lawn—a three tailed leather strap —much admired by Scottish dominies.

There are text books of every vintage at the exhibition, tracing the evolution of teaching methods since the 16th century.

One showcase contains school girls' additional relaxation—reading. All the orthodox classics like "Tom Brown's Schooldays" and "The Fifth Form at St. Dominic's" are there alongside thin paper bound classics—Nelson Lee, Billy Bunter, Tom Merry and Company.

One school story bears the inspirational title: "From Pup to Monitor, or Fighting to the Front."

Earliest exhibit on view is a 15th century Vellumbrtract from the library of Winchester College with what the catalogue calls "scurrilous marginal comments apparently by an 18th century prefect."

Most of the rebels voted for an amendment which would have changed the bill to say that any change in Ulster's status should be decided by the "people" instead of by parliament.

Others voted to delete a reference to Northern Ireland's status.

Labor members voted against the government measure. Herbert Morrison, government leader in the Commons, is understood to have approved a rebuke to those who broke away from the three-line whip issued by Labor leaders.

Lose Pensions But Can Stay on

London, May 18 — (CP) — The old lady of Threadneedle Street — that's what they call the Bank of England — has taken the lead in a new deal for women bank workers.

Directors of Britain's nationalized central bank decided that women employees who marry will no longer be compelled to resign.

The ban against married women was set up by British banks in 1919, when women first entered the banking field while the men were away in the First World War.

In most British banks, women who marry can stay on as "temporaries," which means they lose their pensions.

Newspaper Man Makes Appeal For Cancer Fund

San Diego, Calif., May 18 (CP)

"I have cancer and I am going to die of it."

The newspaper man Tuesday started his daily column with those words.

"But I am not afraid," he added.

Forrest Warren, 71, whose career started at the age of 10 as a printer's devil in his native Vermillion, Kas., went on to report:

"I am glad he (the doctor) told me. I think that all cancer sufferers should be told. It is a pleasant news — no one wants to go — but it does give you a chance to get your house in order. And that is important.

"I have talked in all of my family and we have had a long talk. And I've pretty well worked out the funeral arrangements. I've called the men I want for pallbearers and they've accepted. And I've had a chat with my preacher and made a deal with his remarks brief."

The San Diego Daily Journal said Warren's column would continue as long as he is able, to dictate it to his wife. That won't be long, it was admitted.

Warren said himself wrote, "The time is not set for my departure. Only God knows when it will be. I face the future with faith and in my heart, love for all."

He said he was announcing his impending death in his column for two reasons — to "bring a measure of comfort to others who are hopelessly ill and face to face with their maker, just as I am," and to appeal for contributions to the Cancer Research Fund.

Warren, a product of Kansas' "golden Era" of newspaper history, was a contemporary of the William Allen White and Ted Howe.

Parents Asked To Remove Child From Hospital

Sarnia, May 18 (CP) — Five-month-old Raymond John Spencer, son of Mr. and Mrs. Earl Raymond Spencer, of Sarnia, died at his home Monday, after his parents had been requested to remove him from Sarnia General Hospital because he had measles. A request for permission to take the baby across the United States border to a Fort Huron Hospital was denied.

This is the third time in less than two months that a child has died in this city from a communicable disease which lacks an isolation hospital.

Dr. Gordon Anderson, medical officer of health said "this case accentuates the urgency of the need for isolation accommodation in the Sarnia area."

The attending physician who did not wish his name published said "there is no doubt the child's death was due to a clear-cut case of measles. No one could say with any certainty that he might not have died even under hospital treatment, but there is no doubt he would have a vastly greater chance of survival had there been an isolation hospital to which he could have been admitted.

Admitted Saturday

The Spencer had been admitted last Saturday afternoon to the hospital suffering from gastro-enteritis. Less than 12 hours later the worried parents received a phone call from the hospital informing them their child had measles and must be removed from hospital immediately.

"We know this child is deathly sick", Mrs. Spencer quoted a hospital official as saying "but he can't stay here with measles."

Ontario law permits general hospitals to refuse to care for patients with infectious diseases.

Mr. Spencer desperately called St. Joseph's Hospital and was informed they too were unable to care for his child. He telephoned hospital in Port Huron, Michigan, and was told it would be impossible to take the baby across the international border with a communicable disease.

So he and his wife cared for their child as best they could at home, and he seemed actually to be improving a little until he died Monday.

16-Car Derailment Ties up Traffic On Main Line

Fort Erie, May 18 (CP)— Two emergency crews with a wrecking crane and other heavy railway equipment worked Tuesday night trying to reopen the main line of the Canadian National Railways' Buffalo-Goderich division where it was closed Tuesday, 10 miles west of here, by a 16-car derailment.

A split rail is believed responsible for the cars of the east bound freight jumping the tracks. Several of the derailed cars toppled. About 500 feet of track was torn up.

Emergency crews from Hamilton and Fort Erie terminals, about 50 men in all, were rushed in. Officials said the line may not be open until late today.

The derailed cars were partly loaded. One boxcar, carrying heavy rolls of paper, was so severely damaged that its cargo spilled along the right-of-way. No one was injured in the accident.

Until the line is reopened, all traffic east and west is being rerouted by way of Welland and Niagara Falls.

TURNING THE PAGES OF

"CANADA UNLIMITED"

In early Canada, the flickering fire from the hearth gave the habitant his only light.

Lamps burning animal and fish oil gradually came into use during the 17th century. In 1759, by order of the Governor, citizens had to carry lamps when they went out at night.

Gas was hailed as a great advancement when it was first used for lighting in 1841 in Toronto. 36 years later, Montreal lookers-on saw how the first electric lights—and a new era was born. Today, even in remote country places, homes and buildings are efficiently illuminated by electricity.

Now the uses of light are many, from decoration to display, and each new one opens up many more. In the application of lighting to our life there is a shining future, with great opportunity for Canadians. Yes—there's room to grow in Canadian Unlimited.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

You don't hear much election talk on the stable these days but if you happen to be around when old cronies meet and a lot of veterans of both wars congregate, you'll hear the name "Geordie" mentioned more than once. And furthermore, you'll probably run into arguments when those born of the British Isles debated in various dialects, from the Arctic "from Lerner's" to the Yukon burr they lay from Cider Devon; to the "strike me bloomin' pink, mite, they ain't nuffink that can beat the Harsenal."

You, you'll hear of feats in bygone days of Everton, the toffee team; the "Canaries," Notts Forest and County, Manchester United, the "Wolves", Brighton and Over; Luton, Millwall, The Albion, "Town Ians" the "Spurs", Fulham, Chelsea and Leicester City. And if by chance there's a Scottish brogue injected into the argumentative picture you will learn all about Queens Park Rangers. Motherwell, Lanark, Partick Thistle, etc. The Irish too have their soccer favorites and right now the famous Collies of Ireland are touring Canada and the United States.

But all this suddenly rejuvenated soccer talk among the Old Country boys is brought about by the coming visit to Canada and the United States of one of the most famous teams in the world, Newcastle United, or the "Geordies" as they are familiarly dubbed by the Tynside fans. The United plays a Toronto team on Saturday and already a large number of local soccer fans plan on seeing the game. And the most of them are old countrymen, for soccer is as much a part of the British way as is roast beef, Yorkshire pudding, tea and cheese and a pint of arf-and-arf, or mild and bitter. Yep, and you can add that, perhaps.

The slogan of the "Geordies" is "We got only that which is best." And this motto is one reason why Newcastle United is one of the greatest athletic organizations of all time. At least that is what the "Geordies" and their supporters believe. It is this motto that has been the guiding policy of all the club's directors since it was formed in 1883 until the present day when the Tynesiders are next to top slot in the first division of the English League.

From the end of August until the beginning of May, when they play their home evening stand at St. James' Park, Gallowgate, Newcastle, the Tynesiders attract at least 56,000 onlookers every Saturday. And when they play away from home, be it at Manchester, Sheffield, Birmingham, or at Arsenal's famous Highbury, they play to never less than 50,000. And that's something better than a cornet's guard, mates.

Newcastle United is a magic name, one forever in light. The club, the pride of all Northumberland, has had more than 400 players in its long history and before the stacts of today's team there were mighty players of the past, who set a mark no other English soccer team has ever equalled, even not excepting the grand and glorious Arsenal.

Jackie Milburn, the club's present centre forward, is considered the fastest player in English soccer and is of international fame. He is a pit electrician and was born near Darlington. Milburn ranks with past Newcastle greats such as Willie McCracken, Colin Veitch, Jimmy Lawrence and a host of others. And mention of Lawrence's name reminds us that he played seven games for Newcastle than any other player in the club's history, 432. Close to Lawrence was that grand full back, Frank Hudspeth with 430 while McCracken, the Irishman, added the Geordies on 377 occasions.

The Northern Electric softball entry in the Commercial Softball League extended the powerful CNR Nationa in an exhibition tilt the other night dropping a close 7-5 decision after a close fought game. Electric used the veteran Leon Carson on the mound while the Nationals management exercised four of their hurling staff, Jim Hunter, Don Boyle, Pat Marcelo and Al Adams.

Electric will field a strong entry in the Commercial Loop with Herby Henn, in the coaching spot and Harold Wannamaker holding down the managerial chore. Young will do the receiving with Rex Young and Carson looking after the mound chores. In the infield will be Don Leslie at first, Herbie Henn at second, Vince Frost at third and Jack Whiting doing the shortstopping. In the outer gardens will be Vic Halsey, Carl Woods, George Garrow and Harold Wannamaker.

And here's a spot of news for the boys who like track and field activities. Every Tuesday and Friday evenings starting at seven o'clock, John Bennett, associated with Northern Electric, and well-known former Montreal track and field coach, will hold forth at the Fair Grounds. He will teach those desirous of taking up track and field work for free and all interested in this phase of athletics are requested to turn out. The idea clicked from the start and at present over twenty track and field students are turning out.

Interest in track and field activities in this district is mounting. At the present time a strong movement is under way to form a Bay of Quinte Track and Field Association, the object of which will be to foster the sport and encourage clubs, industries, and other organizations along track and field lines. More will be heard about this later.

"Pete" Beach, Albert College physical director informs this corner that the Bay of Quinte District of the Central Ontario Secondary Schools Association will hold its annual field day on the college field on May 28th. Sixteen schools of the northern and southern sections of the district will be represented. This meet will start in the morning and continue through to conclusion. The annual Albert College Field Day is scheduled for May 24th starting at one p.m.

Aside to the kids—Don't forget, youngsters, that "Teeder" Kennedy, captain, and Howie Meeker, front line star of the Stanley Cup champions, Toronto Maple Leafs, will be at the Queen's Hotel at noon p.m. Friday afternoon when they will sign your autograph books. If you want to see and hear these famous stars of the ice-lanes, better be around. The hockey players will be in town for the Canadian Legion Motor Show at the Armuries and will draw the tickets for the prizes, including the new Ford automobile.

Marv Rackley Goes to Pirates For Johnny Hopp

Pittsburgh, May 18 — (AP) — It will be like old home week for Marv Rackley, 37-year-old outfielder, when he arrives today to begin his duties with Pittsburgh Pirates.

He'll find seven other former Brooklyn Dodgers here. They are what remain of 11 acquired in trades from the bums by the Pirates since 1947.

Still wearing Bucco uniforms are three former Flatbush representatives:

Dodger officials said they were acquiring Hopp primarily for first base insurance. Pirate officials did not hide the fact that they consider Rackley — with a batting mark of .337 in 83 games with the Dodgers last year, will be a definite addition to a somewhat weak outfield.

Rackley is five years younger than Hopp who batted .278 in 120 games for Pittsburgh last year. Hopp is a veteran of 11 years in the majors.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

You'll remember that yesterday we pictured the correct left-hand grip on the golf club. Today we add the right hand and show both hands in a completed grip, in the position pictured you will realize that you maintain the grip particularly with the little finger of the left hand (the thumb and forefinger of the left hand and the thumb and fore finger of the right hand. The left hand is welded to the right hand by the little finger of the right hand overlapping the forefinger of the left hand. These two hands are further welded together by the heel of the right hand firmly pressing against the thumb of the left hand. Thus the two hands work as one. While the club is firmly held by the fingers of the left hand, it must be so without tightening up the muscles of the forearm. Use just enough pressure so that you sense that the club is firmly held, but no more. Too tight a grip interferes with the natural rhythm of the swing. And in golf, the grip is stronger with the left hand than with the right.

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Lou Boudreau is a worried man today.

The peerless playing pilot of world champion Cleveland Indians is burdened by a problem astonishing in a most unexpected source — the tribe's vaunted pitching staff.

"I know we're not hitting a lick," Boudreau said before Tuesday night's 4-3 loss to the New York Yankees. "But that doesn't worry me half as much as my pitching."

Why? one of my big four — Bob Feller, Bob Lemon, Gene Bearden and Steve Gromek — has been laid up by injuries. I have not gotten a complete game from any of them for nearly two weeks.

Feller has been bothered all season; he's sore shoulder, and Lemon, who got off to a fine start pitching against the Yankees in Cleveland last week, developed a hasn't fully recovered from a pulled leg muscle, and Gromek has a charley horse.

Bearden and Lemon won 20 games each last year, Feller won 19 and Gromek nine. So far the four have won seven and lost seven.

Bearden showed Tuesday night that he has not yet himself. Plainly favoring his injured leg, the tall lefthander lasted seven innings and was clipped for 10 hits as the Yankees defeated the Indians 4-3.

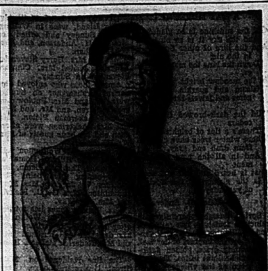
A season record crowd of 73,150 saw southpaw Ed Lopat hold the tribe to seven hits for his fourth victory of the season. He has still to taste defeat.

Tigers in Second Place

Detroit's runner-up Tigers remained two games behind the league leading Yankees by coming from behind to defeat Washington Senators, 4-3 in a night game in Washington. Held to five hits, the Tigers capitalized on the wildness of Walter Masterson and Forrest Thompson to score four runs in the last two innings to overcome a 2-0 deficit. Johnny Lipon's single with the bases loaded in the ninth drove in the winning run.

Philadelphia's Athletics moved into third place by defeating St. Louis Browns, 9-2, in a night affair in Philadelphia. Alex Kellner won his third relief victory in his last three appearances, holding the Browns to two hits and no runs in 8 2-3 innings after relieving starter Lou Sleater.

Vern Stephens' ninth home run, an eighth-inning blast with a mate aboard, enabled Boston Red Sox to nose out the Chicago White Sox 4-3 and save southpaw Mel Parnell his fifth victory against one defeat.



Reds Surprise

The surprising Cincinnati Reds moved to within two games of the National League leaders, defeating Warren Spahn and the Boston Braves 5-4 in a night game. Ted Kluszewski, sophomore first baseman, drove in the tying and winning runs for the Reds.

Bob Chesnes pitched and batted Pittsburgh Pirates to a 3-2 victory over New York Giants. The defeat left the Giants still tied with the last place Braves. Chesnes limited the Giant slugging set to six hits and aided his winning rally with a ninth inning three-bagger.

Singles by Eddie Waitkus, Del Ennis and Andy Seminick gave Philadelphia Phillies a run in the fifth inning and enabled them to defeat the St. Louis Cardinals 2-1.

Ralph Branca became the first major league pitcher to win six games when he received credit for Brooklyn's 9-5, 11 inning triumph over the Cubs in Chicago.

Storied Jack of the Beanstalk has nothing on the pair of towering giants who will battle in the main wrestling bout at Memorial Arena on Friday night. One of them is the mighty mountaineer from the Cracks, El Lee, seen above and the other is the Skyscraper that Walks Like a Man, Wladyslaw Talun the Iron Pole. Both of these pachydermic melodeons can look down a giraffe's throat without stretching too far, and both pack the power of a couple of bulldozers. There'll be craning of necks in the arena when the pair clashes, and just about the most comfortable seat will be in the rafters. The referee nor returns to tangle with popular Art Brady in the semi-final while the bad man from Montreal, Frank Valois, meets Frank Stack in the opener.

'Old Man' Moses Playing Smart Ball for Athletics

Philadelphia, May 18 (AP) — "Old Man" Moses is far from dead these days as Philadelphia Athletics' American League rivals can attest.

Moses — 37-year-old diamond veteran listed in the books as Wallace Moses, Jr., but better known as Wally — was acquired by the A's before the start of the 1949 season from Boston Red Sox.

Some of the experts thought manager Connie Mack was buying himself a used-up piece of baseball property. Moses had been around the major leagues since he came up with the Mackmen in 1933.

Today the experts are ready to admit that Mack apparently knew what he was doing.

The A's found themselves in dire need of a hitting outfielder when Barney McCosky came down with a sore back and the bats of Don White and Taft Wright proved temporarily ineffective.

Mack sent Wally out to patrol right field and if "Old Man" Moses continues to perform as he has in the past few games, the job may well be his for the remainder of the season.

Take Tuesday night's trip over the St. Louis Browns, the A's fourth straight victory. Moses banged out two doubles and a single in four trips to the plate, scoring two of the A's nine runs.

To date he has walked up to the plate 23 times this season and poled out six hits including those two doubles and a homer. His batting average is a modest .261 but climbing.

Moses' batting is not the whole story, however, by any means. The guy plays a crazy outfield defensively.

In the 1946 World Series, he batted .417 for Boston with five hits in 12 trips to the plate against the St. Louis Cards.

The A's could use some of that if they make the pennant grade this season.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON

New York, May 18 (AP) — Chicago Cubs were in a losing streak of a thing and manager Charlie Grimm was moodily staring out his hotel window the evening after a tough game. . . Trainer Andy Lotshaw came in and remarked casually, as conversation, how you feel, Charlie. I just tried to eat dinner and the food tasted like sawdust. I couldn't eat a thing". . . On a hunch, Grimm phoned the dining room to send up the meal check. Andy had signed. It read something like this: Shrimp cocktail, soup, steak with all the trimmings and two pieces of pie. Total about seven bucks. . . Grimm let out a roar and went hunting for Lotshaw, and Andy's "sympathy" had turned the trick — Charlie wasn't mad about the ball game any more.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Regina, May 17 — (CP)—Canada has Dominion championship tournaments or playoffs for hockey, tennis, basketball and even lacrosse but the sport with the most participants has never been able to announce an official Canadian champion.

Five - pin bowling leads all other sports in number of actual players but east and west keglers can't seem to reach a decision.

The 1949 Western Canada five-pin bowling tournament recently was held in Saskatoon and its success prompted Cam (Saskatoon Star - Phoenix) McKenzie to bemoan the lack of an all - Canada affair.

"At the moment the east and west use different methods of counting and until they can get together on a standard set of rules the Canadian championship proper will not take place," Cam wrote.

"Somehow it seems ridiculous that different rules for the same game should exist in the east and west. It used to be that way for a while in football until they decided two separate rule setups just wouldn't work for the best interests of all concerned.

"Down east they stage what is termed 'Canadian championship' but seldom is there a western entry. Out here they could just as well call their tournament the Canadian championships."

What's Sweeney Planning

Dave (Sweeney) Schriner announced his retirement as a hockey player after the last game of the Allan Cup final and Scotty (Regina Leader - Post) Mellville reported that the future of the ex-Regina Cup, ex-Lethbridge coach and ex-National Leaguer is still vague.

Scotty suggested if Sweeney changes his mind about coaching a club he can still stay in hockey as a member of the Toronto Maple Leaf staff.

"In Conn Smythe's eyes no one ever gave or takes a pass like the old smoothie and he can spend the rest of his lifetime in the rafting chair, if he wishes to, showing up-and-coming youngsters the art of juggling a puck."

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 18 (AP) — Crime does not pay—at least at the box-office.

That seems to be the thinking of Hollywood producers these days. At least one third of the films now shooting here are on crime subjects.

Crime films are being favored because they can be made fast and cheaply. They are based on one of the oldest movie formulas: The chase. The question is—how much crime can film patrons take?

Stars Comment

Get in now before it's too late. That's Gloria Swanson's advice to stars who are considering what to do about television. The glamorous grandmother has her own show in the east and has big plans for going coast-to-coast.

What's the matter with the movies? Too many stars, says George Raft.

"Back in the old days, nobody could do a Gable role except Gable. Nobody could do Cagney role as Harlowe role.

"Now they put anybody in anything."

Side Glances

Hollywood's square dancing fad has more than one advantage. Latest one is offered by Jane Powell: "It's easier on the liquor bill; you can't drink and square dance, too."

Movie audiences aren't as alert after all. H. Robert Ryan says in "Trail Street" he walked through a door in a light suit and the next scene showed him coming out in a dark one. And no one noticed it....

The Kibitzer

A force bid to game means nothing to Mama if ever her hand is a bust. Oh, she may answer once with a series of grunts, but from there on she passes with gusto.

Eva Tyne keeps saying: "My partner opened with two clubs and my answer was two no-trump with a bust hand. When partner then bid three hearts, I passed. She already knew I had nothing."

An opening bid of two in a suit, sister, is a signal. It says to partner that a game can be made in something. Therefore, either partner should permit the bidding to die short of game.

In answer to such an opening, two no-trump signals a hand with no sure trick in it. Not necessarily a bust, but necessarily lacking a biddable suit or support or other values. There are no sure tricks.

If opener's next bid is not a game, responder must bid again. Bust or no bust, responder must bid again. Without a biddable suit or support, responder must bid three no-trump.

Opener must then bid two hearts. North replied with two no-trump when holding the hand:

♠ 5 ♥ 4 3 2
♦ 10 9 6 5
♣ 7 4 3 2

South then bid three diamonds. This is not a game contract. So, north must bid again. He has no biddable suit for a takeout. Lacking support for either red suit, he has no assist.

Prevented from passing, a player with no takeout suit must bid no-trump. North says three no-trump, which is a game contract. But suppose south then bids four diamonds.

Four diamonds is not a game contract. North must bid again. Is there a doubt as to his next bid? Not if he has followed the bids. Having sold one of two suits, south has demanded a choice.

North has supported that rebid diamond suit. His bid in this spot is five diamonds. Unless he has died in the meantime.

Jersey Giants Increase Lead Defeating Leafs

(By The Associated Press)

A couple of "rookies" up from Sioux City of the Western League, manager Red Becker and pitcher Roger Bowman, are one of the prime reasons Jersey City Giants lead the International League today.

Becker, piloting the triple 'A' company for the first time, has boosted the Giants to 19 victories in 24 decisions and Bowman has contributed five of the triumphs. The 22-year-old lefthander, who won 11 and dropped eight for Becker at Sioux City last year, turned in his fifth victory as against one defeat Monday night as he pitched the Giants to a 5-3 triumph over Toronto Maple Leafs.

Bowman held the Leafs to four hits, walked only two and fanned six in beating Rubber Chuck Trotlin, 5-1, going into the seventh inning. The Giants scored twice to win.

Montreal Royals took over second place from Rochester Red Wings, 1½ games behind the Giants by beating Syracuse Chiefs, 5-7. The Wings dropped a 5 - 2 decision to Newark Bears.

Montreal enjoyed a 5-4 advantage going into the final frame but the Chiefs tied the count on Carden Gillenwater's bases-loaded double and Sam Meeks' bases' jammed fly.

George Schmees tripled to open the home inning. Rookie Art Hartley intentionally walked the next two batters but Toby Atwell followed with a run-producing fly to break it up.

Rookie first baseman Fenton Mole poled his third homer of the season in the eighth inning to break a 2-2 tie and Newark Bears added two more runs with the ninth to beat Rochester Red Wings, 5-2.

Buffalo Bisons hammered Johnny Maldover and Lacy James for 10 hits in defeating Baltimore Orioles 7-4. Two of the blows were homers by Cosker Triplett and Gene Markland. Al Cihocki and Glen McQuillen homered for the Orioles.

Sport Shorts From Britain

By SHAUN MCQUILLAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London (CU)— Once hot favorite to win the British heavyweight boxing championship from Bruce Woodcock, June 2, world light heavyweight champion Freddie Mills has dropped to an even money chance.

The betting fraternity say this is because of Woodcock's recent third round knockout victory over Johnny Ralph, South African champion.

Reg Haswell of the Johannesburg White City Sporting Club, who saw Ralph's fights against both Woodcock and Mills, says that on the merits of these two clashes South Africans expect Woodcock to win. Mills beat Ralph in eight rounds.

Haswell says the fight proved Woodcock still has plenty of power in his right hand. Woodcock apparently trained harder than any boxer who has visited South Africa in recent years. He was a glutton for work.

His daily schedule started with six to 10 miles-roadwork, then 10 or more rounds sparring with ball punching, skipping and shadow boxing between.

He played tennis in his spare time.

The Woodcock-Mills clash is vitally important to both fighters The winner will be matched with American heavyweight Joe Savold for the British version of the world heavyweight title.

Scotland has a "coaching for coaches" scheme to improve her chances at the 1952 Olympic games in Finland.

Aided by the Central Council of Physical Recreation, the ruling bodies of athletics, swimming and basketball are organizing courses for instructors who've been given the job of getting Scotland's athletes into shape.

Experienced coaches will lecture and discuss their methods with eight chosen youngsters between the ages of 18 and 21.

Basketball, comparatively new to Britain, is desperately short of instructors, and physical training teachers will be briefed to cover the game at schools.

Hockey is also included. The British Ice Hockey Association has appointed a committee of former internationals to deal with the building up of a British team for the Games.

Young players who are eligible will be coached and close liaison will be maintained with the Scottish Ice Hockey Association.

HEAVY RAIN IN RASK.

Regina, May 18 (CP) — The heaviest and most widespread rainfall of the year fell on southern Saskatchewan late Monday to give hopes to farmers who had already begun to predict a return of "the dry 30s." The end to a long siege of hot, dry weather was called a "million dollar shower" by one agriculture official.

WON'T LAST LONG

Wetaskiwin, Alta. — (CP) — Joe Abousaady, a local merchant, recently spent $10,000 worth of paint. It took a freight car to ship the 20,000-pound order. Immediately a farmer bought $1,200 worth to paint all the buildings on his farm.

Wellington on the Lake

A MAY MORNING

Oh! the sunshine is so gladsome,
And the sky it is so blue,
And the lure of other Springs is in the air
Down the lane the maple blushes fair.

In the meadow bright with dew,
Gleam and sparkle wondrous gems and jewels rare.

Hail the dark-browed firs and pine!

There's a tint of brighter green
Where winter trees have changed from drab and gray,
And in all the new enchantment
That is heard and felt and seen,
Is the harbinger of the Springs of yesterday.

—Helen B. Anderson.

Spring, though apparently with reluctant footsteps, has returned, and Wellington lawns and gardens show the impress of her feet, in greening grass, golden daffodils and brilliant tulips. The velvet green of the village park is inviting tourists and the maples that line the streets are donning their summer foliage. And school boys on the campus are playing ball with vim and vigor.

Mother's Day was fittingly observed in Wellington. Unitarian service on Sunday with Rev. J. F. Lane assisted by Mr. B. Wilbe Sharpe, Mrs. Sharpe presiding at choir seats, contributed to the service of song, with Mr. Tom Pilkington, organist. The church was filled to capacity. The printed programme followed with Miss Catherine Tait giving a reading and Rev. Mr. Lane an impressive address. During the service several children were baptized.

Mrs. Mina Rache has returned home after spending the winter in California.

Rev. and Mrs. C. P. Heaven and Mrs. Arnold Fraleigh motored to Belleville on Thursday.

Mr. Boyd, Mrs. W. Thomas and Miss Clara Anderson, Belleville, were among those who attended the W. C. T. U. Convention here on Wednesday.

Among those from Wellington who attended the funeral of the late Mrs. H. W. Sayers of Tweed, were Rev. J. F. Lane, Mr. and Mrs. E. Andrews and Mrs. G. Upton.

Mr. and Mrs. Lewis Wellington Staffa, Leland, were in Wellington on Sunday and called on Mrs. W. H. Anderson and Mrs. W. Monaghan.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry Stevenson, Kingston, visited Mrs. Clarence Stevenson on Sunday.

Among those who enjoyed dinner at Grahamsonor on Sunday were Dr. and Mrs. Pitblow and grandchildren, Ann and Mac, and Mrs. Thomas Ackerman Picton. Mr. and Mrs. Ackerman were afternoon and tea hour guests of Mrs. W. H. Anderson.

A number of Wellington folk enjoyed "The Hills of Home" at the Regent Theatre, Picton, last week, among them being Mr. and Mrs. W. Johnson, Mrs. Mary Johnson, Mrs. G. C. Blakely and Mrs. W. Way.

Mrs. Lionel Davis has returned to her home in Wellington after spending the winter with her daughter and husband Mr. and Mrs. Roderick McLean, Hamilton.

The fine residence on Main Street, Grasmere Lodge, has been purchased and is now occupied. We hear that it will be used by tourist homes which is much needed in this pleasant summer village.

BLOSSOM TIME

Nature is wielding a skilful brush,
Painting a Maytime picture rare,
Sunlight clothing the twilight hush
Bridal gowns for the trees to wear.

Bright the bloom of the Maytime flowers,
Pure and bleeding heart,
And in the early morning hours,
Birds, of the picture for a part.

Oh! dull is he who no beauty sees
In the Maytime scene before his eyes,
Who grasps alone life's sordid things
And sees no beauty in azure skies.

For in all the blooms of bush and tree
In the growing green of the Maytime sod
In all the picture of Spring we see
The heart and hand of a loving God.

—Helen B. Anderson.

AT THE CAPITOL — Romance — King of the Cowboys, Roy Rogers, and Dale Evans, Queen of the West, are coming to the screen in the Republic production, "The Far Frontier," in color, at the same time as Joe Palooka in "The Big Fight." Matinee daily at 2 p.m.

POTENT PERFUME
Some perfumes are extremely powerful; musk will impart odor to polished steel, though it will itself lose all fragrance within a year.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

I had to go to the barber shop to get my hair cut, and so did Uncle Sandus to get his, and we were walking there together to share our misery, Pude saying Heck I wish boys and girls could only have their hair cut about once a year, he said.

Sure, all they do most of the time is let it grow and forget it, I said. Gerls have all the luck, said.

Which just then we started to go passed the Uptown Bewry Shop, and 2 ladies was outside saying goodbye to each other on account of one of them being on her way in the bewry shop, sayin, Oh dear, Blanche, now I dread this—ordeal. It's just so endless uncomfortable bore, that's all it is, she said.

That's only the half of it, the other lady said. Why Jacques Pruitt had a new kind of wave last week, and it hertn't ever been on her head, and the manager of the bewty shop claimed it was her own fault for having dutch perishable hair. The poor thing's hair is still falling out by the handfull, she said, and the first thing you know she'll be a constant nightmare. But the place will catch on fire with the electricity still turned on, and my hair cawt in the cerlers. The only way I could escape with my life would be scalping myself, she said.

And those gasly cerlers, the weight of them on my poor head in a hot cuther hole for 2 hours always give me a splitting head ake, the other lady said. I declare I envy my little boy just sitting for 10 short minutes in an easy barber shop and then skipping off like a carefree grasshopper, she said.

And the ferst lady went in the bewty shop and the other one kept on going and so did me and my self, Oh boy, I guess we're partly lucky after all.

Which I guess we are.

Sports Diary

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

King's Plate flashback's: — Twenty-five years ago Maternal Pride galloped home a King's Plate winner and the long-shot bettors shuffled out of the park loaded with mounds of mazuma. The three-year-old paid off at 56-to-1 odds, the longest shot in the history of the race.

Will a long-shot take this year's 90th renewal of the Plate a week Saturday? There's not much chance with such standouts as Speedy Irish, Sunny Lisa (watch this horse), epic, Gem Thief and Solaris in the running, although the two-buck bettors in search of the big one like to recall Priscilla which won in 1943 at better than 37 to 1 odds.

It's a Mess

If you haven't already done so, get yourself the May 18 issue of Maclean's. It carries a fine piece on one of the best-liked sports columnists in the business — the Toronto Telegram's Ted Reeve, alias The Moaner — written by Toby Sports writer Trent Frayne.

Trent does a solid job on 47-year-old Ted whose size 13 brogans are planted on firm ground when he sits down to bat out — as Frayne points out — "prose that packs whimsey, irony, hilarity and fact."

But the article isn't long enough. To appreciate what I'm, you want to know much more about the guy.

Hope Springs Eie.

There should be some ball-park high jinks if Cleveland Indians meet Pittsburgh Pirates — about a 100-to-1 shot — in the World Series this year.

"I'll send for muscles and I'll wrestle Bing Crosby at home plate," says Bob Hope who has a share in the Indians. Bing is part owner of the Smoky City outfit.

Pitcher Hurls One-Hitter to Defeat Guelph

(The Canadian Press)

Tuesday night Fisher pitched a nine-hitter to give the Red Sox their second victory in as many starts as they defeated Guelph Maple Leafs 6-1 in a senior Intercounty Baseball League game at Guelph.

In the Niagara District Senior League, Welland Pirates gained a 7-2 win over the Buffalo Kicks for their first win of the season.

Fred Trotter, Stokes' shortstop, got his first home run of the season in the fifth inning.

In the Intercounty loop today, Stratford meets St. Thomas in an afternoon game at St. Thomas and then shifts to London for a night game. Waterloo clashes with Galt in another night game.

OSLO'S CLEAN-UP DAY

Oslo — (CP) — Oslo was a busy place recently when the state, municipal and private organizations joined in a general spring cleaning. The idea was to make the Norwegian capital clean and bright for celebration of Constitution Day, May 17th.

Montreal Royals Homeward Bound With Junior Cup

(By The Canadian Press)

Montreal Royals, all wearing Balmoral bonnets, left Winnipeg Tuesday night for home with the Memorial Cup, emblematic of Junior hockey supremacy. The bonnets, official tradgets of Winnipeg's 75th birthday celebrations next month, were donated by a large department store.

The happy Montrealers, who vanquished Brandon Wheat Kings in an eight game series, added to the festive departure scene by harmonizing with an assortment of musical instruments they brought on their western trip.

Britain and Czechoslovakia split the last two singles of their Davis Cup series at London Tuesday, Czechoslovakia with its 4-1 win, qualified to meet France in the quarter-finals of the European zone eliminations.

Tuesday Jaroslav Drobny of Czechoslovakia, defeated Geoff Paish 6-3, 6-3, 6-3, and Britain's No. 1 Tony Mottram, defeated Vladimir Cernik 6-2, 6-4, 6-4.

The first national five pin bowling tournament for blind bowlers is being held this week the Canadian National Institute for the blind said Tuesday at Toronto.

Scores will be telegraphed to the institute's headquarters in Toronto, which will announce the winning team May 23. One team from each league group of blind five pin bowlers in Canada has been invited to compete. Normal rules will be followed, but the competitors will use a guide rail to line up their shots.

Catcher Hal Wagner will join Toronto Maple Leafs of the International Baseball League from Philadelphia Phillies of the National League, it was announced at Toronto Tuesday night. The 33-year-old catcher is a veteran of 11 years in the majors.

At Owen Sound, Brampton Excelsiors notched a 3-2 win in less than a minute in the final quarter Tuesday night for a 18-16 victory over Owen Sound Crescents in their Ontario Lacrosse Association Senior A opener. Crescents lost their goaltender Lloyd Wooton, midway through the last session when he was struck on the throat with a hard shot. Taken to hospital for observation, his condition was not believed serious.

At Stockholm, the combined Gothenburg soccer team, which will leave shortly for a tour of North America, bowed 6-3 to Portsmouth in a game Tuesday before a crowd of 22,000. The Swedish squad will play one game in Toronto during the forth coming tour.

Joe Bibeau, a harness driver from Harrington, Del., was injured Tuesday night at the start of the featured Arkansas race at Roosevelt Raceway in Westbury, N.Y. Bibeau was thrown against the rail and he sonsequlted completely over the horse he was driving—the pacer Orchard, Queen Chief, driven by Johnny Simpson, won the $2,000 race, going the mile in 2:07 2-5. Pandora Hanover was a length behind, followed by Sultan Hanover. The winner paid $33.30.

The postponed lightweight bout champion Ike Williams and Mexico's Enrique Bolanos will be held at Los Angeles Aug. 11, it was decided Tuesday. The match originally scheduled for May 6, was postponed Monday after a physician discovered that the champion was suffering from burns of the right shoulder.

Gus Lesnevich, United States light heavyweight champion will "have to work right down to the wire" to make the 175 pound limit for his title match here May 23 with Joey Maxim, it was said Tuesday at Cincinnati. Joe Vella, the Cliffside, N.J., heller's handler, made the statement as Gus went through a vigorous workout, including boxing sessions with two sparring partners. Lesnevich and Maxim have posted $2,500 each guarantees that they will make the weight.

Joe Dimaggio Will Don Uniform In Next Week

New York, May 15 (AP)—Joe DiMaggio, New York Yankees' $90,000 bench — warmer, will don a uniform for the first time this season, "some time next week," the club announced Tuesday.

Travelling Secretary Arthur (Red) Patterson said that x-rays of DiMaggio's tender right heel taken earlier in day were encouraging.

"Joe DiMaggio's right heel has been x-rayed by our physicians and showed enough improvement for DiMaggio to give it a try next week," Patterson said. "Joe will get in uniform some time next week and practice with the rest

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

"Is it the baby you object to?"

"No, it won't be much trouble. I only feel you can find more suitable quarters somewhere else."

"Do you know of any?"

"No."

The girl didn't touch the screen door knob to make any attempt to enter the house; she merely stood her ground squarely and earnestly stated her case. She was living in a one-room auto court cabin with bath; sleeping, cooking and eating in the one room. There were no screens on the windows; the stove was an open-flame gas plate and she worried for fear fumes from it would poison her baby. They couldn't light a light at night because it attracted mosquitoes. She couldn't put the baby out to sun in the daytime unless she sat right beside the carriage, because the Missouri flowed unfenced by her door and she was afraid some of the other children in the court might push the carriage into the river. They paid $3 a day rent; nothing off by the week or month, and she didn't see how they could stand it any longer.

I hadn't invited her in up to this point because I was afraid if I did I might have trouble getting her out. But now I felt safe, for we had only an open - flame gas plate in our laundry and I knew she'd want to cook.

"Come in and I'll convince you I'm right," I said.

She called her husband and I saw as he walked in from the car that he was an Air Transport Command captain.

We filed downstairs. The young people looked thoroughly into the laundry, saying that when they were cooking, they could close the door and open the windows and get rid of any gas fumes that way.

"No refrigerator," I pointed out confidently.

"Oh, we have one," they chorused.

They examined the bedroom carefully; noted that sunlight was streaming in the south and east windows in spite of what I had said, that there was a huge closet and space enough by the bed for the baby's crib.

They made no comment on the sitting room, nor on the sunk down on the davenport and relaxed. The air was at least 15 degrees cooler than out-of-doors.

"May we have it?" Captain Morgan asked.

I mentally ran over what I might have to endure: our car? . . . my kitchen? . . . drinking? Obviously, with their own car, ours should be safe. With a baby, the girl would be too busy to be "helpful" upstairs. They seemed to be a happy couple—there should be no drowning of sorrow. I said I realized she'd need to use the washing machine and mangle and that I'd need to, too; and in exchange for letting her cook in my laundry, I'd have to have the privilege of laundering in her kitchen.

I said I wouldn't be able to undertake to keep her apartment clean.

"Oh, no," she exclaimed. She'd gladly take complete care of the entire basement and the side entry as well. This was a break for my side street there was a lot of traffic through that entrance to the kitchen. I felt buoyant, relieved of so much housekeeping and on the strength of that lift I invited Mrs. Morgan to sun herself and the baby in our garden. Rapidly we became a mutual aid society and it seemed perfectly natural for her to suggest I keep an ear open for sounds from the baby while she and Dick went after their possessions.

While they were gone, I called our neighborhood handy man. He pounded a few nails and changed the laundry into a kitchenette by hanging an old bookcase on the wall for cupboards, making a slatted top for one of the laundry trays so it would serve as a drainboard, and installing a rack to hold the dishpan in the other tub so it wouldn't be such a backbreaking job to use it as a sink. He covered the laundry table with some leftover Sanitas from the powder-room walls and put boards under the laundry shelf to hang pots and pans from. There were already checked gingham curtains at the windows; the walls were painted sunlight-yellow and the woodwork apple-green. By the time the Morgans returned with their lookout and dishes, make-do though it was, that room looked more like a kitchen than a laundry.

As Betty settled herself in the new apartment, it occurred to me that we hadn't discussed terms. I telephoned the OPA, having no idea what would be reasonable to charge, and soon a representative appeared. The young people said they'd be glad to pay anything up to $100 a month and I felt that since they were cooking and would use my irreplaceable laundry equipment they should pay more than the $25 which mere roomers had paid. With the help of the OPA, we settled on $40 a month. Since Mr. Apton was on the job, I had him check rates on Bill's room and the guest room. He agreed that $30 for a single room and $40 for a double with connecting bath was about right. I felt very professional now that our prices were approved.

From our experience with the Morgans, we learned that one of the things to be feared; cooking on a laundry stove and living either. I knew that sound rent, and I spent a minute or two wondering if I should invite Mrs. Morgan to become—thought it was hard to imagine him a father—when baby squalls rose from the basement bedroom to his room two floors above. "Never mind about Roger," my good fairy should have said. "Think of yourself. Smells fine, too." I won't say that Betty cooked Eyetalian spaghetti three times a day; that would be hyperbole. For breakfast, she scorched eggs. For luncheon, she blew picked up those aromas as they were brewed on the gas plate and wafted them from the open window in the laundry, up two stories, and into my open windows. Gavon should consider homely scents in the manufacture of perfume, for there are people who prefer them to Moment Supreme. I knew one such woman, and when there's one, there must be more. She inquired of the saleswoman behind the toiletries counter what was new in perfume. The clerk mentioned Grass and Hay as being new and popular.

"Thank goodness!" exclaimed the woman. "Who wants to go around smelling like a Night of Love?"

But if it's a choice of reeking of browning onions, bacon fat, chilies, and burning eggs; or of Danger, or Stop, or Black Destiny, glimpse the erotic label. I used to enjoy Italian spaghetti; now I get hay fever at the mention of the name.

Baby sitters were something else again; it was rare, not rose, that had to get accustomed to them. We returned from the Club to finish the evening at the Ances and were greeted by sounds of a dance band in our basement. Roger turned in to a station for music, but his and the one that was already sounding out did not gee; two dance bands in one small house is one band too many. I listened at the head of the stairs. I judged there must be at least six girls and as many boys.

I walked down the stairs wondering how I could justify the fact that whereas we were shooing upstairs, the children might not have the same privilege in the basement. My intrusion was met with cold stares. I had been right; there were a dozen flaming youths litterbugging. Since they didn't choose to notice my appearance at their party, I walked over to the radio and turned it down so I could make myself heard. "Which one of you is the girl Mrs. Morgan hired "

Uneasy glances from several of the children directed at one of the girls identified her as the sitter.

"Did Mrs. Morgan tell you you could have a party here tonight"? I asked.

"She didn't say I couldn't," she ground out.

"Well, I'm home and I'll take care of the baby," I said. "You may go now."

"The longer I stay, the more money I get."

"I'll pay you for an extra hour, but I want you to go now." Some of the children stirred uneasily. The atmosphere stood ground. "Mrs. Morgan hired me and I only take orders from her."

* * *

"Very well. You stay, but your friends will have to go."

"Mrs. Morgan didn't say so."

I felt my neck getting red and hot. "This is my house," I said. "You may stay and watch over the baby, if you like, but your friends will have to go."

Several of the children edged towards the stairs.

"Don't go!" the sitter commanded. "I'm hired to work here and I got a right to have my friends in."

I don't know which of us would have been carried out on the shutter if the Morgans hadn't appeared at this crisis.

I returned, spitting boiling in the certain knowledge that in the opinion of a dozen kids and two adults I was not the owner of the house at all, but Yer Old Ant Emmer and a butt-hanky to boot.

Later, I explained to the Morgans that there wasn't anything fair about it. I realized that, but since this was our house, Mr. Roberts said we'd do anything we liked in it and that the same privilege would not extend to our lodgers.

Dick agreed but Betty was troubled. She said it was hard enough to find sitters — if she couldn't use high school girls, she didn't see how she'd ever get out. I admitted it was tough, but held to it that we couldn't have gangs of children turned loose in the house. Betty said she'd try to get a woman next time.

She got one. The woman arrived alone and remained alone; she didn't need to have friends in to entertain her. She had me.

Rob and I were spending a quiet evening in the cool of the garden room reading. We were until we went to the powder room.

Mrs. Joplin, the Morgan's latest baby sitter, puffed up the stairs, peeked coyly in at me through the door he had thoughtlessly left open, and said, "You alone, my dearie?"

"No, Mr. Roberts will be right back," I told her unsociably.

"I'll just keep you company for a spell," she said and sat down. "Say now, dearie, do you tat?" she asked.

"No."

"Well now, you know, you're missing something. This here's going to be an edge for a handkerchief. Ain't it pretty?" She brought over her work for me to see and feel. I flinched for some unfortunate when those hard kernels of tatting would scratch across her tender nose. "Yes, it's very pretty," I lied, and picked up my book again.

"I could teach you in no time," she said, "to tat good as me. Here" she held out her shuttle and thread, "take this in your hand and I'll show you how it goes."

"No, thank you," I said with some asperity. "I'm reading."

"What's the name of your book?"

I mumbled the title.

"Never heard of it. But, say now, did you ever read Sin's Wages?"

"No."

"It's good. All about a feller that falls in love with a girl who's in love with somebody else and—"

Rob interrupted by returning to the room. He took a look at Mrs. Joplin, a questioning look at me, picked up his book and sat down to read it. That's what he thought. Mrs. Joplin asked him what he was reading. Rob pretended he hadn't heard. She asked again, louder.

Rob jumped up as though he were in a hurry and hustled back to the bathroom.

Mrs. Joplin again took up the thread of her story. " . . . And you know, that girl kept them two fellers dangling until first thing she knew, they was in such sympathy with each other that . . . She went on page and chapter.

Rob returned to his chair, casting the look that kills at Mrs. Joplin as he passed her.

"I was just telling your wife," she said, "about . . ."

REDS MODIFY TRUCK-TRAFFIC RESTRICTIONS

Bandits Rob Bank of $21,000 At Varennes, Que.

Blank Cartridge is Fired In Bank Manager's Face

Varennes, Que., May 19 (CP) —Two bandits escaped with $13,000 in bonds and $8,000 in cash today after a tussle with the manager of the Provincial Bank of Canada branch in this southshore St. Lawrence village.

The armed pair entered the bank about 9.30 a.m. and demanded the contents of the vault, Emile Tousignant, the manager, struggled with them until one of the bandits, standing a two-or three feet away, fired a blank cartridge in Tousignant's face, dazing him momentarily.

They grappled the vault and forced Tousignant and two bank employees, Fernand Brodeur and Miss Jacqueline Lamothe, into the vault before driving away in a maroon-colored sedan.

Varennes is 35 miles downriver from Montreal.

Shortly afterwards provincial police set up road blocks on highway leading out of the village but the bandits had a few minutes head start because of the time it took the 40-year-old bank manager and his employees to escape from the vault.

Manager Tells of Holdup

"Two well-dressed men with revolvers drawn entered the bank about 9.30 this morning," he said. "They ordered me and the bank's two employees, Mr. Brodeur and Miss Duquette, to open the vault.

"I don't know what came over me but I rushed them. They fired at me and it blinded me for two or three minutes. Apparently they forced one of the employees to open the vault.

"When I came to we were all forced into the vault at gunpoint. I still was half-conscious at the time.

"We succeeded in getting out of the vault a little later when we manipulated the safety device in the door."

Police said passersby had seen a maroon-colored car outside the bank about the time of the holdup.

River Corridor Into Shanghai Remains Open

Motorists Attack Bridges Over Small Creeks in Area

By FRED HAMPTON

Shanghai, May 19 —(AP)— Shanghai's Whangpoo river corridor to the sea still remained open today but some points appeared within range of Communist small arms fire.

The Reds were pressing their attack on the waterway through Pootung, the city's "back door". But both the Shanghai garrison command and mainland sources said this afternoon the river still was in Nationalist hands. Several small ocean going ships went down stream about noon.

The garrison communique said the Nationalists attacked bridges over small creeks in the Pootung area not far from the Shanghai-Chi docks about six miles from downtown Shanghai.

Once Wednesday night 700 Reds reached within almost on the east bank of the Whangpoo in the same area but "were wiped out" the communique said.

It also said more than 10,000 Reds around the tourist city of Liuchiahang attacked early this morning and fighting there still was in progress at mid-day. The communique gave no hint of the whereabouts of this action and maps do not show Liuchiahang. It is believed to be somewhere north of Tungkow.

Communist pressure on the Pootung industrial and dock areas across from Shanghai's Bund had not lessened. Nationalist planes kept up a steady bombardment of Red positions in the nearby area. Gunboats added their fire to that of the shore guns.

Series from Base

Kiangwan air base, reported previously as badly damaged, was being used in a series of government sorties, the garrison said.

Some observers see the communist attack from the Pootung side of the river as an indication the campaign here is not going so well for the Communists. The Reds there have an awkward supply problem. The Whangpoo is between the attackers and their objective.

To the west, north and south, where the first Red attacks started, there are many easier avenues to Shanghai.

These same sources feel the communists also have sufficient forces to hurl at Shanghai. It may be, these sources said, that big campaign in the south (last reported threatening Foochow on the coast about midway to Canton) has drawn more of their troops than they anticipated.

Municipality's Duty to Provide Isolation Beds

Toronto, May 19 (CP)— It is a municipality's responsibility to provide isolation beds in hospitals for persons with a communicable disease, says Health Minister William Goodfellow said today. He was commenting on a case at Sarnia where a child, already in hospital, contracted measles and was ordered removed from the premises. Later the child died at home.

Mr. Goodfellow said the province doesn't contribute to the maintenance of any communicable cases except where the illness is polio and then the patient is treated at government expense.

So You Think You Have Troubles! Well Just Read About the Cretiens!

North Bay, May 19 — (CP) — Don't tell your troubles to Mr. and Mrs. Laurent Cretien—they have all they can handle.

The Cretiens operate a lonely locality about 40 miles east of North Bay. Wednesday their barn was destroyed after being struck by lightning. In the fire thirty lost three horses, a large quantity of hay and grain, several cows, two calves, a number of chickens and a dog. The loss — estimated at about $7,000 — was not covered by insurance.

But this was only the latest in a long chain of misfortunes. Last fall fire destroyed their home, and Mrs. Cretien, their 19-year-old daughter had to go to Sudbury for an operation.

While the girl was in hospital, Mr. Cretien broke his right knee and a bone in the lower leg when a load of logs he was hauling to the farm overturned on him. A few days ago he was told by his doctor he required an operation to remove a tumor. The doctor, who examined Mrs. Cretien, said she needed an operation for gall-stones.

Labor Party Blacklists Communists

Move Will Tighten Party Discipline

London, May 19 (CP)— The Labor party today banned all fellow-travelling with communists.

The rule applies to more than 5,000,000 party members as well as party officials and members of parliament.

It was published today in the executive committee's annual report, issued immediately after Wednesday's action in expelling two members of parliament from the party for their sympathy with the communists on foreign policy.

The committee, which includes Prime Minister Attlee and the Deputy Prime Minister, Herbert Morrison, blacklisted 14 organizations and said:

"Members of the party and affiliated organizations are expected not to co-operate with proscribed organizations or to be associated with Communist inspired movements or conferences."

Organizations Listed

The list included the British Soviet Society, British Communist Party, Young Communist League, Federation of Democratic Youth, and Women's International Democratic Federation.

Members of the organizations are banned from Labor party membership. The committee said many of the 14 are or have been "subsidiaries of the communist party."

The Communist Daily Worker attacked the black list and the ban as a "witch hunt."

In another move to tighten party discipline ahead of next year's general election, the executive committee disclosed it has barred political groups that stray from government policy or the party's election platform.

A letter sent to all Labor M.P. and prospective nominees last week specifically told them not to promise tax cuts, bigger pensions out of treasury funds, or to end the division of Ireland.

Former Member of Board Testifies at Hospital Probe

Windsor, May 19 (CP) — Mrs. C. S. Sanborn, a former member of the Metropolitan General Hospital Board of Governors, said today she resigned from the Board after it turned down her proposal to investigate the sudden resignation of Mildred Mayhee as Superintendent of Nurses at the hospital.

Testifying before a Royal Commission probing affairs of the city-supervised hospital, Mrs. Sanborn said she was the only person at a meeting of five members of the house committee which favored an inquiry.

It was Miss Mayhee's resignation and subsequent rumors of lack of discipline at the hospital which touched off the probe now being conducted before Judge Eric Gross of Woodstock, one-man Ontario Royal Commission.

Mrs. Sanborn, a qualified doctor, said Horace Atkin, business administrator at the hospital, read Miss Mayhee's resignation and volunteered the information that the woman was not well during the winter and in the "last month has been in a nervous state." This was the reason he gave for her action, Mrs. Sanborn said.

The former Board member said Miss Mayhee's resignation was immediately accepted by the house committee.

Commission counsel George E. Mitchell interrupted Mrs. Sanborn's testimony at this point and presented copies of the report of the Board meeting at which Miss Mayhee first offered her resignation.

At this meeting the reason for Miss Mayhee's action was questioned as no mention of illness was made in her letter.

Dr. Murray S. Douglas had asked Mr. Atkin to tell the truth as he knew the resignation was because of a party.

Mr. Mitchell said Mr. Atkin admitted there was a party and "that it was attended by nurses..."But I hope you do not think I, with a wife and eight children, went there for myself."

Mrs. Sanborn, describing a March 9 meeting of the Board at which Miss Mayhee presented her story in person, said there were a great number of allegations and accusations made. Miss Mayhee, chiefly by Mayor Resume.

Miss Mayhee was asked to return to the hospital but she refused, saying such a position would be untenable.

Montreal Teachers Critical of New Salary Scale

Montreal, May 19 — (CP) French and English - speaking Roman Catholic school teachers Wednesday night criticized a new salary scale boosting their total wages by $1,500,000 for 1949-50.

Almost 4,000 lay and religious teachers, employed by the Montreal Catholic School Commission, based their disapproval on two points — maximum salary is not available until 21 years of service under the plan and no allowance is made to give them increases for the 1948-49 term.

Executives of the Federation of English-speaking Catholic Teachers and the Alliance Des Professeurs Catholiques who went on a 10-day strike last January, both separately Wednesday night to study the new scale.

At Commission spokesman, in announcing the plan Wednesday, said it was expected to be higher than the aggregate salaries sought by the Alliance, which called the January strike to enforce its demands.

Under the new scale, lay women teachers will receive a minimum of $1,600, while single men will get $1,900 and married lay teachers $2,200. Religious teachers' minimums are $1,300, $1,700 and $2,000, respectively.

New increases for elementary schools, available after 21 years service, with present maximums bracketed: $2,800 ($2,100) for women teachers; $3,700 ($3,200) for single men and $4,200 ($3,200) for married men.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, May 19 (CP)— Synopsis: Today Northern Ontario is cloudy with temperatures in the 30s and Southern Ontario is sweltering with temperatures rising to the high 70s and low 80s and wishing for cooler drier air. The cooler air is on its way and will cover the province by midnight with temperatures dropping sharply as it arrives. Showers were quite general over the province.

Interest Grows In New Program By President

Plans to Develop All Backward Areas

Washington, May 19 (CP) — President Truman's "bold new program" for development of the world's backward areas is still in the blueprint stage, but his plan in it has grown steadily since Truman announced it in his inaugural address last Jan. 20.

Morris E. Dodd, Chief of the Food and Agriculture Organization of the United Nations, said this week the President's plan offers more encouragement for world peace than does any other proposal. Potentially, it is the more effective even than the Marshall plan, Dodd said.

Truman's idea is known as "point four" because it was one of four "major courses of action" proposed in his inaugural speech.

"Our aim," he said, "should be to help the free peoples of the world, through their own efforts, to produce more food, more clothing, more materials for housing, and more mechanical power to lighten their burdens."

Need $135 Millions

Planning officials disclosed this week that it will take an estimated $125,000,000 to launch the scheme. They said also that United States assistance is indispensable about half that amount and "wealthier" countries such as Canada, Britain and France would be asked to contribute. Although no definite decisions have been made, these countries might pay about $13,000,000.

This would make the Dominion's contribution perhaps about $10,000,000.

The program, these officials said, would emphasize basic educational, power and reclamation projects and attempts to curtail the confusing developments. The restrictions heat follow-ing the Marshall plan pattern that nobody really was able to handle just what manoeuvres the Russians were up to, now.

The Soviet's banned all loaded trucks from the Helmstedt-Berlin super-highway, even those that had escorts, on the theory they were a different way.

On other major roads between the British and Soviet zones, however, truck traffic was described as normal, with British sentries not demanding certificates from the travel permits from the drivers.

As a result, nobody knew for sure what was in the mail via the forerunner of a new Berlin blockade, or, whether something

Trucks Now Halted On Zonal Frontier Can Enter Berlin

Written Permits Will Be Demanded in the Future

Berlin, May 19 (AP)—Maj.-Gen. George P. Hays, Deputy United States Military Governor, announced today the Russians are modifying their new restrictions on truck traffic from west Germany to Berlin.

He said the Soviet military administration informed him freight-laden trucks from west Germany now halted by the Russians at Helmstedt on the Soviet zonal frontier will be allowed to proceed to Berlin without written permits from the Soviet zone economic commission.

But, he added, the Russians will demand that any other trucks crossing the frontier bear such permits.

Gen Hays said the western Allies would try to get the Russians to drop that demand in further negotiations. He called it "a restriction and therefore a violation of the four-power agreement in New York for lifting all blockers."

"If we can settle this difference, then I will send a protest to the Russian military commander, Gen. Vassily Chuikov," Hays said.

"But I don't take a pessimistic view. I think the Russians issued the restriction to improve their bargaining position in the talks we have been having with them on an interim agreement between eastern and western Germany."

Hays expressed the opinion that "the Russians did not act in bad faith."

"There is every indication they wish to reach a trade agreement," he continued. "The situation is not deadlocked. There are matters bound to be difficulties, but they can be settled."

Measure of Progress

His statement marked at least a measure of progress in efforts to reach some real understanding of the confusing developments. The restrictions heat follow-ing the Marshall plan pattern that nobody really was able to handle just what manoeuvres the Russians were up to, now.

The Soviet's banned all loaded trucks from the Helmstedt-Berlin super-highway, even those that had escorts, on the theory they were a different way.

On other major roads between the British and Soviet zones, however, truck traffic was described as normal, with British sentries not demanding certificates from the travel permits from the drivers.

As a result, nobody knew for sure what was in the mail via the forerunner of a new Berlin blockade, or, whether something

TWO R.C.A.F. VETERANS DIE AT TRENTON

A low-flying light training plane crashed into three feet of water in a pond about a mile northeast of the R.C.A.F. station at Trenton, Ont., carrying two veterin R.C.A.F. officers. Dead are Squn.-Leader Wm. H. Kettler, D.S.O., D.F.C. staff officer at Central Air Command, Trenton, father of a three-week-old baby and Sqdn.-Leader J. E. McLeay, D.F.C., of the Flying School, Trenton. The plane is shown above, resting on the muddy bottom of the pond.—Central Press Canadian.

Callander, Ont., May 19 (CP) —Amid gigglings and shrieks of laughter, Annette tumbled to the floor.

Or was it Annette? It could have been Emilie—that's how difficult it is to tell these Dionne multiplets apart.

Marie is the only one easy to spot. But that is because she wears glasses and is not quite as husky as the others. Yvonne, Cecile, Emilie are identical images of each other.

But back to that tumble again. It was really Annette who had fallen when the leg came off the chair on which she had been sitting. However, as quickly as you could count by five, she had it back on, and was again playing another round of "Cochon" (pig) on card-game.

It was a holiday and the Quints were entertaining the 30 guests who attend their school, established in the nearby building which also houses their nursery.

Marie sat playing with Jacqueline Giroux of River Valley, Ont., Annette and Emilie.

The concierge of the room Yvonne was playing with some of the other girls, Constance Vaillancourt and Rita Hunter of Haileybury, Celine Lavoie of Hurst, and Cecile Lafond, Drummondville, Que.

Sister Aimee Des Anges who is head of the school, also was there. She decided to give the girls a holiday because they worked so hard for the concert they said.

The seven adults lasted 2 1-2 hours, was given Mother's Day.

Traces of the entertainment still remained this sunny spring afternoon in a stim "Hommage a Nos Parents," (Tribute to our mothers) pinned to the curtains which, when drawn aside, turn the playroom into a real theatre.

They like painting on plays and usually plan their own shows, said Sister Aimee. "Why even this afternoon they put on a concert among themselves."

That was when Annette played the piano.

At this the youngster looked up from her card-game, smiled shyly, nodded vigorously, and then went back quickly to playing her cards.

All the girls can understand French and French comes more easily to them, and they prefer to speak it.

They are still very much little girls, despite famous five who will celebrate their 15th birthday May 28.

None yet uses powder, rouge, or any form of make-up, but according to Sister Aimee, that will come soon enough.

"We want them to stay little girls as long as we can," she said.

Taxi Driver Robbed of $30 And Beaten

Toronto, May 19 — (CP) — Abducted in his taxi cab by three men early today, Harry Thompson of the Diamond Cab Company was driven to a field in nearby Weston, robbed of more than $30 and threatened with violence.

Thompson told police the three men jumped him in the cab and went on a two - hour trip through suburbs before stopping the car. He was forced to lie on the rear floor with his head covered with a coat and the robber's foot on his face.

He was warned that if he reported to police they would come back and give him a "real beating."

The cab was found abandoned in another ward field.

Tornadoes Keep Texans Anxious

Dallas, May 19 — (AP) Flood waters receded at Fort Worth and Dallas today but Texans still couldn't breathe that well-known sigh of relief. Tornadoes which have been breaking out like small-pox were a constant threat.

Fort Worth almost was moving back into their water ravaged homes and officials evaluated the damage caused by a flash flood that held the city in a paralyzing grip for 24 hours.

The raging Trinity left a toll of nine lives and property damage reached a 48-foot crest then subsided rapidly Wednesday night. It had been expected to reach 50 feet.

Property damage is already estimated at $1,000,000. The flood knocked out power and water facilities at many places.

Russians Refused Interview With Refugee Flier

Stockholm, May 19 — (CP) — The Swedish Foreign Office today said it has refused a request by Russian embassy which sought an interview with a Russian pilot who landed his fighter plane on Swedish soil Wednesday night.

The Russian, asking for asylum, in the west, was quoted as saying he was "tired of the Soviet Union."

The Foreign Office told the Soviet embassy that Russian officials may not question the pilot at the airport where the pilot landed his plane. Instead, Swedish police who handled by the alien commission.

It was learned today that three Russian embassy officials tried for six hours Wednesday to enter the airport where the pilot landed his fighter plane. They were finally refused entry by Gen. Bengt Nordenskjold, commander-in-chief of the Swedish Air Force.

A spokesman for the Foreign Office said that the plane would be returned to Russia if such a request was received.

Chief Justice Of Newfoundland Dies at Age 59

St. John's, Nfld., May 19 (CP) — Sir Edward Morris, Chief Justice of Newfoundland, died in hospital today. He was 59.

Sir Edward, a native of St. John's, was administrator of Newfoundland after Governor Sir Gordon Macdonald left for England two weeks before Confederation March 31. He served in that capacity until Sir Albert J. Walsh was sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor.

Only 250 trucks reached Berlin Tuesday from west Germany through the zone, the interesting 100- miles of Soviet territory. Wednesday only 140 trucks arrived.

Meanwhile freight destined for rail movement from west Berlin to western Germany piled up in the eastern sector as the Soviet operated locomotives on hand so it could not move. The Russians insist that their locomotives draw trains between West Berlin and western Germany.

The British-American air lift and 11 western railroads remained the only reliable source of supply to western Berlin.

LEAPS TO HER DEATH

Toronto, May 19 (CP)— An unidentified woman, about 22 years old, today leaped to her death from the Bloor Street viaduct, in east central Toronto. An eye witness said she stopped near the bridge took off her shoes, climbed on the railing and threw herself over.

Within an hour of her death a man was reported to have jumped from the nearby Sherbourne Street bridge. Just as he hit the water, he was seen to side two motorists held him back.

Preparing for the forthcoming Federal election campaign the local C.C.F. party members have arranged for a committee room on Front Street, from which to direct their campaign in the Hastings South riding. The new C.C.F. committee room is at 203-A Front Street, which building formerly occupied by Earl Moon, confectioner.

PRINCE EDWARD CO. GLADSTONE HOME

Prince Edward County "Bluenose Row", the county highway running along the south shore of the Bay of Quinte between Rossmore and Carrying Place, is at its prettiest this week with acres of orchard along the road being in full bloom. Each spring the above route is a popular one for city motorists out for a Sunday driving drive and this season will undoubtedly prove equally as popular.

AIRDALE IN FOUND LONG WAY FROM HOME

A certain airedale dog picked up in the city by Thomas Thorne, city dog catcher, is a long way from home.

The dog, apparently very well bred, was wearing a 1940 tag issued in the city of Hamilton. Police suggested the dog may have been accompanying his master in an auto and became lost when let out for a run.

The second dog, a short haired Collie, was also picked up by Mr. Thorne. Both canines will be kept the usual period of time awaiting their owners.

SHOWERS WELCOMED BY DISTRICT FARMERS

With fields and gardens rapidly beginning to look the effects of the recent dry weather, district farmers attending the local produce market today dubbed last night's shower as "a million dollar affair."

Officials at the water filtration plant state that approximately one third of an inch of rain had fallen up until noon, while during the noon hour the district was visited with another heavy shower.

Farmers said the rain would do much to bring on the growth of pastures and to sprout recently sown grain. Gardeners who have gotten in their small seeds also welcomed the rainfall.

Another Packed House Greets Kiwanis Show

Another packed house placed the stamp of approval on the Kiwanis musical show "Pack Up Your Troubles" in the Collegiate Auditorium last night.

The cast, principals and chorus artists, again excelled themselves with an outstanding performance and many laudatory comments on the presentation were heard at its conclusion.

"Pack Up Your Troubles" finishes its four-night run tonight and encores are being heard for many of musical entertainment for which Producer-Director Ted Schwab and the Kiwanis Club are becoming justly famous.

Tourist Assoc. Formed, Bancroft Office Opened

At a meeting of the resort operators held at Bancroft on Wednesday afternoon, an association was formed to be known as The Highlands of Hastings Tourist Association and will be confined to operators within the County. A concerted drive was made by the Peterborough Chamber of Commerce to have the operators link up in the Tourist Association but the fact that the operators felt it was necessary to stay within their territory due to the publicity now being given to expended by the City of Belleville and the County of Hastings.

Freeman Burrows, manager of the Chamber of Commerce of Belleville and Frank Murray of station CJBQ were present at the meeting. Mr. Burrows explaining the need of an association for advancement of the industry especially in the northern highlands. It was decided by the meeting to immediately open a tourist information bureau at Bancroft, where all information respecting resorts will be given.

R. Thompsett of White Pine Lodge was the unanimous choice of the operators for the position of president with Ken Thomas of Kamaswas Inn as vice president. The whole area has been divided into five districts, with two representatives from each zone to form the executive of the association. Fees were set for membership and other business transacted before the meeting was concluded.

Land Surveying Subject of Talk To Optimists

Land surveying is a form of insurance, it ensures a buyer of land that, when the purchase has been completed, the land is really his. Mr. John T. Ransom, Ontario Land Surveyor and Consulting Optist Club, claimed that in forty years of experience as a surveyor, he has found Belleville to be Ontario's most difficult city to survey. This, he states, is due to a complete lack of continuity in surveying, and the lack of records of early surveys. At one time there were no less than fourteen surveyors here. As a result of this confusion, there are only three bona-fide land marks in the city.

In the field of town-planning, thirty years is a good period to plan for. Mr. Ransom predicted a population of forty-five thousand for Belleville by the end of that time. An adequate budget for town-planning would be from five to seven dollars. Such a sum would provide adequately for the whole development. To date the sum of two thousand dollars has been allocated. Additional expenditure at this time would be amply justified in the future, he claimed, because they would be spared the usually great expense in correcting ordinary errors and omissions.

In response to a question, Mr. Ransom replied that the requirements for entry to the profession of surveyor, by Ontario, were Junior Matriculant must apprentice for five years and do extra-mural work at night, then pass his practical work in the daytime and his theoretical work in university graduate must apprentice for two years. As the result of the long preliminary period, examinations are tried on the surveyors' act.

The meeting was unanimous to the club by Optimist, Perry Everett, and thanked for his most interesting address by Optimist Howard Kaskeh.

Four applications received their march orders and will proceed to the twenty-fifth anniversary convention of Optimists District 15. The following will go to Windsor to represent Quinte City, Optimists Don Boyce, Gord. Carter, John Ryan and Harold Bankier.

Resident Fined For Spearing Fish

Found guilty of a charge of spearing fish last May, district game inspector Claude H. Winters united a total of eighty-five dollars, Thomas Boyle, Bridge St. West, was assessed $10 and costs by Magistrate C. H. Ponton, county magistrate's court today. Boyle denied that he had been spearing fish; that he owned a spear, or that he had been carrying a flash light. He was convicted by the game inspector but the Magistrate was satisfied the evidence of Inspector Winters and convicted the accused.

Were Under Boats

In giving evidence Game Inspector Winters stated that on the night of April 14th., he, with Game Inspector Percy Thompson, had driven in the alley at the rear of Loblaw's and had seen two men and a boy come up on to the bank of the river. Both men had been wearing high rubber boots which were wet. Two spears and some freshly speared pickerel were found on the bank.

The inspector admitted the accused was not seen with the spear in the hands but stated such evidence was almost unobtainable as at the first indication of a stranger all officials drop their spears and deny any such activity at all times.

"This man gave me several names before he gave me his right one," said Mr. Winters. "The man accompanying Boyle had run away and Inspector Thompson was unable to catch him."

Gives Explanation

Giving evidence on his own behalf Boyle explained his presence on the river bank and his high rubber boots by saying he had been trapping muskrats and had merely walked up the river bank.

"I have no sympathy for fishermen who do not live up to the regulations," stated Magistrate Willis as he found the accused guilty and assessed the minimum fine of $10.

Fine Display of Cars, Accessories Features Motor Show at Armouries

Dream cars galore were on display last night at the Belleville Armouries as the annual motor show presented the first night of the Motor Show. Cars of all types and sizes were displayed to public view in one of the biggest and best shows ever seen in the city.

Great interest was shown in the new cars and in the very latest improvements. One of the feature models is the new Nash double bed in it. Another Nash of the same model is snown which shows how by moving how the seats may be converted into a bed. This is the kind of a car that a travelling salesman would wish to own.

Convertible

One dealer has a very beautiful car on display in a new custom built DeSoto convertible. Many interesting car delivery trucks were presented for public inspection along with the new passenger cars which the latest recently been introduced. Ford Mercury, Meteor and Monarch cars were well represented in the display as were the latest General Motors cars such as Chevrolet, Pontiac and Oldsmobile. The Plymouth car was also shown.

A well staged display of new Studebakers and Hudson is also being presented for the duration of the show which is being shown again tonight and Friday night. The latest in electrical appliances was also shown. One of the centers of attendance is the new Ford Tudor sedan which is being given away by Ford dealers this week. Valuable prizes are also to be given away with the car. Joe Louis, champion of the world champion Toronto Maple Leafs and Howie Meeker will be on hand at the show this evening tickets.

Another highlight of the evening was the radio quiz show with Bill Arnold as basic as ceremonies was presented by the Legion which saw some very fine prizes won by lucky spectators. One contestant was not quite so lucky though. Mrs. George Lancaster was a victim of the quiz show. She could not answer a question asked her and as a consequence was given a haystack in which to look for the evening. Mrs. Lancaster has not yet found the missing needle but continues to search for it again tonight.

Winners of Prizes

The lucky number, 270 Coleman Street was one of the more fortunate collectors as the holder of ticket that won him a washing machine. Eugene Spence, Frankford, won a bicycle and Cliff James of Northern Electric was the winner of the radio set.

Leslie Pringle, Jail Escapee, Soon Captured

After a little more than six hours freedom an escapee from Prince Edward County jail was picked up on No. 14 Highway early this morning by Provincial Police Constables Cecil Caldwell. The escaped man was Leslie Pringle, age 37, formerly of Bloomfield, who was serving time for perjury.

According to reports the man escaped from the Picton jail Wednesday evening when he slipped out of the cell as the jailer answered a sick bell, which had been rung by one of the inmates.

Later an outside door, which ordinarily is kept locked, was found to be unlocked and a check of the inmates revealed Pringle to be missing.

Two Toronto Youths Held For Car Theft

Two Toronto youths, Donald M. Turcott, 17, and Stanley Judge, 18, were apprehended by provincial police at Belleville early this morning and have been returned to Toronto to face charges of car theft.

Provincial police here were informed over the police radio that the car, stolen in Toronto was believed to be headed east. Police waited on the highway west of the city and shortly after midnight the stolen car appeared. Officers hailed the car for short distance and then flagged the driver down. The two youths in the car were taken into custody and held for return to Toronto by police from that city.

Toronto, May 19 (CP)— Appointment as Professor C. R. Smallwood Smallwood as Dean of Osgoode Hall, Ontario's law school, was announced today by the Benchers of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

Prof. Smallwood-Baker is at present Dean of the Law School of the University of Birmingham, England.

Prof. Smallwood-Baker succeeds Dean Cecil A. Wright who resigned last January following a dispute with the Law Society over teaching methods. The Society had approved a legal education program calling for more practical training in law offices for Osgoode Hall students.

In protest against this policy, Dean Wright and three lecturers resigned. At a subsequent meeting of the Law Society a compromise was reached between academic and practical training and the course was lengthened from three to four years. The new Dean who assumes office in the Fall will inaugurate this revised system.

Mr. Wright, upon his resignation as Dean, agreed to finish out the year at Osgoode Hall. Next Fall he goes to the University of Toronto as Dean of its law school.

Cost Accountants Hold Closing Meeting

Members of the Bay of Quinte Chapter of the Society of Industrial Cost Accountants have concluded their closing dinner meeting of the season at the Dutch Mill inn near Napanee this week.

New executive officers for the 1949-50 term were elected at the following slate being named: E. E. "Tip" Tummon, C. D. Ireland, W. O. Richardson and L. G. Lennox. Robert Taylor was re-appointed as secretary treasurer.

Gordon Ireland expressed his appreciation to the retiring executive for their work of increasing membership during the past year. Chairman Carl Casey responded. A discussion on "request" programs was held, it being suggested that speakers be acquired to speak on such subjects as insurance, banking and labor relations, in addition to accounting themes.

The Belleville Shrine Club will be the locale for future meetings of the cost accountants, who commencing the fall season will meet on the third Monday of each month.

STATE MANAGEMENT OF U.K. FUELS AND INNS IN NEW TOWNS

London, May 19 (Reuters) —A bill to put all the inns and "pubs" of new towns in Britain under state management — described by the opposition as a first step towards nationalization of the brewery trade — was passed by the House of Commons Tuesday night. It now goes to the House of Lords.

CNR Bowling League Enjoys Annual Banquet

With home-made chicken pie, the "piece-de-resistance" of an enjoyable dinner, the Canadian National Railways Bowling League climaxed a highly successful season with the annual get-together at Kiwanis Centre last night.

Upwards of sixty CNR bowlers enjoyed the tasty dinner furnished by the Ladies Auxiliary of the club under the supervision of Mrs. Robert Johnson.

Mr. Johnson, president of the league, acted as chairman for the occasion and with the assistance of treasurer Gordon Shaw, presented the trophies and prizes to the various winners.

"Cy" Young's "Office" team, champions of the league by virtue of the intersectional defeat over the "Yard" team was presented with the J. D. McMillan Trophy emblematic of the league championship. Members of the champion team are Cy Young, captain; H. Poitner, A. Young, F. Deacon, H. J. Poitner, Al Wardhaugh and N. D. McNish.

Teams of the league include: Office; Yard; Engineers; Motive Power; Loafers; Express; Despatchers; Locos; Call Boys; Stores; Klinger and Wreckers. All teams were presented with cash prizes based on a point system.

Prior to the banquet the league stood in one minute's silence in a tribute to the memory of the late Albert Jones.

Decide to "Stand Pat"

Despite an urgent appeal by President Al Mesgher of the Canadian National Railways Athletic Association, the league on a standing vote decided to remain as an independent organization for another year. It has been in operation since 1914. Three of the charter members of the club who have been bowling since its inception and are still members of the league are Mr. Johnson, Sammy Symons and Harry Robinson.

Mr. Johnson, Mr. Symons, President R. L. Johnson, was re-elected as head of the club. Harry Robinson was named vice president, Gordon Shaw was re-elected secretary-treasurer. Bill Parry back again in the secretarial position. Claude Hannigan was elected assistant secretary treasurer.

Tribute was paid to the members of the Ladies Auxiliary for their fine work in catering for the banquet. Clarence Connell, Recreation Alleys, expressed his appreciation of the co-operation of the club and hoped additional alleys would be available next season. Mr. Bateman of the Bowl-O-Drome was a banquet guest but had to leave early.

London, Ont., May 19 (CP)— A break-neck automobile chase for more than 100 miles during which an alleged car thief drove a London man's car at speeds up to 90 miles an hour ended at 2.20 a.m. today when a cordon of district police blocked the road north of London.

Arrested were Max Behrens, 18, and Austin Alfred Jones, 21, both of London, and will appear in court today when charges of car theft may be laid.

The car, stolen in London Wednesday night was intercepted by a police district by provincial police, who pursued it 40 miles and then lost track of it at Clinton.

Picking up the trail south of Clinton, provincial police described it when notified at district cars and trailed it to Elginfield. Within a matter of minutes it was reported roaring through Arva, with three provincial cars behind it going 80 miles-an-hour.

A roadblock was set up at Caledonity Corners on the sixth concession and city police rushed to reinforce the barricade.

The driver, turning east on the sixth concession and was traced by the locale for further meetings by the tracks of the car to the Highbury. He was caught near the Clarke Road corner where the passenger jumped out and ran across the fields.

U.S. GOVT. AWARDED $4,000 DAMAGES

Chicago, May 19 (AP)—Federal Judge John P. Barnes Wednesday awarded the government nearly $4,000 damages from the Canadian Ace Brewing Company of Chicago. The Federal Trade Commission had directed the company to make clear in its advertising that its beer is a product of the United States and not a Canadian import.

The company claimed the F.T.C. order did not apply to a radio jingle in which the government had asked for $735,000 damages.

John Haffey CCF Candidate For H-P Riding

John Haffey, Trenton merchant and CCF organizer in Hastings County, was the unanimous choice of the CCF delegates at the Hastings-Peterborough nomination convention held at the Madoc Legion Hall. Prior to accepting the nomination Mr. Haffey, an army and air force veteran of the last war, declared his support of Mr. Giles of Coe Hill, and stated that he would be Mr. Giles' campaign organizer but Mr. Giles stated that he could not give his full time to the campaign and withdrew his name from the ballot.

In accepting the nomination Mr. Haffey stated that he had sold his business in Trenton in April and would be working the Hastings-Peterborough riding every day for the six weeks campaign. He said that with the support of the delegates in the riding that there would be few people from Stirling to Marmora to Madoc to Marysburgh and Bancroft to Coe Hill and Apsley to Burleigh Falls and Warsaw to Norwood and Havelock whose vote would not be solicited.

The candidate stated that he would give full return to the people of the Hastings-Peterborough riding by spending his time 'n the riding gathering their requests, and not stay in an office earning a second salary as has been the habit in the past. "I may not have my own aircraft to do this job, but I will know and visit the people for whom I am working," said Mr. Haffey.

Missing Uranium Of no Value In A-Weapon

Washington, May 19 (AP)—The Atomic Energy Commission, under congressional fire for saving a Communist a $1,600 fellowship comes before a Senate group today to ask $1,000,000 for its work for the fiscal year.

The Commission's loss of a small amount of uranium also figured in the situation.

The Congressional Operations group looked into the money requests, all told amounting to $4,000,000, as atomic energy took a rest after a jam-packed day Wednesday.

First chairman Brien McMahon (Dem.-Conn.) announced that one-seventh of the missing uranium oxide unaccounted for in the Argonne National Laboratory, Chicago, "is of no value for use in an atomic weapon."

In a statement following a three-hour session behind closed doors with A.E.C. officials McMahon said that six-sevenths of the 35 tons had been recovered. The fissionable material was reported missing during what its "custodians" did.

The Federal Bureau of Investigation has found that in its opinion no espionage is involved in the case, McMahon said.

He declined comment when asked if anyone had been "negligent."

McMahon released a second statement observing that "accusations and means must be devised to prevent any repetition of" the case involving accused Hans Freistadt, an admitted Communist at the University of North Carolina.

County Police Court

Pleading guilty to the theft of $5 from the till at Kenneth Vivian's garage at Shannonville, Ralph Fletcher, Belleville youth who was sentenced to three weeks in the county jail by Magistrate T. Y. Wills.

When she suggested to the judge that nurses would not be expected to appear, because "I have been told some . . . have been intimidated," Mayor Resume told her she was out of order, that he was not necessary to pursue the subject further.

Dr. Douglas, who also resigned, is slated to appear before the commission today, before the Board members, including Judge Gordon.

Partying in a Detroit hotel with four prominent Windsorites, including Mayor Arthur J. Reaume was described Wednesday by witnesses appearing at the inquiry. Testimony was similar in each case.

The nurses, designated only by letters, testified at a hearing being conducted by Judge Eric Cross of Woodstock, one-man Ontario Royal Commission.

The probe grew out of a demand from Windsor citizens and organizations for an investigation of the hospital administration following the resignation last February of Miller Agnew as Superintendent of Nurses.

She said they were the escorts of four Metropolitan nurses on a party in Detroit's Hotel Book-Cadillac last February.

Miss A's testimony followed witness stand charges by Mildred Maybee that Atkin provided young girls for married men to take to parties.

Miss "A" was called to the stand by George Mitchell, the Commission counsel. He said he did not want to divulge her name. She wrote it on a slip of paper and handed it to Mitchell and a stenographer.

The court ruled that the nurses' name be withheld from the public. The nurse said she was invited by Atkin to attend the party

Synod Approves Salary Increases

Kingston, May 19 (CP) —Increases in salaries of Anglican clergymen serving on self-supporting charges to $1,800 and on mission charges to $1,400. The approved recommendation calls for $200 annual increase in each case. The boost is to go into effect next January 1.

Rev. E. R. Coleman, Amelisburg, said he felt a clergyman assigned to a mission should receive the same amount of money as those in self-supporting charges. "The minister on the mission has to do more travelling and the upkeep of his car is greater," he said.

Archbishop John Lyons said: "I believe the two ministers should be on the same level. I feel the money can be raised."

FORMER MEMBER

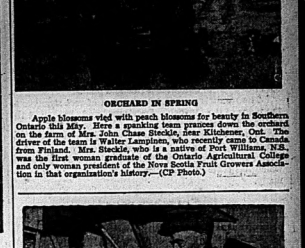
Mrs. Sanborn said that at a later meeting, when she pointed out that organizations had asked for an explanation of circumstances surrounding Miss Mayberry's resignation, Judge Albert Gordon, chairman, said those interested could appear before the Board "but that no one probably would."

When she suggested to the judge that nurses would not be expected to appear, because "I have been told some . . . have been intimidated," Mayor Resume told her she was out of order, that he was not necessary to pursue the subject further.

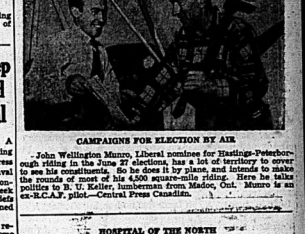
Dr. Douglas, who also resigned, is slated to appear before the commission today before the Board members, including Judge Gordon.



Compromise Step Will be Proposed In TLC Upheaval

Ottawa, May 19 (CP) — A compromise solution for settling the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada's internal upheaval over Communism in the Congress will be proposed this week at a conference of union chiefs in Cleveland O., it was learned today.

The congress executive was reported ready to back down some distance from its previous demands of Frank Hall, Montreal rail union head, and the anti-communist Montreal labor group that he heads.



The executive's proposals will be placed before a Cleveland meeting of the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, which opened Wednesday and is being attended by Mr. Hall and some of his supporters as well as T.L.C. president Percy Bengough and other executive members.

The compromise proposition of the executive T.L.C. sources here said, would consist of a change in the congress's convention voting system which would place more emphasis on labor in the hands of the Hall group but leave intact the present system of electing officers.

CAMPAIGNS FOR ELECTION BY AIR

HOSPITAL OF THE NORTH

ORCHARD IN SPRING

Apple blossoms vied with peach blossoms for beauty in Southern Ontario this May. Here a spanking team prances down the orchard on the farm of Mrs. John Chase Steckle, near Kitchener, Ont. The driver of the team is Walter Lampinen, who recently came to Canada from Finland. Mrs. Chase Steckle, who is a native of Port Williams, N.S., was the first woman graduate of the Ontario Agricultural College and only woman president of the Nova Scotia Fruit Growers Association in that organization's history.—(CP Photo.)

Although organized to look after military matters associated at the northern military centre at Churchill, Man., the army medical centre has extended its services until it tends to the medical needs of Eskimos, Indians and whites residing in a wide area around Baker son and James Bays. In charge of the hospital is Maj. B. L. P. Brosseau of Montreal, shown here talking to Jeremiah Akaluk, Eskimo of the Fort Severn band of Indians, one of the patients. Chief Akaluk, who accidentally shot himself while tending a beaver trap, was brought to the hospital by Maj. Brosseau.—(CP Photo.)

BLOW STAGGERS COMMUNISM

News of the voting in East Germany in which more than a third of the voters cast their ballots in this Soviet-controlled part of the country against the Reds' policy is taken as a very severe blow at Moscow, so much so as to stagger the Communist mind. At a time when the Soviet desired to impress the world with the strength of Communism the showing was such that it may have an effect in a drastic change of plans for the forthcoming meeting of the Four Powers at Paris.

Over four million voters of the approximately twelve million made a clear demonstration of their stand which does not approve Communist rule and plan.

The result is seen in an accession of real strength to the plans of the British, Americans and French at the forthcoming meetings.

Russia's course of late has given indications that she is not only finding lack of support in her program but strong and outspoken opposition such as this expression which has come from the Soviet-dominated sector of Germany.

CATS AND DOGS

There are more dogs than there used to be, registration proves. But are there as many cats? Cats do seem less numerous than they used to be when they were quite evident on the lawns. If they are less numerous, what is the reason? Is it because there is a shirting of population which has not provided accommodation for the family cat? Dogs have a close attraction for human beings and they are not forgotten when a family moves. Cats are unfortunately for themselves not always so well cared for. It is in the late season not a rare thing to find a young kitten following someone in the dusk, no doubt with the hope that it will find entry into some place which is warm. But of late are fewer cats, it is because there is a change in fashion, meaning that the cat has ceased to be so attractive in the home? Is it that cats have fallen into disfavor because of the inroads they make on bird life which is so essential to the crops or that the cat is thought more dispensible than the dog? Or does the cat, loving the chair and other upholstered furniture more within doors or is there not so much rich upholstery upon which to recline as there used to be in the days when there was no housing shortage?

Puss is admittedly more self-willed than the dog whose devotion is a fact proven for ages and the dog does not kill birds. He may chase them but the chase is not to catch them. The cat will help their masters capture game but not in the spirit with which the cat lies in wait for birds as their prey. For some cats it may be said that they are spoiled and seem to enjoy the lap of luxury too well to go marauding the young bird population, but these would be the exceptions, so long continued in association with the lives of their masters and mistresses that hunting birds would be too much of an effort. Such naturally are not so many as those that follow the ancestral inclination of stalking birds and catching mice. In the latter occupation they serve well.

A writer in the Hamilton Spectator notes that discussion of this question stirred considerable bitterness in the expression of opinions in Illinois where it became quite an issue whether cats should have their wanderings controlled at certain seasons, one of course being the present spring season and the coming months, but the dogs have to sniff their remembered territorial at certain seasons. He favors a bell on a string around the neck of every cat to sound the alarm to birds of the cat's approach so that they will take fright and escape the possibility of being eaten. Of course very young birds, yet unable to fly far, would still be in danger but it is probable that there would be many of these fledglings on the ground that fall victims to cats.

The suggestion of belling the cat is as old as fableland. But it has not made much progress for the cat's friends are legion too.

Cats, as said before, do not seem to be in the numbers they used to be. At least not so much is seen of them, though Puss rightly will always have a large following of admirers who treasure these silky creatures for their independence of spirit and for the fact that through the ages the cat has been with the dog associated with mankind.

Affability, mildness, tenderness and a word which I would fain bring back to its original signification of virtue —I mean good nature—are of daily use; they are the bread of mankind and the staff of life.—John Dryden.

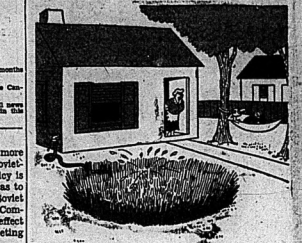
CARE



"Take care of yourself," the doctor said.
Whisperer you start to heed!
Remember at least eight hours in bed;
The strongest of men require."

"But what if there's something I ought to do
And need for my strength see?
If I lie sleeping the night long through
Will that be good for me?

"No, doctor!" said I. "What I must I'll do
Whatever the cost may be,
And from time to time I'll depend on you
To take good care of me."

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

FIRSTS

Probably, without question, the most notable first was man! Then came the firsts of all creation. The first of each animal, flower, tree, shrub, bird, and endless other firsts. Then the first piece of clothing was apparently but a leaf or so. And there were the first crude utensils for cooking and house keeping. And then the first wheel which initiated the machine age.

Some of us recall our first impressions of life. Even though life there are experienced firsts of an endless variety; recall the first time I noted a bird, and the first nest that thrilled me. My first day at school, my first love, and my first pair of long pants.

Thoreau in his Journal, wrote on February 5th 1852: "I suspect that the first flower that I shall see will flower with an insight into its beauty and significance which the subsequent ones cannot nevertheless."

I recall vividly the first book that I read — Louisa Alcott's "Old Fashioned Girl." I was so absorbed by it that I did not dare read another book for a long time for I knew I would never read one that could give me so much pleasure. I have, however, read things!

What a day that was when I first viewed my name on an office door as my own boss! I stepped into a new world that day. There, among other things, employee, my first thing to sell and my first customer. All of these thrilling firsts.

Lover of books that I am, after a few years, I became interested in first editions, which have absorbed years of my time, and happily so. A hobby that will certainly add years to my life span as it has to a great number of men and women before them, since once wrote that if you read a great book in its first edition the book never quite seems the same in other editions.

Our first view of many a noted historic sight is a rare experience. But the first view of the Grand Canyon of Arizona lingers in my memory, and I shudder at my first visits to such cities as New Orleans, San Francisco, Charleston, Miami, Los Angeles, Denver and San Antonio. My first view of the American and Canadian Rockies inspired me with wonder at the sight of so much grandeur and natural beauty. Firsts, however, are but steps to better things!

Mackenzie's Column: Pacific Defence Pact Ruled Out By Dean Acheson

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
Associated Press News Analyst

There likely will be some heart burnings, but need be no surprise, because State Secretary Dean Acheson has ruled out—at least for the present—any United States participation in a Pacific defence pact similar to the Atlantic treaty.

The proposition on which the Atlantic alliance is built are quite different from those obtaining in the Orient.

The secretary took note of that fact Wednesday when he held a news conference in Washington:

"While it is true that there are serious dangers in the world peace existing in the situation in Asia, it also is true, as Prime Minister Nehru of India stated to the press the other day, that a Pacific defence pact could not take shape until present internal conflicts in Asia were resolved."

Greatest Threat

In the first place the Atlantic treaty covers a theatre which represents the greatest immediate threat to the western democracies. True, the Orient in due course will get one. The very first emergence— attack which we most certainly can't ignore. However, that already have made a start in Europe, that must be our main immediate concern.

Then, too, the Atlantic treaty covers a compact front, presenting a far more formidable defence. While many of the members are weak militarily, yet by and large they are at peace internally.

The picture in the Orient is far different. Many of the countries in that huge area are in revolution—China, Burma, Malaya, Indonesia. Chief of these, of course, is China with her population of 500,000,000. As Acheson points out, the dangers of Asia are those revolving about the present conditions of that country.

Behind the Pacific allience doesn't indicate lack of interest in that vital area. On the contrary, Acheson states that the United States and Britain are working in touch with Chinese developments.

ANGINA PECTORIS

In my opinion (says a distinguished cardiologist) no doctor should tell a patient he has angina pectoris. Then what should the doctor tell the patient? The cardiologist tells him: "You do not have angina pectoris but you have a temporary anoxemia of a portion of your myocardium." This says the cardiologist, impresses the patient with the doctor's vast knowledge and seems to satisfy most patients and even physicians.

Well why not? After all, angina pectoris, pectoris dolor or breast pain is probably due to anoxia—at least this is the most plausible explanation for the attack. Anoxia is absence or lack of oxygen or sufficient oxygen to satisfy the constant demand for it. Anoxemia means lack or insufficient oxygen in the blood—for instance carbon monoxide asphyxia; which occurs when more than half of the oxygen ordinarily present in the blood is replaced or displaced by carbon monoxide and that degree of anoxemia occurs when the victim breathes only a few breaths of air containing one part of carbon monoxide in a hundred parts of air.

Bear in mind that anoxia of the myocardium—heart muscle or heart wall, which has to work at least every alternate second to maintain good circulation, does not just anoxemia is responsible for the attack. Anoxia is absence of pure oxygen sufficient to saturate the blood when oxygen will not help much if anything prevents or limits delivery of oxygen to the heart muscle.

The heart is supplied with blood by coronary arteries arteries, so called, because in appearance the right and left coronary arteries encircle the heart (coronary) or wreath.

The pain and distress of angina pectoris whether induced by effort or by emotion is probably due to spasmodic contraction of the coronary arteries or branches of them. We know that actual narrowing of the calibre of these arteries and slowing of the circulation through them account for coronary occlusion (shutting off the blood supply of the portion of heart wall and blocked artery should nourish) or coronary thrombosis (stone or occlusion, the artery being obstructed by clot of the blood in it).

For these reasons I earnestly believe that every individual who is subject to angina to carry always a few nitroglycerin tablets in the drop one in the mouth whenever or wherever he or she may feel the first hint of approaching or distress. Official name for nitroglycerin is glyceryl trinitrate. It applies to explosives manufacture as well.

The real doctor expressed it in an address before an audience of physicians:

"It is my belief that patients with coronary insufficiency can be saved many times and many lives for many years with the assistance of glyceryl trinitrate used not only during the attack of pain but prophylactically."

Prophylactically he means that such patients should take a tablet of nitroglycerin (glyceryl trinitrate) before they go for a walk in cold weather or against the wind or before they undertake any unusual effort.

Some persons find 1-100 grain tablets of nitroglycerin too powerful—they dislike the characteristic flushing and throbbing of the head that occurs a minute or two after the tablets are put in the mouth. O.K.—it last only a few minutes, shows the medicine is still active. But if the effect is too disagreeable use half strength tablets instead —1-200 grain each. Or cut a 1-100th grain tablet in halves and take half the tablet at a time.

If your druggist will sell you dozen nitroglycerin tablets without cross-examination, well and good. If not, there's nothing more I can do about it.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Not Communicable

Does any one know whether cancer is or is not communicable disease? (M. F. F.)

Answer—It is not communicable. Ordinary soap and water disinfectants is the best protection against any possible harm to those who live with or attend the patient. Ordinary laundering dry cleaning, sunning and airing of clothing, bed linen, furniture etc., is all that is necessary in the way of disinfection.

Switch to Milk

Cracked corners of mouth, heal but open again .... perhaps I drink too much coffee and beer, (P.I.F.)

Answer—Your description suggests pernicious deficiency anemia in one of the B vitamins of which little is present in coffee or beer. You would get an adequate daily intake of riboflavin if you would make it a rule to consume not less than three glasses (1 1-2 pints) of fresh milk daily; or its riboflavin equivalent in cheese, eggs, liver, wheat germ, plain whole grain cereals, dried beans, dried peas, ham, bacon, sardines, etc.

Strength for the Day

A large copper company in this country has, for a generation, been going deep into the earth to get ore. A few years ago they discovered, five miles from their largest mine, a mountain of solid copper ore. This has been mining there through the years to be scooped up without any complicated mining procedure and used.

This is of course just another version of the old story of Aladdin's "Acres of Diamonds," which Russell Conwell gave over a hundred times to appreciative audiences. It is the story of a man who found diamonds all over the world and at last found them on his own property. The copper company delved deep into the earth for ore, and all the time better ore was waiting for the shoveling of a few miles away.

Success, indulgence, opportunity for travel, high office — how we long for these and sometimes strive for them; yet the common joys of life which are a thousand times better, are right at hand, awaiting our use. To whom do the beauties of nature belong? The grandeur of the sunset? To the rich who can afford to travel and appreciate them. What is more precious than to love and be loved? These are common joys open to us entirely apart from wealth, fame, or station. These are the rich ores waiting above ground to be used.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

One of the comic aspects of the struggle between industrialists and socialism — which won't be decided until our grandchildren are chuckling over history — is that while the socialists are sweating blood over the rising tide of socialism, they are promoting for all they are worth the psychological frame of mind in the public which makes socialism look attractive.

Day after day the efforts of industrialists, life has become so mechanized, everything is so standardized and packaged for our comfort, that the vast majority of mankind is rapidly becoming conditioned to packets and packages. In the chain stores, you never see whole sides of beef, whole hogs. You see nothing but the tidy small cuts, neatly cellophaned. No rude bag of potatoes confronts you at the grocery, only packages of the soil. It's all in little packets.

Nobody any more saws wood, carries water. Nobody walks. The percentage of mankind that has to heave and haul and pull and lift, grows smaller every year. Machines do it. Even detrials for years have been intent on reducing the overhead. We, ourselves, are mechanized.

Life is being enormously simplified, mechanized, packaged. Every year, it becomes easier, simpler to eat, move, sleep, buy, sell, amuse ourselves, dress think, feel. We can get our ideas from packets. We can get our social and political beliefs from attractive little packages, just the right size to fit into the frig, not too clumsy not likely to spoil, and easily replaced at the drug store when used up . . . what more could any man desire?

The probability is that none of us like to do any thinking if we can get out of it. It's too much like work,

Famous Brigade of Guards To Wear Full Dress on All Public Duties After June 1st

By NORMAN CRIBBINS
Central Press Staff Writer

London, May 19 (CP) — From June 1 the famous brigade of Guards, consisting the Grenadiers, the Coldstreams, the Scots, Irish and Welsh Guards, will wear full dress on all public duties in London.

The new order, made in response to public clamor and considerable press propaganda, will restore color and dignity to such popular landmarks as Buckingham Palace, St. James's Palace, Marlborough House and home of Queen Mary.

Now with the long-awaited return to fullness for the brigade of guards' staff officers have a knotty problem to solve.

For at least a decade ceremonial dress has not been manufactured and not all the old stock survived the war. In fact, however, sufficient for the trooping of the colors, June 9, the brigade's celebration of the official birthday anniversary of the King, when Colonel-in-Chief of the five regiments of foot guards.

Regimental tailors have spent months outfitting guardsmen for this occasion. Many of the younger men have never worn the bearskin headgear or the tightly-fitting scarlet tunic.

There was not time to fit out the British Guards, recently returned from Tripoli. They would have had to parade in battledress, which did not appeal to the traditionconscious brigade of guards. So the parade now is being performed by a mixed company of Grenadiers, 3rd Coldstream Guards and the Scots, Irish and Welsh Guards.

There will be rehearsals of the trooping of the color June 1 and 2. The King will inspect the troops and take the salute at the ceremony.

The 3rd Battalion Grenadier Guards, which left for Malaya last September, is to be withdrawn from there and is expected back in London early in August.

FOG DELAYS ARRIVAL OF LINER QUEEN MARY

The ship, due to dock at 11 a.m. EDT, was held up during the morning at Ambrose Light, near the harbor entrance.

If the fog lifts the Queen Mary is expected to dock at 5 p.m.

Aboard her are two British football teams, a Scottish international team and the Newcastle United Club, both of which will play a series of games in Canada and the United States.

Claims Govt. Has No Right To Income Tax

Montreal, May 18 — (CP) — Russel Roger Smith of suburban Verdun, who claims the Canadian government has no constitutional right to collect income taxes, today awaited hearing Friday on four charges of neglecting to file tax returns for the years 1944-47.

Smith, who formerly lived in Saskatoon, was fined $250 May 3 for neglecting to file his return for 1943 after being officially notified by government authorities last January.

Maximum penalty for the offence is $25 for each day that a taxpayer fails to file his return after official notification.

MARMORA

Sodality Sacred Heart Church Presents Comedy

Marmora—Marmora Town Hall was filled to capacity on Monday evening for the presentation of "Say It With Music", a hilarious comedy in three acts, presented by the Sodality of Sacred Heart Church. The cast included several who were making their first appearance in a dramatic role, and are to be congratulated on the pleasing manner in which they took their various parts.

It was one of the funniest comedies ever put on for a Marmora audience and the large crowd greatly enjoyed it. The Musical Travelogue put on between the second and third acts, drew much favorable comment. Miss Verna Black, president of the Sodality, and director of the play is deserving of much credit. She was presented with a bouquet of American Beauty roses.

The prospective tenant, Miss Veronica Wharton.

The entire action of the play takes place in the living room of the Kernan family in a medium sized town in the Middle West.

Specialties: Opening chorus, entire cast. Between Acts I and II—The Little Old Mill, Miss Janet Hughes; Miss Anna Clairmont. Between Acts II and III—Musical Travelogue, entire cast with Miss Mary Quinlan, Miss Joan Belanger, Miss Anne Clairmont, Miss Janet Hughes, Miss Dorothy Logan, narrator, Miss Verna Black.

There will also be a presentation in Frankford on May 20th.

FRENCH SETTLEMENT TO VOTE

Chandernagore, May 18 (Reuters) — The French government has decided that Chandernagore, French settlement with 30 miles north of Calcutta, should hold a referendum June 19 to decide whether to merge with India or not. Chandernagore has a population of about 49,000.

Fleeing Russia, Crash-Lands In Sweden

Stockholm, May 19 (AP) — Stockholm newspapers said today a Russian army pilot crash-landed his fighter plane on Swedish soil last night, and said that he had fled his country because he was "tired of the Soviet Union."

The newspaper Stockholms-Tidningen quoted the pilot as saying his wife already had been sent to Siberia by the Soviet regime, and he had no children upon whom reprisal might be taken.

He planned his escape carefully, and took off from a Baltic air base near Riga, the papers said.

His aircraft, carrying three loaded machine-guns, hit a mountain on the edge of the Soderstoern military airport outside Stockholm, and tumbled end-over-end, but the pilot suffered only minor injuries.

Brandon Police Tackle Problem of Delinquents

Brandon, Man. (CP)— The work of the Brandon city police prisoners' rehabilitation committee is summed up by Chief constable Harry Collister in the words: "A man needs help when he gets out of jail and we try to give it to him."

Chief Collister organized the committee himself. He says success has drawn praise from police authorities and penologists across the continent. In the few months since the committee's formation, seven men have found jobs without fear of them when they completed sentences in the provincial jail here.

In every case the job has been one suited to the abilities of the man concerned; in every case the men have continued to work as responsible, law abiding citizens.

In addition, more than 20 transients, men headed for the life of the vagrant — the social misfit who drifts from city to city, leaving each one with a warrant hanging over his head — have been placed in suitable employment or helped on their way with a meal and an encouraging word.

The method for such a committee was brought to Chief Collister's attention last summer when a young Brandon man returned to the city after serving a penitentiary term.

He said that after his release he had tried to get a job in another city, but could find no one who would hire an ex-convict. He had then applied for jobs without telling his employer about his record, but these had lasted only until his employer found him out. Very often the employer found out when police came to see him every time certain types of crimes were committed in the city.

"He told me he had to make a living for his family and if he couldn't make it honestly he would make it the other way," Chief Collister said.

Basic Interview

The committee consists of the chief, detective Jack Dennis and Detective Constable J. Forbes. When a man nears the end of his sentence one of the committee interviews him at the jail.

The committee man decides first whether or not the prisoner can be rehabilitated; then whether he intends to stay in Brandon. So far no attempt has been made to find jobs for men in other centres.

With the first two questions answered satisfactorily, the man's abilities, experience and interests are surveyed; then local employers are canvassed. In every case the employer is told that the man has "done time" but he is asked not to make this fact known to other workers.

Much of the credit for the success of the experiment should go to the employers," Chief Collister says. "We have had wonderful co-operation and without their help there is little we could do."

Behind the work of this committee and other activities which Chief Collister has started in the two years he has headed the Brandon force is his conviction that a police force can accomplish much more through education than it can coercion.

Recently he has visited every school in the city. He has stressed the fact in talking to pupils that the policeman is a friend of the people. He urges the children to come to the police with their problems and to be friendly with the man on the beat.

Stresses Publicity For Overseas Trade

London, May (CP) — Trade tip for British exporters who want to sell cutlery in Canada: watch your publicity, Miss Bjorgvetin Lee Wisner, back in Britain after establishing an office in Montreal, says Canadians are mostly influenced by advertising.

"For instance," she said, "they will not look at English table knives with plain handles because they have been led to believe fancy handls are smart and up-to-date."

Talk on Nursing Education Given Hospital Aux.

Mrs. McDonald, director of nurses, informed the members of the Hospital Auxiliary at their monthly meeting, held on Tuesday and presided by the president, Mrs. G. Scott, held at the Fox, a graduate of 1948 class, had made application for the 1949 five-hundred-dollar Nurses Scholarship, provided by the auxiliary. Miss Fox, it was said, had met all the requirements of the scholarship and it was approved at the meeting that Miss Fox be presented with the scholarship. Mrs. Scott, in making the presentation, thanked the auxiliary, she has made application to attend the School of Nursing at the Western University.

Miss Jewel Bailey, the recipient of last year's scholarship has completed the course at the School of Nursing at Western University and is attached to Belleville Hospital on June 7th.

A very gratifying financial business report of the Opportunity Shop was given by Mrs. H. Wray. This shop will be closed from May 28th until October. Dues were collected by Mrs. R.O. Elliott for the Blue Cross, and the date stressed for the nurses graduation exercises, which will be held at the Collegiate on Wednesday, June 1st.

Items Set-Ups

Miss Dorothy Markle, introduced by Mrs. Scott, and later thanked by Mrs. Bradford, spoke on nursing education. She stressed the need for a rich full life for the nursing student, which meant better nursing. Many were the changes since 1860, when Florence Nightingale of England first began nursing education, per cent. This is a great deal of money to be raised in such a short time, but the Red Cross is confident that the people of Canada will not fail them in this hour of need.

V.O.N. Raises Basic Visit Fee To $1.50 to Take Care of Costs

The regular monthly meeting of the Belleville Branch of the V.O.N. was held in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday night with Mr. T. Ruston as chairman.

The secretary read the report sent by Mr. Douglas Burr, the convener of the tag day committee in which he reported a final total of $623 had been received in Belleville and Camilton. Mr. Burr thanked the members of the committee for their efforts and mentioned in his report the generosity of the taggers and the generosity public.

Mrs. Thornbury, convener of the finance committee, stated in view of the fact, that for some years past, the fee charged for nursing services had not covered the cost of the visit, the committee recommended that the fee be raised to $1.50 per visit. This recommendation was accepted by the meeting and it was decided to raise the basic fee to $1.50 a visit. It was said that this increase only affects those people who are able to pay the full fee, as others paid only what they were able to afford in each case.

Resolution Proposed

Mr. Thornbury also brought in the following resolution from his committee which was unanimously elected to the Board of Governors of Belleville Branch of the Red V.O.N.

"As there is a distinct problem in most hospitals relating to the nursing staff, be it resolved that a committee be formed to look into the feasibility of setting up a close relationship between V.O.N. for Canada and the Blue Cross Hospital Plan, with benefits in hospital, receiving Blue Cross benefits, subject to the doctor's discretion be transferred to their homes under the care of V.O.N. without loss of benefit."

April Report

Miss McGeary then gave her report.

There were 45 new patients admitted to the service, bringing the total to date to 323 as compared with 289 in previous year. 1,900 visits were made in April, bringing the total to date to 1,762 an increase of 138 over the same period last year of 81. The greatest number of visits continues to be to the groups suffering from chronic illness and cancer. Visits to these groups having more than doubled 466 visits this year, 244 last year to same date.

The local branch was happy to take advantage of the offer of Canadian Cancer Association to provide free dressings for cancer patients. These dressings are obtained by writing to the Provincial Cancer Committee of the Canadian Cancer Association.

Need For Co-operation

The nurse stressed the need for mutual co-operation among health agencies, and other agencies in the related fields of welfare, and the need for nurses and board members to be familiar with the value of services offered by other groups working in the interests of the community, and to strengthen their benefit by interpreting their function to the public.

Four baby conferences were held in April, with an attendance of 39 babies. One dental clinic at which 23 children were immunized.

Because of Easter holidays only nine visits were made to the school and during the month 24 physical defects were reported to parents. Thirty-five Red Cross packs were found and reported to parents. Three V.O.N. pamphlets to the Rotary Club on Nursing.

Delegates Give Support

The delegates to the annual meeting of the Board of Governors of V.O.N. for Canada brought back very interesting reports. Mrs. Thornbury and Mrs. G. W. Anderson reported on the topics discussed and mentioned in the round table conferences and the Public Relations Association and publicity received a good deal of attention. Ontario and Saskatoon branches brought invitations to hold the annual meeting in their respective cities next year. A good deal of discussion centred around the need to small branches sending delegates from the county districts. Decision regarding the place of meeting was left with the Board of Governors.

Mr. Ruston reported on the sessions held at Government House and mentioned the Association's appreciation of Belleville V.O.N. patrons, Their Excellencies, Lord Tweedsmuir of Belsize and Lady Alexander. Their Excellencies were present at the last session, to the delegates and nurses.

The report on two guest speakers was left over to the next meeting.

Mr. Ruston introduced Miss Ruth Thompson, who is a graduate nurse from U. of T. Miss Thompson, who intends to return to her native town of St. John to carry on public health work spoke briefly of the field work experience she was receiving in Belleville, and thanked the Board members for the privilege of attending the meeting.

85 Years Old

Mrs. Elizabeth Alexander, 312 Church Street, and widow of Joseph Alexander, who died 26 on Wednesday. Her daughter, Mrs. Mary McKenzie of the Edmonton Bulletin, and a brother, Samuel Rowland of Pittsburg, Pa., have come for the celebration of her natal day.

Mrs. Eliz. Alexander Receives Messages On 85th birthday

Well-known resident of the city, Mrs. Elizabeth Alexander, 312 Church Street, observed the 85th anniversary of her birthday on Wednesday. A large number of friends and relatives called with her to celebrate her natal day.

Both Mrs. Alexander and her husband, who predeceased her 16 years ago, were born in County Antrim, Northern Ireland. They were schoolmates and both migrated to United States where they were married, later coming to Belleville. Mr. Alexander was a former employee of the Belleville Public Utilities.

Mrs. Alexander was born to the union, a daughter, Mary, now Mrs. McKenzie, Edmonton, Alta., and a son, James, of the city. Two brothers reside in Chester, Ireland, and another in Pittsburgh, U.S.A. Mrs. Alexander was one of a family of seven raised on a County Antrim farm.

Many cards and telegrams and many birthday cards and floral tributes on the occasion of her birthday. Her daughter, Mrs. McKenzie of Edmonton, and a brother, Mr. Sam Stewart, Pittsburgh, were present for the celebration.

Auxiliary Plans June Garden Party

Mrs. J. W. Imlah will be convener for the garden party to be held at the home of Mrs. G. H. Stobie on June 18th, and plans were discussed by the Hospital Auxiliary for the June meeting occasion, when it is hoped members and all friends will attend.

Tabernacle CGIT and Explorer Groups Hold Chinese Banquet

On Tuesday evening the CGIT and Explorer groups, with their mothers, of the Tabernacle Unit-ed Church, enjoyed a banquet in a beautifully decorated Sunday School hall at 6p.m. decorated tables, lovely bright colors prevailed in the Club's colors of blue and white, formed a canopy over-head, while the platform was a veritable flower garden with its baskets of lilies and baskets of lilacs, and apple blossoms. Over the door hung the Club's banner.

The year's mission theme of "China" was carried out in the table decorations with that of the dainty grocery under the leadership of Shirley Taylor, being centred with a Chinese gong and dishes. The place cards were made from marshmallows with coloured sleeves representing the holders. Above the table hung bright colored Chinese lanterns.

Attractive Table Settings

Miss Elva Coughlin's girls used a color scheme of yellow and black. One end of the table held a pagoda with little Chinese figures holding the banners. Down the centre of the table, Chinese girls riding in rickshaws, carried a church with their mothers. The place cards were represented by little umbrellas, supported in baskets of eated nuts. The favors for the girls consisted of Chinese dolls.

At Miss Joan Harbeck's table, the junior girls used Chinese fans on each corner, and the table was centred by a lake with little Chinese boats surrounded by blue fields. Blue and white streamers and apple blossoms from the trees with dolls and little dolls formed table decorations. The place cards were small fans holding cargoes of candy.

Miss Eleanor's group achieved beautiful floral effect by the use of blossoms down the table centre, the place cards were Chinese coolies, which the girls made, with the assistance of Miss Grace Firth, their leader.

Following the banquet, at which the supervising servers were: Miss Ethel Horton and Miss Thelma Schlievert, a program was enjoyed.

Guests Welcomed

Miss Florence Nelson, departmental president, welcomed the guests, and asked Mrs. Joan Harbeck to propose a toast to the King. Miss Jerry Jerome proposed the toast to the King, which Mrs. Ed. Schlievert ably responded on behalf of the church session. The Misses Wanda and Wilma Lodge provided a delightful duet number "Miles From the Vienna Woods."

Miss Joan Harbeck proposed a toast to the Sunday School to which Mr. A. D. Archibald responded, giving the history of the starting of the Sunday School. This was followed by an enter-

MOUNTAIN VIEW

Floral Tribute Placed on Veteran's Grave

Mountain View—A special service was conducted at the church recently with Mr. Alfred Foster, district superintendent, presiding. The supplement program was followed throughout the service with Mrs. Carl Neil reading the story.

An interesting address was given by Mr. Foster, after which the latter part of the regular Sunday School lesson was studied. Following this, Mr. Eleanor Sprague, Pauline Sprague, and Maureen Neil rendered a lovely musical numbers.

The beautiful Spring flowers which had been placed on the altar were taken to the cemetery nearby, and placed on the grave of George Neil, a veteran of the last war, by Mrs. Philip Hamilton, in tribute to those who gave their lives that others might live.

Mrs. Neil, superintendent of the Sunday School, was also present.

Red Smudge Still Lipstick Evidence

Vancouver May (CP) — The well-kissed man will just have to keep on wearing the evidence—lipstick will never be kiss-proof.

So says Miss Hazel Jemison, representative of an eastern cosmetic firm who recently conducted a two-day cosmetic training class here.

Which means, gents, the wife will know whether that red smudge on your collar or a "right out with the boys" is ketchup, a grog blossom or "pink camellia."

Butter Subsidized For British Sales

Wellington May (Reuters) — The New Zealand dairy products marketing commission will pay producers four shillings and sixpence (90 cents) per pound based weight for butter than it realizes from sales to Britain, which new guaranteed prices come into effect June 1.

The increase is based on an arbitration court's wage decision, and puts up by 1.359 pence per pound the price of butterfat, to 38.146 pence for making butter, and 36.146 pence for making cheese.

LIFT CARROT RESTRICTIONS

Ottawa, May 18 — (CP)—The Revenue Department announced Tuesday night the lifting of restrictions on the import of carrots with tops into Newfoundland, Prince Edward Island, New Brunswick, Nova Scotia, Quebec and Ontario effective May 22. The imports were banned under emergency import control regulations while the carrots were in good supply.

Queen of the May at Alma College this year is Miss Jean Jarvis (above) daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Tennyson Jarvis of Glenallan, Grimsby. She will be crowned at annual May festival at Alma College, St. Thomas, on Saturday next.—Globe and Mail.

Gleanings From WCTU Meetings

(Contributed by Mrs. F. O. Bennett, City)

Each year in Canada there is an army of approximately 240,000 young men and women with the flame of freedom in their souls and light of knowledge in their eyes marching into citizenship. These new troops as they reach the age of twenty-one years assume the full responsibilities and duties of Canadian citizenship. They take the place of those who have passed on and our substitute their zeal and zest for such experience and wisdom as they replace.

These young people march into the world prepared for them by those already citizens and a state of society in which they have had no direct part in shaping.

Among the institutions awaiting them they will find the elaborate legal set-up authorized by the laws of the Dominion and the various provinces, for the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor the use of which they have been more or less warned against. This set-up was established by those citizens who preceded them for no other reason than the gratification of their own appetites and desires.

That great religious statesman, Dr. William Temple, in an address given shortly before his death, spoke of the influences that operate in the formation of character, particularly in regard to the teen age. He said there are four: the home, the school, the church, and the community.

Too often the young life nurtured in the home, instructed in the school, inspired by the church, goes out into the community and there come in contact with the influences and forces that nullify what has been built into that life in the home, the church and the school. He pleaded for the creation of community conditions that would complement and supplement the work of the home, the school and the church, and not be antagonistic to it.

Among these community influences none is more potential for evil and more powerful for striking down and undoing than the modern Ontario beverage rooms and cocktail bars. The citizens are moving the most tempting bait to the youth of Ontario. The whirlwind of crime and sorrow will be the harvest.

There are two modern heresies: moderation and nationalization. One is born of a desire to continue liquor drinking and yet avoid suffering from the evil consequences of intemperance, and the other to continue the selling of liquor and avoid the consequences resultant from liquor sale.

One would make liquor drinking fashionable, the other would make liquor selling respectable.

Strange as it may seem, the most voluble advocates of moderation are liquor manufacturers and sellers. The inexperienced youth are often duped into drinking by the moderation pleas. The liquor manufacturers and sellers are far too wary to attempt enticing the inexperienced by the poor enslaved victim of alcohol.

There is the constant effort on the part of humanity to find a way to make sinning safe; to discover a method of doing wrong and yet escaping the consequences of wrong doing.

The Ontario citizens spent $223,454,000 for liquor in 1946. This was $77.28 per capita (20 years and over). In 1946 the average citizen of Ontario consumed 259 glasses of whiskey; 25 glasses of wine; 450 glasses of beer. That is each person drank 675 glasses of intoxicating liquor in one year.

RAWDON

Mrs. P. MacMullen Gives Interesting Address to C.G.I.T.

Rawdon.—Mrs. Percy MacMullen, Mission Circle Secretary, of Belleville Presbyterial, was guest speaker Tuesday evening, last at the third meeting of St. Paul's C.G.I.T. group under the direction of Miss Mary Hulin.

The girls took charge of the meeting and the lunch committee served refreshments. The leader conducted the games which all enjoyed. The meeting was held in the church parlor with over 30 in attendance.

Mrs. MacMullen gave "Highlights" of the recent branch conference held at Bancroft and gave interesting items from the addresses of Rev. Dr. McMurray, Mrs. F. R. Harris, Mrs. James Lauchland, Mrs. M. H. Richards, Miss Jessie Bowman, Rev. R. G. Katzenoff and Miss Ila Newman. She also gave interesting items which would help the girls in their C.G.I.T. work.

Miss Helen Stapley extended thanks to Mrs. MacMullen and the singing of Taps closed the meeting.

Line Up Physique With Disposition

London May (CP) — Men can be divided, says the Marriage Council, into three physical types each with corresponding temperaments.

They are:

Endomorph: Having a large abdomen and chest cavity, and tending to run fat. Corresponding temperament characterized by love of comfort and food and greed for affection. When troubled needs company.

Ectomorph: Having a tall, slim figure with flat chest and appearance of fragility. Corresponding temperament: Restrained in manner, dislikes social activities, quiet and intent. When troubled seeks solitude.

Mesomorph: Having a predominance of bone and muscle, tough and strong. Corresponding temperament: assertive, energetic, direct and outspoken. When troubled needs action.

Is this not alarming? The liquor interests are on alert. Every D.P. on arrival at Halifax is given a folder by a prominent "Brewary Firm." That must be impression on the stranger entering our fair land. Why not give the newcomer a "New Testament" in his or her own language?

Arise citizens of Ontario and fight this monster evil. Let everyone realize the blood of the youth that auccumbs to the temptation is upon those who establish and allow the maintenance of the traps for youth.

Young Couple Honored by Lovely Shower

About 50 guests gathered at the home of Mrs. T. F. Cummings, Station Street, on Wednesday evening, to honor Mr. and Mrs. Ivan Reid, (nee Ida Cummings), who were recently married, with a miscellaneous shower.

The attractive tea table was centred with a crystal vase of tulips and here and there about the dining room, other vases of Spring flowers gave forth their soft fragrance.

Those who later served the refreshments included, Miss Agnes Lucas, Miss Nellie Hamilton, Miss Doris Cooney and Miss Lillian Cummings.

The first part of the evening was spent playing various games, after which the Reverend J. N. Patterson of the Standard Church and Mrs. Patterson rendered a pleasing duet.

Miss Reid, covered in pink and white, was then carried in by two young ladies, Miss Norma Reid and Miss Eva Nickol, and presented to John and Ida, who were kept busy unwrapping the many lovely gifts and thanking the givers for their many good wishes enscribed on the cards which accompanied the tangible evidences of regard.

Before the departure of the guests, the Reverend J. N. Patterson and Mrs. Patterson favored with another selection, Mrs. Patterson playing the accompaniment.

Women's Activities

WEST HUNTINGDON W.M.S.

Mrs. Frank Hammond was hostess for the May meeting of the W.M.S. with a fine pot luck dinner being served at noon, and at 2 p.m. the meeting was called to order by the president, who kindly gave the call to worship.

Mrs. McCurdy gave a reading "New Comers to Canada", and the roll call was answered by 16 members and two visitors. Mrs. G. Cooke read the lesson from 1st Cor. 15-26, with remarks on the same being given by Mrs. S. Wilson. The Watch Tower was opened by Mrs. Cooke and Mrs. Ashley, Mrs. Dan Cooke, Mrs. Frank Hammond, Mrs. George Cooke and Mrs. Barragar.

The business progress led in prayer, and Mrs. J. Moorcroft followed with a reading "The Gladness of Eastertide." Mrs. Clifford Green and Mrs. Mac Sarah Wilson favored with a lovely duet. "All the Way My Saviour Leads Me". Mrs. Volney Richardson, one of the visiting ladies, gave a reading.

The highlights of the W.M.S. convention which was held at Trenton were given by Mrs. Grant.

The study book was taken by Mr. Burgess, dealing with the chapter on "Literature for the Layman".

Mrs. G. Ashley and Mrs. Frank Hammond were appointed delegates for the W.A. convention to be held in Trenton on May 26th. Mrs. Mac Sarles, Mrs. W. Grant, and Mrs. G. Ashley were appointed to attend the district of the Sunday school convention in June, and the tea was set at 60c.

Cards of thanks were read from Mrs. Howard Cooke, Mrs. Harry Thompson, and Mrs. Floyd Sherfield.

Mrs. Clifford Green and Miss Sarah Wilson offered to prepare the program for the June meeting, and Miss Sarah Wilson gave a reading entitled, "It's not the Church for You."

Mrs. J. S. Wilson thanked Mrs. Hammond on behalf of those present for the hospitality and the privilege of using her home.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Has been "dead" for eight years

"I have felt like a dead woman for the eight years I have been married to my husband. Now I would like to live.

"In these words, a disticted wife and mother makes a plea as to whether she realizes it or not, that she has reached a definite decision about a matter which has been struggling for a long time.

"I was married very young to a man 20 years older than myself," she writes. "He was full of sweet talk, but I soon grew disillusioned and up until our third child was born.

"Now everything has changed. He is mean to me and the children, and never has a kind word for us. He says he has me where he wants me. He has often threatened to leave us and I have always begged and pleaded with him to stay, for I was worried how he would care of the children. But last week when he said again that he was leaving us, I found I really want him to go and told him so. He was surprised, as I have never taken my own part before. He says he was just fooling about going.

"But I really do want him to go. I hate him. All my people and his own say they don't know how I could live with such a man with such a mean disposition. He is always ridiculing me and calling me a bum for my gambles and never gives me any money. The children are nervous and afraid to talk when he is home. He is always promising them a good time or presents, and when the time comes he finds fault with them and walks out.

"I want a divorce so I know we will be better off without him. He makes good money and I told him to support the kids and I'll work. My mother is willing to help with the care of the children, who all go to school.

"What shall I do?"

In spite of the fact that this unhappy wife asks for advice, I believe, as I said in the beginning, that she actually has reached her own decision and it sounds to me like good sense. If this man's family has nothing good to say about him, and takes her part against him, it seems a fairly safe indication that he is not worth standing up for.

There will, however, inevitably be problems and real difficulties to be carefully handled in freeing this woman from her marital trap. She should have expert advice in planning the steps to be taken to accomplish this purpose, and a personal talk with someone competent to help her is the first important thing to do. Then she will write me a letter giving me her name and address so that I may send her a personal reply, I will be glad to tell her to whom she may go in her own vicinity for the advice she needs.

Jib Jacket

By ALICE ALDEN

ONE OF THE winners this season is the suit with the "jib jacket," that, as its name implies takes a jutting-out line. Here is Adele Simpson's three piece suit in honey beige alpaca that features her jib jacket with a cutaway front, standing collar, fly-away back and pocket cuffs. Despite all the nautical flavor, it is strictly a town suit. The high waisted skirt has diagonal hip flaps, and the blouse is in hymn Chantilly type lace over a flesh colored camisole crepe bodice.

MANAGING EDITOR DIES

Sault Ste. Marie, Mich., May 18 (AP)—John G. Zebelka, 47, managing editor of the Sault Ste. Marie Evening News and president of the Sault Chamber of Commerce, died today of a heart attack.

Son of Czechoslovakian immigrant family, Zabelka was brought to United States by his parents in 1912 as a boy of 10. He came to the News for a summer job in 1925 after two years at the University of Michigan, became city editor in 1929 and managing editor in 1939.

VILLAGE THREATENED

Guelph, May 18 (CP)— Fire which broke out in construction company sheds at nearby Rockwood Tuesday caused an estimated $15,000 damage and threatened the entire village before it was brought under control.

Equipment repairs prevented village firemen answering the call and help was summoned from Guelph. Sparks and flames from the main fire spread to an adjoining lumber company shed and roof. Guelph fire chief Charles Vince said that "if a row of nearby trees had caught fire the whole village might have been wiped out."

GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beekman

Not necessary to serve alcoholic beverages at wedding

Dear Mrs. Beekman:

I am being married next month, the ceremony to be followed by a wedding breakfast, and then a reception. At the breakfast we are having a toast with wine. Is it proper to have a wedding reception without serving any alcoholic beverage whatever? If so, have you any suggestions?

D. C.

Yes, certainly. It is proper to have a wedding reception and not serve any alcoholic beverage. There are many delicious, non-alcoholic punches, smooth blendings of fruit juices and sparkling water; usually poured over a block of ice in a large punch bowl. (Sparkling water is generally used in making the punch because it gives a pleasant tang.) One easy-to-make punch, very popular, has 1 case of grape juice; 1 quart of white grape juice, 2 quarts of orange ice, 1 quart of sparkling water, 1 pint of lemon juice. This, like most punches, is poured over a block of ice in the punch bowl; the lemon juice added gradually, as the orange ice melts. This quantity makes about 50-60 drinks. Some non-alcoholic punch recipes are based on iced tea, others on gingerale and the punches may be decorated with slices of fruit and mint leaves.

Instead of a punch ,or as an alternative to a punch, you may serve gingerale, a soft drink, root-beer, and/or other soft drinks. The bottles may be pretty arranged standing in large punch bowl of cracked ice, with rows of glasses, preferably of two sizes, placed conveniently "at hand".

Inviting him to your prom

I'd like to write a letter to a boy who lives out-of-town, inviting him to my Prom. What details should I write in this letter?

Lyn

Write him that you would like so much to have him come to your Prom . . . then every detail he should know to make his decision and his plans: the What (date, hour), Where, How (about the tickets; if any are to be procured, they are your responsibility and you'll have to have them), and, if you think necessary, a customary type of attire. If you don't know him very well, and aren't very sure about his accepting your invitation, write the first note as an invitation, then, after that, if convenient for him, you'll write further and definite plans in your note following his reply.

Each wedding attendant pays for her (or his) attire for the wedding

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Who pays for the gowns for the bridal party (maid of honor and bridesmaids) is it the responsibility of the bride's family?

And also who pays for the hire of the tuxedos for the ushers?

M. R.

Each bridal attendant pays for maid of honor and bridesmaids . . . pays for her own costume, even though every detail of that costume is chosen by the bride. (The attendants' flowers are planned by the bride-to-be and her mother, since they must harmonize with the general color scheme of the wedding, and these flowers are usually provided and paid for by the bride's parents.)

Also each of the groom's attendants . . . best man and ushers . . . provides and pays for the attire the groom prescribes for his attendants for the wedding. If an attendant rents the prescribed attire (and many, many do these days!) he pays the rental charge.

A Cap of Pink Rose Petals

By PRUNELLA WOOD

BARBARA BATES who plays in Warner Bros. pictures wears a new spring-into-summer hat, blithe accent for the black frills and the velvet bows are green.

Fashion Flashes

A collection of millinery looks like a flower show these days for flower trimming has emerged as the favorite hat garnish this spring. A youthful little cloche of smooth white straw, with the head has its brim filled with palest blue forget-me-nots, with the palest of pink roses jutting up in front.

New versions of the topper are very dressed up affairs. Black woolen is used for a shorter topper with jutting, flaring back. It is lined with iridescent red taffeta with huzzio fronts discloning the lining, as do the turn-back cuffs.

The whisper of taffeta gets louder all the while, with so many coats, suits and dresses of this crisp fabric on parade. Black rayon taffeta is used for a handsome suit, made with a fitted jacket with a deep jutting side-dipped peplum and a side draped skirt to complete the line.

Importance is attached to the quick acceptance of the cotton scarf so soon after its recent revival. Fine cotton is used for a smart square in snowy white with a bold overplaid of black in open block design that leaves a wide border of white.

Hands out ready to slip into beautiful gloves! A real beauty an import from France, is a 10-button gray suede with a tapered insert of violet suede covered with tiny gray suede violets.

No matter what materials may be promoted and indeed, win successful acceptance, in the long run it is the fine leather bag that registers year in and year out. A real beauty is of fine calf, a heart-shaped bag with bellows sides and a panier handle with raised, very wide tucks of the leather for ornamentation. Gilt jeweler's clasp and wide panier handle, beautiful fitting to match the clasp and a red satin lining tell this bag story.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

DEVELOPING THE BUST

Though "babies" are a consolation to the flat chested girl, she has a dislike for them; she has the same feeling about fashionable braids and bresses. She much prefers to keep her own facade and unbrosial locks. And now, with strapless formals, off-the shoulder effects, and the V cut that doesn't seem to know when it should stop, many women desires above all thinks to have a beautifully turned throat and a well-developed bosom.

A normal bust is dependent to a certain extent upon the foundations of the chest. The full chest depends upon correct posture, deep breathing and a strong musculature. When the shoulders fall forward the breasts are bound to lose tone. They will become anemic and will sag. Binding them too tightly with the brassiere will have the same effect as the fibers will become flat because depleted.

To normalize breasts that have never developed or that have lost youthful firmness, all exercises that lift them are beneficial. If you are among these special beauty seekers, give yourself five minutes of arm swinging exercises twice a day.

Stand tall, head high, tummy drawn in. Fold your fingers in the palms of your hands. Send the hand straight forward on a line with the shoulder. Swing it high, low and sideways — as if you were swinging a lasso. Use these hands on one hand, six with the other and repeat.

After the morning session lean over the bathtub, turn the cold spray on your chest.

After the slightly arm swinging, massage the breasts lightly with cocoa butter. Go round and round with fingertips and lift upward pressure. Be sure that the glands of the breasts are sensitive and delicate; take no possible chance of injuring them.

Air conditioning your lungs for only one minutes. Proper breathing is necessary to maintain the elasticity of the lung tissues. It is only when the chest expands that thorough ventilation of the lungs takes place. A full supply of oxygen chases out the stagnant, residual air, cleanses the cells of harmful by excretions, carries away body wastes.

When the air you are exhaling into the lowest cells, the head lifts naturally, the chest rises, the spine straightens, the shoulders assume an easy pose. Not only small breasts place, a narrow chest and prominent collar bones can

Two-Piece Costume

Blue blouse and rose skirt

By VERA WINGTON

COTTON is used to dramatic advantage in this young-and gay two-piece costume. Deep hot bright navy blue is used for the blouse that has a melon neck and shirred cuffs on the diminutive sleeves. The blouse buttons in back. The skirt is of rose colored cotton which makes a pretty color scheme. It has unpressed box pleats all around and the waistline is built up a bit, allowing a navy cord to slip through and tie in a neat bow in front.

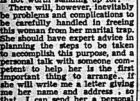
Surprise Party Honors Mother's Birthday

A happy surprise party was held at home of Mr. and Mrs. A. Soart, Burton Street, last Thursday evening, by her daughter, Helen, in honor of her mother's birthday.

During the evening, cards and dancing were the happy enjoyment of many, after which Mrs. Soart was presented with many lovely gifts, and a beautiful birthday cake by granddaughter, Linda Mary. Mrs. Soart was also the happy recipient of many cards of congratulation and good wishes from London, England, Newmarket, Trenton and neighboring towns.



The tea table was lovely with its Scotch lace cloth, centred with a silver deposit crystal bowl of beautiful tulips, daffodils, and fragrant narcissus from which the dainty refreshments were served.

The good wishes of her community friends are extended to Mrs. Soart for many more years of happiness.

Sparton PRESENTS The "TROVATORE"

The modern radio-phonograph that plays both regular and Columbia (Lp) Records

Here is the absolute ultimate in "Combination" reception — superlative record reproduction, faithful radio reception. You can choose the "Trovatore" in 4 fine finishes, knowing a full well that it surpasses all others in reproductive realism.

The "Trovatore" is chock-full of noteworthy advancements in radio-phonograph engineering and design. Outstanding among these is the sensationally new Sparton feature — dual speed mechanism, which enables you to play both standard and Columbia's new Long Playing records through a single tone arm. A single needle change is all that is required. With the "Trovatore" you can enjoy all the thrilling advantages of Long Playing records. In a Limed Oak Cabinet of exquisite design the "Trovatore" has 3 tube chassis, 12" deluxe speaker, to bring you both SW and standard broadcast reception. The Deluxe Record Changer plays 10-12" or 12-10" standard records.

The same model is available in walnut and is known as the "Faust."

News Notes From Frankford

The Frankford Young People's Union held their weekly meeting in Rose - Lowery Hall Monday evening. In the absence of President Shirley Smith, Past-president Phyllis Davis was in charge of the meeting. It was announced that in view of the long holiday weekend coming up, next week's meeting would be cancelled.

Lois Phillips, Christian Citizenship convener was in charge of the program. She read a poem. The latter part of the evening was devoted to practice for the coming variety program, May 30.

A discussion took place on the possibility of having Frankford Young People's Union present their three act play, with proceeds to go to the church building fund. Mr. Eugene Spencer, who won the Bata birthday cake at the skating ball, presented it to the W. A. as a donation. The cake was cut and packaged for distribution. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. Frank Rabel, and Mrs. Ferguson. Meetings for July and August are to be discontinued.

Personals

Frankford United Church Sunday School set a new record for attendance last Sunday. Stockdale Young Peoples' Union presented their one act temperance play "The Whirlwind" for the Frankford Sunday School. The play very forcibly illustrated the lesson intended, and was greatly enjoyed by all.

Messrs. Clinton Lohnes, and his mother-in-law, Mrs. Paddie of Toronto, were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Offenburger.

Concert Enjoyed

All who attended the concert in Batawa Recreation Hall Friday evening were treated to one of the finest musical presentations ever seen in the district. Featured artists, were members of the Bridge Street United Church choir in Belleville, presented under the auspices of the Batawa W. A. in support of the new Batawa Church.

Mr. Palmer Sheridan of Batawa welcomed the choir. He pointed out that many fine arts such as music, form an important part in our lives, for "Man does not live by bread alone." The choir opened the concert with the singing of the King." All joined in the singing of the old familiar hymn, "Onward Christian Soldiers."

Miss Joyce Woodcox presented Miss Leona Riggs, choir director, with a bouquet of flowers. Rev. H. E. Lackey spoke a few words of appreciation to the choir and assisting artists. Assisting artists included Dr. A. C. Locke, violinist; Helen Cook, soprano; W. J. Burgoyne, contralto; W. B. Bankier, tenor; Mr. George Wishart, bass. All joined in the singing of "O Canada."

Following the concert, refreshments were served in the lounge room of the recreation hall for the choir and assisting artists.

The congregation of the Batawa Church, the official board, and all friends are truly grateful to all participating artists for a very fine evening of entertainment and inspiration.

SEES NOTHING ILLEGAL IN GIFT OF MARGARINE TO ASBESTOS STRIKERS

Quebec, May 15 — (CP) — A special government official Tuesday night said there was nothing illegal in a recent gift of 1,000 pounds of margarine to Asbestos strikers. The government official said manufacture and sale of margarine were banned by order-in-council March 19 but that season was not illegal. Neither was transportation of margarine unless it was to make a sale.

BLUE RIBBON COFFEE is extra good!

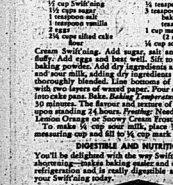
Your family will love you for baking this easy BANANA CAKE!

Creaming Method
½ cup Swift'ning
1½ cups sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1 teaspoon vanilla
2 eggs
3¼ cups sifted cake flour
1 cup sour milk or buttermilk
1½ teaspoons baking soda
1 cup mashed bananas
(2 medium bananas)
½ cup sour milk or buttermilk



Yields Two 9-inch layers
½ teaspoon salt
3 teaspoons baking powder (or 1 teaspoon soda and 2 teaspoons sour milk)

Cream Swift'ning. Add sugar, salt and vanilla. Cream until fluffy. Add eggs and beat well. Sift together flour, soda, and baking powder. Add dry ingredients alternately with bananas and sour milk, adding dry ingredients first and last. Mix until thoroughly blended. Line bottoms of two 9-inch layer pans, with rounds of waxed paper. Pour equal amounts of batter into cake pans. Bake. Baking Temperature: 375° F. Baking Time: 30 minutes. The flavour and texture of this cake are improved upon standing 24 hours. Frosting: Need not be frosted, or use Lemon Cream or Snowy Cream Frosting.

To make ½ cup sour milk, place ½ teaspoon vinegar in measuring cup and fill up to ½ cup mark with sweet milk.

COURT DECISION ON IMMIGRATION AFFECTS POLICY

By LESLIE BRODIE
Canadian Press Correspondent

Canberra, May (CP) — The federal government's much-debated "White Australia" immigration policy is to be further tightened up.

The cabinet has approved draft legislation prepared by Immigration Minister Arthur A. Calwell for submission to the next session of the House of Representatives in May.

The proposed amendment is considered necessary following the High Court's decision last month granting Mrs. Annie O'Keefe, an Indonesian woman married to an Australian, an injunction restraining the minister from deporting her as a prohibited immigrant.

Prime Minister Chifley said the cabinet had decided to amend the existing act to validate certificates of exemption from deportation already granted and those which may be issued in the future.

Legal representatives of the federal government wish to strengthen the act to enable them to apply a dictation test at any time to anyone they wish to deport. The section as it stands at present makes it obligatory on the Commonwealth to apply the test within five years of the immigrant's arrival if they wish to declare the person a prohibited immigrant.

This dictation test is most elastic. It can be given in any language the immigration officer wishes. If the immigrant passes in the language used he is tried in another language and so on until he is finally beaten. He is then declared a prohibited immigrant and deported.

Reaction to Decision

Mr. Calwell believes the High Court's decision strikes at the very roots of the country's accepted immigration policy and leads the way to a complete breakdown of laws. His new legislation is expected to contain a retroactive clause that will validate earlier deportations and prevent the deportees from taking legal action.

At present no action is being taken against 500 Chinese who were due to leave before the O'Keefe case judgment was given.

The O'Keefe case did more than set a precedent. It brought Australia's immigration restrictions to the notice of the world—particularly to the Eastern peoples who had previously regarded it as economic rather than racial.

The Asiatics indignantly refute the suggestion that Mrs. O'Keefe and her eight children are a threat to Australia's economic position and declare that Calwell's interpretation of the policy is purely racial.

In the Philippines the reaction to the federal government's refusal to allow Philippine-born Corporal Lorenzo Gamboa to enter Australia has been severe. A law has been instituted to deport all Australians living in the islands.

Canberra has attempted to minimize the law by asserting that draft legislation was made before the Gamboa incident, but the representative who introduced it to the Philippine parliament says he introduced it because of Calwell's present actions.

Faster Ships Boost India Trade

New York, May (CP) — Fast modern United States freighters clipping a month from the round-trip travel time to Bombay to handle a booming trade with India.

The American Merchant Marine Institute said today shipping services and cargo volumes are exceeding post-war expectations.

The trade organization of the ship operators said the old 7,500-ton hog islander of First World-War fame required five months to make the round-trip to Bombay.

The new 12,200 ton C-3 freighter completes the voyage in four and carries a bigger pay load in the bargain.

The Institute reported that prior to the war India imported some $5,500,000 worth of goods and exported only $2,800,000. Currently, the Institute adds, India's imports from the United States are close to $22,200,000 and she exports $24,500,000.

American flag vessels are getting an unprecedented share of that expanded trade.

The Institute estimated American flag ships are carrying 53 per cent of imports and 25 per cent of exports.

Above Estimate

In pre-war days, the organization added, vessels flying the American flag transported only 22 per cent of the entire trade.

The shipping service itself is beyond what anyone anticipated, the Institute said.

The Maritime Commission estimated there should be at least 96 sailings a year on the routes to India when it recommended the C-3 cargo vessel as the best type for the trade.

And sailing, the Institute said, are at the rate of 130 a year already with two vessels leaving every week.

Over 800 per cent of the sailing to India originate at East and Gulf coast ports.

And the return cargoes to this country regularly include such vital national defence items as manganese, tungsten and titanium as well as the more familiar jute, tea, spices and leather.

111 Heroes to Get $200 to $1,500 Each for Effort

San Marino, Calif., May 19—(AP)—The 111 heroes who struggled to rescue little Kathy Ficus from an abandoned well will receive from $200 to $1,500 apiece from the $43,700 rescue fund.

This was disclosed Wednesday night by Robert S. McKibbin, commander of the Los Angeles County Council of Veterans and Foreign Wars and member of Kathy Ficus rescue fund committee.

McKibbin told some 40 of the rescuers at the East Pasadena American Legion Hall the $1,300 will be paid to each man as H. L. (Whitey) Blickenaderfer and A. O. Kelly, who spent the most time underground.

The rescue efforts of three-year-old Kathy touched the nation's heart. She fell 100 feet into a 14-inch well casing and her body was brought to the surface 52 hours later.

TRANSPORTATION PROBLEMS TAKEN UP BY DREW

Denies Making Statement at Anytime Against Family Allowances

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Fredericton, May 19 (CP) — George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Wednesday night one of the issues in the June 27 Federal election "will be the question of whether Canada can be governed by one government or whether we are to have government close to the people."

His coast-to-coast campaign tour carried him into this seat of the Liberal Government after stops in Amherst, N.S., and Saint John, N.B. The later spoke in Moncton and St. Stephen, N.B.

Mr. Drew denied that he had at any time made a statement against family allowances but had objected to the Federal Government proposals that it was discussing things with the provinces, then proceeding to deal with social security measures.

He swung to Maritime transportation problems. He had noted an Ottawa report that a subway had been let for test borings in Cape Breton, but there was no election window dressing that is not going to fool anybody," he said. The government had said the bridge would be built

MAN OF HISTORY

Gen. Lucius Clay, the man who was more responsible for the Berlin airlift than any other single individual, walks out of his headquarters in Berlin for the last time. In failing health, the general had wished to be relieved of his months ago but remained at the request of President Truman. His policies and attitude have been both criticized and praised, but all agree that his decision to start the Berlin airlift was one of the most significant in the East-West cold war. Clay received a hero's welcome when he arrived in Washington.—Central Press Canadian.

but now was getting around to finding out whether the project was possible.

In his St. Stephen address, Mr. Drew charged that the principles of freedom are being violated today in Canada. Therefore one of the most important issues of the election was the kind of administration Canada would have.

Centralizing Power Claim

He said the enfeiting government was centralizing power in Ottawa. It was placing "in the hands of long-haired boys in ivory towers powers that neither the government nor parliament has given them."

The closer the government was to people the better it was. The Progressive Conservative party believed in strong central government to deal with national and international affairs. It believed that the province and municipalities should be given power and funds to carry out their responsibilities.

Mr. Drew took issue with statements made during the last session of the New Brunswick legislature by Premier John B. McNair.

"He had used the legislature as a sounding board for a perfectly political speech" on Dominion-Provincial relations.

Mr. Drew said that the Dominion-Provincial conference in 1945-46 he had moved that a coordinating committee and an economic committee be established to deal with Federal-Provincial problems.

NATIONALIZATION CPR, COAL MINES IS ADVOCATED

C.C.F. Leader Claims Two Railway Systems Should Not be Amalgamated

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Springhill, N. S., May 19 (CP) — M. J. Coldwell, C. C. F. leader, said here Wednesday night a government under his leadership would nationalize the Canadian Pacific Railway and Canada's coal mines.

For the most part, he confined his address in this coal - mining town to his party's transportation and nationalization policies. He visited his third Maritime province in three days and twice in his journey from Moncton, N.B., crossed paths with Louis Mc-Laurent, Mr. St. Laurent paused for a brief speech and earlier when the Prime Minister's railway car joined his train.

He referred to remarks made last night in Truro, N. S., by Progressive Conservative leader George Drew, who said nationalization would mean complete amalgamation of all lines in Canada and would seriously affect employment in many rail centres.

"The C. C. F. proposed that the C. P. R. should be brought under national ownership, as is the C. N. R.," Mr. Coldwell said.

Against Amalgamation

"We do not say, however, that the systems should be amalgamated for we feel that they could best serve the people of Canada as two operating units competing on equal terms.

"With increasing population and an expanding economy such as we could expect under a C. C. F. government, our railway services should be fully utilized and indeed expanded."

He directed criticism at the existing Liberal government of Nova Scotia and said it had "done nothing effective" to ensure that Dominion Steel and Coal Corporation would not close down mines on which coal is mined, consideration for the people depending on them for a living.

Mr. Coldwell said a C. C. F. government would make, in its first term, an offer to the people of Nova Scotia through their provincial government, of money "for the purpose of returning to the people control and ownership of the great coal resources which now are supplying profits to absentee owners in Central Canada and the United States."

Heavy Rainfall In North Country Halts Truck

Travellers returning from the Flinton-Northbrook district yesterday stated that one of the heaviest rainstorms in years deluged that district in the afternoon.

A transport driver stated that the rainfall was so heavy that the windshield wipers of his vehicle could not operate and he was forced to pull to a halt until the downpour subsided.

The rain was accompanied by a severe thunder storm.

PRIME MINISTER GIVES PLEDGE FOR FULL EMPLOYMENT

Says Labor and Some Materials Will be Available

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Amherst, N.S., May 19 (CP) —

Prime Minister St. Laurent unloaded a few veiled predictions here Wednesday night and assembled them around a government pledge for full employment.

He told an audience in northern Nova Scotia town that marshland reclamation along the province's Bay of Fundy shore was "only one example of many" for development or conservation of resources. The government had promised full employment and this meant "full employment of our resources and industrial capacity" as well as people.

Earlier, the Prime Minister spoke in the mining town of Springhill, got what he considered the warmest welcome of his Maritime campaign tour in Sackville, N.B., and rode behind a band in Truro.

Mr. St. Laurent referred to public works projects and said "the time is coming when some labor and some materials will be available for great undertakings of national importance." This area has long advocated construction of a canal across the Isthmus of Chignecto which joins New Brunswick and Nova Scotia.

"People are not going to be satisfied with excuses for permitting men or women or industrial capacity to remain idle in peacetime instead of being employed to satisfy human needs and to improve the standard of life."

Must Strike Out Boldly

The nation would have to strike out boldly in many directions when there was a reasonable certainty of peace.

In his speech here, the Prime Minister made these points:

1. Mr. Drew, although Progressive Conservative leader, "never mentions Conservative leaders, achievements or principles but is forever talking about Liberalism and never quoting Liberal principles in support of his own position."

2. There is "an immense amount of work to be done in the modernization of our railways and the improvement of other transportation facilities to bring all parts of Canada more closely together and to link us more closely to our natural export markets."

3. Reduction of British and European markets had been a problem since the war and "will continue "to be a problem for several years yet." But Canadian exporters have been able to sell their surpluses since the war and their fate is safer in experienced Liberal hands than in those of a party "with a pretty sorry past record in the promotion of trade."

DURABLE FAINTINGS

Much of the durability of paintings by the old masters is due to use of resin - coated pigments, and the coating of their finished works with oil varnishes.

C.I.O. Left Wing Must Break Ties With Russ-Led Unions, Cease Defying C.I.O. Lead

By MAX HALL

Washington, May 19 — (AP)— Congress of Industrial Organizations left — wingers have been given five months to break all ties with the Russian - dominated World Federation of Trade Unions and quit defying the C. I. O. leadership.

With that ultimatum the 52-man executive board of the C. I. O. prepared today to end a fiery, three-day meeting.

President Philip Murray said the board would declare itself on wages today. Big C. I. O. unions already have demanded a fourth round of post-war wage raises, without naming a precise figure.

Murray said, too, that the board "more than likely" would adopt a blanket resolution concerning the rebellious C. I. O. unions which have been attacking the national organization.

Declare Action Seen

This resolution was expected to clear the path for objective action at the next convention starting Oct. 31 at Cleveland — action, against communist - line leaders who continue to act contrary to C. I. O. policies.

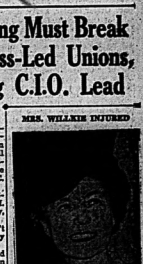
But even without such a resolution, the board said Murray also ready have said it plans that the Cleveland Convention will be a "showdown."

Murray, announced Wednesday night that:

He had denounced Harry Bridges, left - wing president of the C. I. O. longshoremen, for "misrepresentation" and other offences, and had told him the conduct would be brought to the attention of the Cleveland convention.

2. The board by a 38-9 vote formally withdrew the C. I. O. from the World Federation of Trade Unions. This action, fully expected, but still significant, was considered a blow to the C. I. O. left wing and to communists the world over. The C. I. O. and the American Federation of Labor have agreed to take part in building a new international union movement.

3. The C. I. O. union or member of the C. I. O. executive board that continues a "organizational relationship" with the W. F. T. U. or any of its affiliates will be acting "contrary to C. I. O. policy" and will "unconditionally" be brought to the attention of the convention.



29 Panic-Stricken As Live Wire Falls

Boston, May 19 (AP)— Two women were trampled Wednesday night when 30 passengers rushed in panic to the exits of a trolley after 100 feet of live wire fell near the vehicle. The operator of the trolley told the passengers became panic stricken when the threshing wire hit the area with brilliant electrical flashes. The women were not severely injured.

BONARLAW

District Deputy At Springbrook

Bonarlaw— The District Deputy Grand Master, Percy Sherwin, of Campbellford Lodge I.O.O.F. and his official visit to Springbrook Lodge I.O.O.F. No. 439 on Tuesday evening of this week. He was accompanied by Bro. Rex Hale, a veteran member of Campbellford Lodge. There was a splendid attendance of Oddfellows of Springbrook Lodge who listened with rapt attention to a splendid address by the District Deputy Grand Master who stressed the fact that the teaching of Oddfellows were tolerance and Brotherly Love not only to Brothers but to all mankind, whether or not they were members of the fraternity.

Many hints were given in his address as to how the different degrees could be made more impressive to the candidates. At the close of the address Noble Grand Frank Cosbey thanked Bro. Sherwin for his splendid address and a hearty vote of thanks was given him by the lodge.

Other members who addressed the lodge were Bro. Hale of Campbellford, Past D.D.G.M.'s Harry Heath and J. F. Baker, vice grand Reg. McKeown, and Past Grand Earl Cranston.

At the close of the session the refreshment committee served sandwiches, cakes, soft drinks and ice cream.

Health Minister In Newfoundland

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. John's, Nfld., May 19 (CP)— Health Minister Martin, first federal cabinet minister to campaign in Newfoundland for the June 27 general election, today continued a four-day tour of the island. He will give two speeches, a radio address and a press conference.

Mr. Martin Wednesday challenged statements by George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, that the Liberal administration is abusing power in Ottawa. An example of the government's policy of consulting the provinces on major issues was provided by the Unemployment Insurance Act of 1940.

The provinces were consulted before the federal government brought in an insurance bill. In contrast was the procedure of the Bennett Conservative government which earlier had passed a similar bill without consulting the provinces only to have it declared unconstitutional by the Supreme Court of Canada.

Mr. Martin addressed meetings at North River, in the Port De Grave district and the fishing port of Harbor Grace.

He also spoke in a 15-minute radio broadcast outlining the government's social security benefits. He said one of the purposes of his visit was to remove some of the misconceptions which Mr. Drew had left in Newfoundland during his recent visit.

Labor Minister, Union Official Hold Conference

Quebec, May 19 (CP)—A two-hour conference Wednesday between Labor Minister Harrison and a union official was seen today as a new attempt to end a strike of 5,000 workers that has tied up Canada's asbestos industry for three months.

The Labor Minister's meeting with Gerard Picard, President of the Canadian Catholic Confederation of Catholic Labor, was believed to be his first direct contact between the union and the government since earlier attempts at a settlement broke down more than three weeks ago.

Mr. Picard declined comment after the conference.

It is understood the talk was a preliminary move to reach agreement on the basic points at issue before opening negotiations with companies in the eastern township, have been holding out for a 15-cents-an-hour wage boost, increasing their basic pay to $1 an hour, and other benefits.

In Ottawa Wednesday the Bureau of Statistics reported that the strike had clipped asbestos production in March to 11,770 tons compared with 62,354 in March 1948.

Allegations of Conspiracy Heard in Welland Court

Welland, May 19 — (CP) — Magistrate H. D. Hallett is expected to rule today on the Crown motion to commit three men on conspiracy charges involving a liquor - licence fraud in the Niagara Peninsula. The charges brought allegations that persons were swindled out of more than $5,000 by unauthorized persons who suggested they could use their influence to obtain liquor licences.

Accused are William J. Horrigan and Michael P. O'Connor, both of Toronto, and Leslie Galloway of St. Catharines. Galloway, a youthful war veteran, was called as a Crown witness Wednesday and he provided the court with evidence against the two other accused.

Galloway said he first met O'Connor last summer, and through him met Horrigan about a month before he — Galloway — was arrested last December.

He told of getting in touch with persons interested in obtaining a liquor licence, and putting these persons in contact with O'Connor. "O'Connor led me to believe that he could do something for anybody about getting a licence," said Galloway.

Cheques Produced as Evidence

The Crown produced numerous cheques as exhibits. All were made out to the "Conservative Young Men's Movement of Canada," and bore on the reverse side a notation: "This is my personal donation to the movement. I do not ask nor expect any personal favors from the government."

Galloway said he had been warned by O'Connor not to admit lawyers or policemen to the "movement."

In cross - examination, he said that so far as he knew the 'movement' was a valid organization. He had been secretary of the Niagara Peninsula branch, but that was "out" now.

"But there is still a substantial bank account, isn't there?" asked Defence Counsel Sherart Fleming.

"I don't know where it is," said Galloway. "Either the provincial police or the Liquor Control Board has it, I guess."

The witness said that, apart from taxi fares involved in his numerous trips about the peninsula — he runs a taxi service — he had never made any personal gain from the "movement."

Mr. Fleming obtained from Galloway the admission that Horrigan had never made any representations about obtaining a liquor licence for any of the "clients," but had said his fee for making out applications was $300.

Galloway said one of the persons from whom he obtained a donation was Deputy Police Chief William Hamilton of Stamford township. Galloway said he took Hamilton to see O'Connor in Toronto, because O'Connor had said he could help Hamilton get a licence.

The witness swore that O'Connor's "friends" were he had heard O'Connor tell the Stamford policeman he had some "influential friends" who could help, but that there had to be a little donation the movement before he could do anything.

"Hamilton agreed to give a donation, and said he'd give $100 then and more later," said Galloway. "He wrote out a cheque right there."

Donations to Movement

Of another "client," George Kares of St. Catharines, Galloway said that he took him to see O'Connor and that Kares made donations at various times until the total was $1,000.

Other persons mentioned by Galloway as having been introduced to O'Connor, and having paid donations for the purpose of obtaining liquor sale licences, were Mrs. L. Reinhart of Niagara Falls and Jimmy Rocco of Niagara Falls. He said he accompanied both Horrigan and O'Connor to Mrs. Reinhart's tourist establishment.

Horrigan said later she gave them a cheque for $100. They said they didn't get enough, but that they'd get it later on," Galloway asserted.

He testified he had been told later by Mrs. Reinhart that she had received a letter notifying her that she could not obtain a licence.

Seattle — Tell the little woman she should never buy shoes before 3 p. m.

That's the advice of Dr. H. H. Routh, Spokane, Wash., chiropodist who's acting as chairman of Washington State National Foot Week. He warned:

"A woman who buys a pair of shoes at 11 a.m., is bound to find them uncomfortable at 4 p. m.

"The human foot swells during the course of a day and buying shoes late in the day when your feet are slightly larger is the best gives you a fighting chance to get the fitting you should have."

The doctor didn't comment on whether Mikeby prefers to buy her shoes earlier in the day so she can slip into a smaller size.

Pittsburgh — The flight of the bumble bee — and 20,000 of them — was joyous music to the Gorn family last week.

The bees tumbled into the Gorn chimney Wednesday and took up residence in the living room. The house was a bee - hive of activity.

The swarm called police, police, firemen, the health department and exterminators. An insect - bomb brought them a few hundred. A smudge-pot kept the others at bay.

The fire department sent out two amateur beekeepers today. They put a few drops of cyanide down the chimney. The bees bit the dust.

Shelburne, N. S. — Bill Matthews has a horse that doesn't have to be led — to water or anywhere.

Wednesday, the horse lost a shoe. Then it disappeared.

The five-year-old Jersey milk cow owned by Harlan Ard tumbled into the hole early Wednesday, but landed on her feet and suffered only slight bruises.

The will of John T. Fryar was filed for probate today. Lawyer Sam Newton, who drew up the will in 1947, said he remembered Fryar saying he "got his money from the government and wanted to give it back."

Batesville, Miss.—W. T. Thompson, 82, is the father of a new set of twin boys.

The boys were born to 41-year-old Mrs. Thompson Saturday. Each weighed five pounds, eight ounces.

The Thompsons have three other children, ages two, five and 20.

Mrs. Thompson was 16 and her husband 57 when they were married in 1924.

Wire Services Are Disrupted

Disruption of news wire services for over four hours this morning caused by disturbances of power near Toronto, prevented the news rooms of the Ontario Intelligencer from securing the daily despatches released at this time.

The relay failed to operate from 4.30 a.m. until 8 p.m. and again from 10.10 to 10.40 a.m. Service was resumed at this time but the enforced delay naturally prevented the news room from procuring some important despatches.

RAIN EASES DROUGHT SPECTRE IN W. CANADA

Regina, May 19 (CP)— The spectre of drought eased Tuesday night for the prairie farmer. Saskatchewan, Manitoba and Alberta lapped up much needed rain the last 24 hours. The precipitation wasn't as great as farmers would have liked in some areas, but it helped to lessen the peril to crops.

Student Killed Examining Rifle

Des Joachims, Que., May 19—(CP) — Police authorities said today that death of 23-year-old Alexander Richardson, found shot between the eyes Tuesday at the home of his father here, was accidental.

Son of Angus A. Richardson, general manager of the Ontario Hydro project in this community about 150 miles northwest of Ottawa, the victim had been examining a .22 calibre rifle in his room when it discharged.

Noise from passing trucks and blasting of the hydro project nearby was believed to have muffled the sound of the shot.

A student at the University of Toronto, Alexander had arrived home Monday, he was found dead at noon Tuesday when his mother went to his room to awaken him.

Coroner D. A. McKercher of Cobden, Ont., termed death accidental. Crown Attorney H. B. Johnson of Pembroke, Ont., said an inquest would not be held.

Burial will take place at Felixborough.

LOSSES LIFE COLLECTING PENNIES AT FALLS

Niagara Falls, N.Y., May 19 — (AP)— An unemployed man reportedly was swept to his death Tuesday over the American Falls while collecting discarded pennies from a rock in the Niagara River, police said. Pat, Leo. A. Sullliff, of the Park Reservation Police, said the missing man was Leslie Sherwood, 32, of this city.

Canadian Cheese Requested by Several Countries

Carlyle, Sask., May 19 (CP)— Several requests from countries other than Britain for Canadian Cheddar cheese have been received in Ottawa within the past few days, Agriculture Minister Gardiner told a Liberal nominating convention here Wednesday night.

Mr. Gardiner said he had been in touch with his department after hearing J. H. Duplan, president of the National Dairy Council, issued a statement saying surpluses of cheese and other dairy products were piling up at "an alarming rate."

Even though cheese production had increased 40 per cent in recent weeks, the department was not yet able to buy sufficient to meet the British contract for 50,000,000 pounds during the current year, the minister said.

"Britain will get first chance to buy cheese over and above her contract if supplies are available, Mr. Gardiner continued. Then "we will sell to countries which want our cheese."

"This Mr. Duplan is the same gentleman who convinced certain people in Ottawa last fall that unless butter was imported and some oleomargarine was made, we would have a shortage of butter in the spring," Mr. Gardiner said. "Once before spring I too found Mr. Duplan had seen wrong. He is just as wrong now when he says surpluses are piling up for which we cannot find markets."

With reference to Mr. Duplan's claim that surpluses of evaporated milk and milk powder were also piling up at an "alarming rate," Mr. Gardiner said surpluses of these commodities are negligible and the diversion of milk to cheese and butter plants would remedy the situation.

"I wish to reiterate what I have said on several occasions recently with respect to the foolish claim by the opposition that we are losing our markets," Mr. Gardiner said. "We have no surplus of any staple farm product. We are exporting all we have available for export. Since we have no surpluses to export beyond what we are exporting, it is foolish to say we are losing our markets."

Referring to the threat of marketing by the dairy industry, Mr. Gardiner said it was the government's intention to see the dairy industry was not ruined by this competition. The policy of the Liberal government was to maintain the 58-cent floor price under butter to keep the dairy farmers in business even if they had to be subsidized.

How's your goose step?

Some day! Are you so sure Hitler is dead but not his ideas. Some people would like to impose them on you.

Under new slogans individuals are forming committees and working to limit—and destroy—your freedom. Hiding behind appealing catch phrases, they wait the day when they can come out in the open and take over.

In the meantime they want you to win your suppose. They not asking you to put on your own chains. They dare not let you know their aims. They want you to believe and follow them blindly.

Newspapers are their first target. If they can destroy newspapers, they can enslave you. The fight if not so much against newspapers as against you.

If they could, they would control the contents of this newspaper as a means of controlling your mind. They are agitating for limiting the freedom of the press. They know that as long as this and other newspapers print facts and opinions freely you are informed, With information you can sit in judgment and decide what you want to believe.

Now you can read both sides of controversies. You can study contradictory statements. Those who would rob you of your liberties do not want you to do that. In their hands this newspaper would print only what they want printed. Their laws, their mistakes, their venality—none would be criticized. You would read what they told you and in time, without access to other information, you would accept your lot as those under Hitler did—and now do under Stalin.

A dictatorship can't live with a free press. And a free people can't live without one.

A free press is the bedrock under democracy. It doesn't belong exclusively to newspapers or to the government. You are an owner. It includes your right to write letters and circularize them. And your right to read what you want to.

To forget that is to invite trouble. You won't always be able to spot your enemies. They are too clever for that. But you can be alert. You can defeat their drive to take away your freedom by denying you knowledge of what is going on. By keeping informed, by voicing your own opinions and defending the other fellow's right to have his say, you can be free and assure the freedom of your family and children.

Your right to know is the key to all your liberties

WORST FOREST FIRE IN ALBERTA HISTORY RAGES UNCHECKED

With no time to do anything but flee, workers at the Frood mill at Canyon Creek, Alta., left this truck where it stood. Engulfing flames swept over the area, leaving little of value behind. Burning embers driven ahead of actual flames, set the groundwork for the worst forest fire in Alberta history. Hundreds were forced to seek refuge at homes outside the danger area.—Central Press Canadian.

Baby Dies Despite Strenuous Efforts To Save Life

Toronto May 18 (CP) — An anxious two-week waiting period that included a hospital mix-up in babies ended with the funeral of 11-day-old John Lee Griffiths, an R.H. victim.

The baby was rushed from Barrie, 60 miles north of here, by a police-escorted ambulance after his birth. Given a blood transfusion to save his life, he rallied for a time until pneumonia set in. In an R. H. condition the blood supply must be completely replaced because infants with this type of blood cannot live.

His father, Arthur Griffiths of Riverdale, Ont., said that a few days after the hectic trip, he was called to the Hospital for Sick Children to pick up his baby only to find the hospital had made a mistake.

"They brought out a baby they said was mine, but it was a month old," he said. Later he learned pneumonia had set in and his baby died on Monday.

Joseph Bower, Hospital Superintendent, said the mix-up was "regrettable". There were three babies named Griffiths in the hospital at the time.

"Whoever phoned Griffiths, phoned the wrong Griffiths," said the superintendent.

Money and Tour Design Rewards

Margate, England, May (CP)— Two hundred pounds and a tour of Europe came to pretty, 19-year-old Nancy Marsh of Margate School of Art, daughter of an Elvington collier. And all because she likes to design things.

They each won 100 Pounds ($400) in the Royal Society of Art's competition—the first time that both prizes have gone to the same student. And Nancy is the youngest to get either.

On the European tour—Paris, Brussels, Geneva and maybe Vienna—Nancy will see how hats and shoes are made in each country.

$10,000 Fire Loss Near Kitchener

Kitchener, May 18 — (CP) — Fire early today destroyed a $10,000 barn and a large quantity of hay, grain, machinery and poultry on the farm of William Fischer two and half miles south of Kitchener.

Loss was only partly covered by insurance.

The blaze claimed 15 tons of hay, 10 tons of straw, 500 pounds of chopped grain, 150 bushels of mixed barley, oats and wheat, and farm machinery.

No stock was lost, as cattle and horses were out in the fields.

Mr. Fischer's farm assistant a D. P. from Poland, struggled in barefeet to save farm machinery in and near the blazing barn. Spectators finally pulled him away fearing he would be seriously burned.

Refuses to Upset Murder Verdict In Brassard Case

Toronto, May 18 — (CP)—The Ontario Court of Appeal yesterday refused to upset a jury's murder verdict against Romeo Brassard, Cochrane lumberjack, despite an affidavit from one of the principal witnesses at the trial. Brassard will be hanged June 15 for the revolver - murder of his wife, Marie.

The affidavit, presented by Ferdinand Lambert of Cochrane, said: "At the time I entered the bedroom where Brassard and his wife Marie were tussling, Mrs. Brassard had hold of the revolver. It was when the revolver was jerked away from her it discharged."

Gum Ailments After Teeth as Age Approaches

Toronto May 18 (CP) — If you are 35 or over, chances are you will lose more teeth through gum ailments than through tooth decay.

Dr. Irving Glickman of Boston, Mass., told the 82nd annual convention of the Ontario Dental Association here that it was unfortunate that all the present emphasis is on anti-decay agents.

"This may lull the public into a sense of false security by making them feel that if they control tooth decay they are taking care of their major dental need."

Vancouver Leafs Shooting for Third Title

Vancouver, May 13 — (CP)— Vancouver Clover Leafs will be shooting for the honor of being the first team to win three successive Canadian Senior Basketball championships when they start out Saturday against Windsor's Assumption College in the first game of this year's belated best-of-seven final.

No team in the 28 year history of the National Basketball final has been able to cop the title three straight years.

The Clover Leafs will be up against a college quintet with 4 first string carry overs from the team that lost out two years ago here in an extended series.

Leads are well aware too that Freddy Thomas, highest scoring player in Canada, will provide much added punch for Windsor.

On the record, all the odds are against the east. Of the 34 series so far, the west has won 19 times with British Columbia taking 16 of those.

Sports Diary

By JACK SULLIVAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The old Western Canada Professional Class B Baseball League in the haughty '20s must have been a rip - snorter; Beans Reardon, who umpired in the circuit and was known as the "Boy Bandit", still remembers it.

Beans, who now officiates at National League games, recalled the old days in a recent game at Boston between the Braves and Cincinnati when Eddie Stanky, Braves' second - baseman, passed the remark that Beans had "no guts."

Stanky disputed a close call at first base and was addressing a few choice remarks to Umpire Lo Jorda when Reardon, officiating at third, sauntered over. Stanky was thumbed out of the park after his "no guts" remark and Beans later told reporters:

"That talk about 'guts' gets me. If Stanky had ever worked in the Western Canada League, he would not have lasted a year."

He didn't elaborate, but there must be many long - memoried ball fans around Winnipeg and Edmonton who could reminisce about the "Boy Bandit" and the goings-on in the League.

Gymnasts Bell

The Amateur Athletic Union's list of sports it "governors" in Canada, is slowly shrinking. The gymnasts have taken a powder on the A. A. U.; and are busy forming an independent, autonomous body to be known as the Canadian Amateur Gymnastic Association.

The reason was that the A. A. U. let "Abie" Grossfeld go, held the sport in the last 15 or 20 years.

Bell, Nelson Hart of London, Ont., chairman of the A. A. U., gave his blessing to the Association and came out with a surprising statement — at least, surprising to the A. A. U. official when he wrote:

"The A. A. U. has no funds which it can devote to the promotion of any sports. All competitions have been financed by the participants or by a local organization."

Yep, the A. A. U. just "controls" such sports as track and field, boxing, swimming, weightlifting and fencing. We wonder how long these sports will allow the Union to take its percentage of meets and shows without getting some share of the promotional headaches!

SUCCESSFUL CROWD

Winnipeg (CP)— The Women's Committee of the Winnipeg Symphony Orchestra organized six months ago with a membership of 330. It was announced at the first annual meeting recently that $1,000 had been raised. Mrs. Harold Barbour was unanimously re-elected president.

Jersey Giants Hold Two-Game Lead in Loop

(By The Associated Press)

Jersey City holds a two-game lead in the International League as the result of George Bamberger's seventh-inning victory over Toronto Wednesday night.

Bamberger notched his second triumph for the New York Giant farmhands while his mates thumped loser Lou Pozzali and two other Toronto pitchers for 11 hits.

Rochester smothered Newark 11-1 as native Johnny Yuhas his first victory of the season. Eddie Mierkowicz led the attack with a homer and two singles and Bob Young smashed a triple, double and two singles.

Buffalo cut loose with six runs in the third inning to knock out Bryan Stephens, former St. Louis Browns' pitcher, and overpowered Baltimore 12-8. Cy Block helped the Bisons to their third straight victory with four hits, including two doubles. He drove in four runs.

Montreal and Syracuse were rained out.

Frankford Team To Operate in Softball League

FRANKFORD

Frankford — The newly-formed Frankford Merchants will represent the village in the Summer in the Trent Valley Softball League. The league, which is of intermediate rating, is composed of Stirling, Wooler, Campbellford, Hastings, Colborne and Frankford. Karl Austin of Wooler is acting as league president. All contests will be night games, commencing at 8:30, and Frankford will play its home games in Stirling, until such time as lights are available at the local diamond.

The Merchants expect to take the field attired in new sweaters and caps, funds for which are being solicited from local business men. The team has been working out steadily the past week or so, but new players are welcomed by the management, who are working hard to field as strong a club as possible.

Frankford's first game will be played in Stirling, Tuesday evening, May 24th. The executive who will head the local entry this year are: Ken Harris, manager, Bill Berscht, coach; Raymond Rowe, secretary-treasurer and Raymond Scott, publicity manager and official scorekeeper.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

At top and left we see the hands pictured in the address position. With this grip and with the sole of the club resting flat on the ground behind the ball at right angles to the direction line, you're all ready to swing. The lower illustration pictures the hands after they should be at the top of the backswing. These are the two critical positions of the hands during a golf swing. As you'll note, at the top of the backswing, the hands are almost at right angles to the wrists. This is called the cocked position and it is very important, for from this position, you are able to add the wristlash to the swing that gives the club a whip-cracker action at the bottom of the downswing. And that action adds enormously to yardage and power, timing, is of extreme importance that you notice that at the top of the backswing that left hand is closed. If you don't, at the top, the clubhead will dip too far below the horizontal and you will have to use the power pulled up in the entire backswing by hip pivot, shoulder turn, wrist-cocking action. — (Copyright 1948, John F. Vancouver, May 13 (CP)—Junior-hockey has just established a record for a late-spring—or early-summer if you wish—windup.

West coast residents have something akin on hand here with the basketball picture, for one, still awaiting the Dominion final between Vancouver Clover Leafs and Windsor Assumption College before crowning a champion.

And soccer and lacrosse are running head-on.

"What on earth," asks Eric (Vancouver Province) Whitehead, "is soccer doing around this time of year—every year?"

The fact that three members of the Vancouver Burrards boxla crew are by-passing the start of the Burrard Inlet small fourteen spray indicates something wrong, says Whitehead.

CANADA'S EXPORTS

Eastern Hold-up

Old country soccer starts every August and finishes punctually in April. But he says he's told that it has to drag on here to keep in line

The "ice-bound east" is the joker with Dominion championship player that B. C. soccermen scampering "come hell or high temperature."

Asked to Blast

Just before the lacrosse season opener, narrates Clancy (Vancouver News-Herald) Lovanger, he got a letter from a lady requesting anonymity.

She requested he help lacrosse because her son played and she didn't think he should. "Everybody knows the game is dangerous and it's our duty to expose it."

He admitted he could see the lady's point of view.

"But, what the lady says isn't entirely true. Lacrosse is rough, yes—brutal? even: if you are squeamish—but there are several sports more dangerous."

Lovanger said he lacked statistics to back that claim but several lacrosse players being killed in action. Football and boxing were more dangerous and even canoeing and baseball have had their casualties.

Amazing Senators Come Up With Full Bag of Tricks; Four Hurlers Have One-Hitters

By JACK HAND
Associated Press Sports Writer

How about that Zany Washington club? Now they come up with a one-hitter shared by four pitchers.

Not content with upsetting the American League with a streak of nine straight victories in the west, they're back home winning ball games in unorthodox fashion.

This latest dilly involved pitchers Paul Calvert, Dick Welk, Forrest Thompson and Dick Weiss-muth. They served up a total of one hit—a single—yet they needed a three-run homer by Eddie Robinson to top Detroit 3-2.

Of course, there's a gimmick. Nine walks and three runs in five innings made it close. It turned out that the hit—Aaron Robinson's single in the fourth—didn't figure in the scoring.

Calvert, the bespectacled Montreal French-Canadian, started. He was forced to retire in the seventh because of a blistered finger. Welk went the next two frames for the first team he faced. That was all for Richard Thompson got the side out but Tommy Byrne—who's going to the last of the eight.

Mathematically inclined Griffith-comb's pitch over the right-field fence with two on to give the Senators the lead and Wellsreuth was able to hold it.

Feller Takes Beating

The Yanks, led by Tommy Henrich's two homers, clubbed Feller for 13 of their 13 hits in the seven innings he worked. It was his third loss and Cleveland's fifth setback.

Boston Red Sox made it two in a row over Chicago, 7-4. Ellis Kinder and Ted Williams hit homers for Boston. Gus Zernial, the White Sox' rookie outfielder, drove in all four Chicago runs with a three-run homer and a 400-foot double.

Home runs by Stan Spence, Roy Sievers and Sherry Lollar enabled St. Louis Browns to win their ninth in 29 starts, downing Philadelphia, 6-3.

Cincinnati continued to upset the National League pictures, knocking off the Boston Braves, 13-9 on Grady Hatton's homer with the bases loaded in the 1st of the ninth.

Brooklyn went on a 20-hit spree to thump Chicago 14-6; with Joe Hatten coasting to his third win a 10-hitter. Roy Campanella and Duke Snider hit home runs for the Dodgers.

Johnny Mize hit the 304th and 305th homers of his career, passing the idle Joe DiMaggio to take the lead among active major leaguers, but the New York Giants lost to Pittsburgh, 5-3. Larry Jansen was touched up for nine hits including homers by Ed Stevens and Eddie Bockman.

Philadelphia's Phillies made it two in a row over St. Louis Cards, 3-2, the winning run coming on a double by Granville Hamner and a single by Eddie Waitkus off reliefer Ted Wilks.

29 Nominated For Plate Trial At Woodbine

Toronto, May 19 (CP)—A total of 29 three-year-olds have been nominated for the six-furlong trial, feature of Saturday's opening of the spring meeting at the Ontario Jockey Club at Woodbine Park.

The Plate trial will give some indication of the competition to be expected when the classic King's Plate itself is run at the same track May 28. But the 90th renewal of the King's Plate is at a mile and an eighth, and the winner of the shorter Plate trial may be dragging his heels before they reach the final pole a week from Saturday.

However, the Plate trial lists still has unheard-of contenders for the King's guineas and, as in former years, will probably be run in two divisions, if necessary because of the large field. The track at old Woodbine would take any more than 12 to 14 starters.

In the trial they'll be running for smaller stakes than for the plate itself, which with the King's 90 guineas and $10,000 added by the Ontario Jockey Club figures to be worth $15,000 or more.

George McCullagh's Speedy Irish and E. P. Taylor's Epic are among Plate favorites who will spring in the trial. Others are Willie Turner's Gem Thief and John Stuart's Bunty Lisa.

The other Plate trial nominees are Koo Shot, Toe The Mark, Tea Field; Set Field, Regan Lad, Pilsiz, Platemaker, Sun Bomber, Kand It, Sail Strike, Solaris, Ray Companion, Graydon Tina, Sovia's Bunty, Mandalea, Royal Bumbee, Pathem, Grandehem, Bunty's Jewel, Kimbrook Joe, L'Habitant, Tekawa, Wing Commander, Blew Brush and Ramillion.

Veeck May Have Made Trading Boner of Year

Washington, May 19 (AP)—Bill Veeck, boss of the Cleveland Indians, may be charged with baseball's trading boner of the year if Washington first baseman Eddie Robinson keeps up his present pace.

The 29-year-old Senator, who came here in a winter-time deal which sent Mickey Vernon to the Indians, slammed his seventh homer of the season Wednesday night to give the club a 5-3 victory over Detroit.

Robinson has built up one of the best baseball comeback stories of 1949 in the last three weeks. Soon after the season opened, manager Joe Kuhel bought first baseman Herman Reich from the Indians for $10,000 and put Robinson on them hitting .161—on the trading block.

But the day Kuhel announced Reich's purchase, Robinson rapped out two hits. The next day he paced the surprising Washington attack with four hits in a twin bill at Philadelphia. He opened the Chicago series with a home run.

Robinson now is batting .316. He has knocked in 22 runs, scored 17, and has popped out six doubles and one triple.

Meanwhile, Mickey Vernon is hitting around .320 for Veeck's team.

Reich went back to Cleveland on waivers nine days ago and Robinson has continued to lead the surging Senators at the bat. Last Tuesday, he gave the Nats a 5-4 victory over Boston by sending in the tying and winning runs with a solid single in the seventh.

Kuhel credits Robinson with major responsibility for Washington's rise from last place to a tie for third with Philadelphia.

WITH A MESSAGE OF NATIONAL IMPORTANCE

By HAM GORDON
The Examiner

Five Types, like most gals, is looking first for security. She is eager to learn the general rules of bridge, but not until she is told what to do with the worst possible hand.

Her mind settles on a hand like the one shown here:

♠ 10 9 8 7 6 5 4 3 2

Chances are she will never get such a hand. Or ever need to bid it. But she is not at ease until she knows what to do with it.

Suppose her partner opens with a bid of two hearts. This is a forcing to game signal. If no bid intervenes, this hand of hers must bid something. Nor will it pass short of a game contract.

Its four trumps is two no-trump. Why? This is the accepted signal reply to show a hand that does not contain a sure trick. No matter what else a hand may have two no-trump denies a sure trick.

Suppose her partner then bids three hearts. He has not yet at game contract. But now she has adequate support for rebiddable hearts. She can assist with a raise to four hearts.

Need there be fear for her because her hand contains nothing? No. Her partner has said he can see enough in his own hand for a game. She has helped to decide what should be their trump.

Take another situation in which she may have this hand. Suppose south opens with one heart and her partner in west doubles. This is a takeout double. If north does not intervene, her hand must bid.

She can double. Partner what I want to know first is whether or not you have four cards in an unbid major suit." She has. So, her bid is one spade. Does she have any fear of the consequences?

Her partner's double said he could have bid something. If he does not like her spade bid, he can go to the suit he originally doubled. Meantime, he has found out what she has.

Good rules fear nothing but fear.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop came home and hung up his hat and ma went back in the kitchin to look in the oven. and pop said, did you notice a wild gleem in your mother's eye.

Yes sir, she threw me smell something berning, I said, and pop said, Oh no, the situation is more serious than that. The gleem was the fanatical gleem was meenig she is preparing to ask me to take her to the movies after dinner, he said.

But G, pop, you just took her to one last night, I said, and pop said, I told you the situation was serious.

Meening 2 nights in a row are more than he can nunully stand, I said, Jimminies, pop, what's you going to do about it?

I don't know, but self preservation is a powerful force, so something may come to me, pop said.

And we started to eat supper, being liver and onions in pop's honor, and pop said, This is what I call a perfect beginning to an ideal evening. Who is more to be envied than a man with a clear conscience sitting down to liver and onions while he looks fallward to a long comfortable evening of fragrant tobacco smoke and good reeding matter? he said.

I'm glad you feel so satisfied, ma said, and pop said, I'll feel even more satisfied after another submissel helping, and after that I'll stretch out in divine contentment and beatific peace.

Well that's nice, because this is my evening to go to the drapery body will be happy, ma said, and pop said, Ye gods, I think, I'll go and get myself some exercise at Peet's bowling alleys so I wont feel so neglected.

Well for land sakes you're as changeable as a mad March hare, ma said. Talk about women not knowing their own minds, she said.

APPRECIATIVE STUDENTS

Canberra — (CP) — The average mark of university students financed by the Australia government was 80 pes cent compared with an average of 65 per cent for other students. Since the scheme began in 1943, 5,300 students have been assisted at a cost of £1,500,000 ($4,500,000).

NINE DAYS OF GESHUNDHEIT!

If you had been saying "Geshundheit" since Michael Hippisley began sneezing in his London, Eng., home, you'd have worn out a tonsil by this time. Mike has been doing it now for more than nine days without a letup. All attempts by doctors to stop the sneezing have failed up, to now—except for periods when he is drugged to sleep. Last summer the boy had a four-day bout but it stuck stopped as suddenly as it began.—Central Press Canadian.

INDO-RUSSIAN TRADE

New Delhi — (CP) — Nearly 200,000 tons of wheat and 20,000 tons of corn are expected to arrive in India from Russia by the end of July, under the terms of the Indo-Russian agreement signed in March 1940. In exchange Russia will receive 20,000 tons of raw jute and 7,000 tons of tea from India.

Unique Society Shows Visitors British Sights

London, May (Reuters)—United States and Commonwealth visitors to Britain may talk poetry with Lord Wavell, former Viceroy of India, be shown round Princess Elizabeth's new town house or stay at the farm of a lord.

That is if they are members of the Fellowship of the British United States Comrades, a unique organization founded to keep alive wartime friendships between American and Commonwealth servicemen and women.

The 3,000 British members have promised accommodation to visiting overseas members.

Willing hosts include Lord Knebworth who, the Fellowship says, would be delighted to see American visitors on his farm and Sir Frederick Browning, comptroller of Princess Elizabeth's household who is also prepared to give hospitality.

Hobies and the occupations of all members are kept in Fellowship headquarters here so that visitors can contact Britons with the same interests.

"Let them name the place they want to see or the hobbies they are interested in and we will fix them up," Fellowship Secretary F. L. Williams said.

His chief, Brigadier Scales Turner, British liaison officer at Supreme Headquarters Allied Expeditionary Force during the war has just produced the first edition of the British organization's magazine.

Sights and Hobbies

Colonel James, governor of the Tower of London, will show visitors the Crown jewels.

Lieutenant-General Sir Brian Horrocks, "Black Rod" at the House of Lords will show them over the Houses of Parliament.

Games as well as arts are among the hobbies of British members. There are ballstomanes, philatelists, sailing enthusiasts, astrologers, chess players, fishermen, fox-hunters, fliers, antique collectors, amateur naval architects, singers, painters, fencers, dancers and cricketers.

Williams said: 20 Canadians have joined the Fellowship.

Seventy per cent of members here are officers or in the United States, where there are 2,400 members.

The membership fee is one guinea ($4.20) a year and candidates eligible are any British, Commonwealth or American members of the forces of the last war.

15-YEAR TERM IMPOSED

Chicago, May 19 — (AP) — Sentenced to die, a Negro was convicted Wednesday of raping a white woman while holding her captive for three days. Judge Joseph A. Gruber sentenced Scott to 15 years in prison. Mrs. Helen Trepac, 28, a widow, testified Scott raped her in May, 1945, when she went to his apartment to discuss payment of a $30 bill she owed Scott for furniture storage.

PANAMA CANAL

BUT MR. EISLER STAYS IN JAIL

Gerhardt Eisler, top U.S. Communist who jumped bail in the U.S., but was arrested by British police, has some sympathizers in England. This picketer, who seems to be emulating the curiosity of the London policeman, paraded in front of the London jail where Eisler is held. Pickets or no pickets, Mr. Eisler is still in jail.—Central Press Canadian.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

Rob jumped up and ducked back to where he'd been.

Mrs. Joplin said, "Is your husband all right?"

"All right?"

"Sick or anything? I notice he runs to the bathroom mighty often. It was the same with my man."

"Mr. Roberts is not sick."

"That's what we thought about Henry. But you know, dearie, he was dead and buried two months after he was first took with having to run all the time. Has Mr. Roberts seen a doctor?"

"There's nothing the matter with Mr. Roberts."

Rob returned once more, but this time he didn't sit down. He looked at his watch, at Mrs. Joplin, and then at his watch again.

Taking the hint, I said, "Mrs. Joplin, isn't it time for you to get the bottle ready for the baby?"

"Nope," she said, "I got her done popped and if she cries I'll hear her. I ain't to feed her 'less she wakes up. Mrs. Morgan's trying to break her of the '10 o'clock feeding.'"

Rob bolted from the room again and banged the powder room door loud enough to waken the baby—and Henry.

"That man's sick," Mrs. Joplin said firmly. "Just like my Henry, in such a hurry every time. Now, dearie, he's got to see a doctor. Though," she added sadly, "I don't know's it does any good. There ain't nothing they can do for a man when he's as bad off as poor Mister Roberts here."

She gazed at me, sort as unhappily as though Rob had exited from life itself. "Poor feller," she said, "and he ain't such an old man, either."

I struggled to think up some polite way to get rid of her. I didn't want to hurt her feelings, poor old soul, but I didn't want her company, either. She had me tensed. It was only a question of the garden room with all seven big windows open. I could stay there with the mixture of cool air from out-of-doors and hot air from Mrs. Joplin, or I could go upstairs to my bedroom where the air would all be hot.

While I was weighing the advantages of moving against the disadvantages, Rob returned once again. He stood in the doorway and made signs that he wanted me to come. Mrs. Joplin out of the room. He had nothing on me; I wanted him to come here.

The baby, that dear darling, delightful, de-lovely little character, did for us what we two big gillies hadn't been able to do for ourselves. Mrs. Joplin jumped up at the first cry.

"I'll be right back," she said considerably, "soon's I get her quiet." That's what she thought.

Rob slammed and locked the door behind her so fast that he almost caught her tail feathers.

Next Betty found Tillie, quiet girl who seemed beyond reproach —until I found her stretched out on my long chair in the garden room reading my book. She said it was awfully good.

"Let me see it." I held out my hand.

Tillie passed the book over. I thanked her as though she wanted me to have it, and carried it upstairs, feeling so mean I might as well have let her keep it. I couldn't enjoy it anyway.

I asked Betty to instruct her sitters to stay out of my part of the house. Betty sighed, said she'd get a new girl. The implication was that none who had worked for her—and me—would be willing to return to the job. She hinted that possibly I'd find it more to my liking to sit with the baby myself.

"I'd love it," I agreed, "when I'm home, anyway. But I can't make any promises to stay home because sometimes I change my plans on the spur of the moment. I've got to be free to do that," I said, annoyed at being on the defensive. "But when I'm settled for the night or lashed to the washing machine, I'll be delighted to take care of Caroline."

Betty got a new girl. She didn't last, and she didn't have dancing parties. But she must have had a temperament. The kitchen door banged on the hour and on the half-hour like a faithful old clock. The sixth or so time it banged, I couldn't control myself. I took off for the kitchen. Betty was sitting. Standing by the sink, leaning over it, in shirtsleeves, with head down, her front, was the sitter, eating a slice of watermelon.

I turned and shut my mouth a few times, priming the pump, before any words came. "Why are you eating out of my refrigerator?" I asked.

"I'm hungry," she replied accusingly.

"Didn't Mrs. Morgan tell you what to have for your lunch?"

"Sure. I ate that."

"This is my icebox. You're not supposed to be in my kitchen at all," I snapped.

"There's nothing left downstairs to eat," she snapped back.

I asked Betty to explain to her sitters that they mustn't use my kitchen nor help themselves to my food.

"Oh, dear," she cried. "I don't believe I'll be able to find a sitter to quit you. I guess I'll just have to stay home all the time myself." She looked at me as though I were deliberately making trouble for her.

"Surely there must be someone you can make understand that this is a two-family house now and that our half is not for her to make use of."

"Well, I'll try," Betty said, "but I'm about out of names."

She found one more girl to put up with me—a child of about 13. She arrived alone, but within a matter of minutes had spirited three little companions into the basement to play. I then slunk up the garden walk, piping all the while to myself that the house but though they looked cautiously, they did not see me behind a Venetian blind. They tip-toed down the basement stairs, quiet as mice.

The house began to rock on its foundation. I allowed four or five tremors to pass unnoted and then proceeded to the basement. The children were making so much noise they didn't hear me as I called to them, and when I didn't find them in the laundry or sitting room, I continued to the bedroom where I discovered them all in the closet. They screamed at my unannounced appearance.

"Girls, what are you up to?" I asked.

They giggled. One was clinching a large book in her arms. I looked at it. It was Betty's scrapbook.

"Where did you get this?" I asked.

"Of the top shelf," one answered.

I looked at the height of the shelf and the size of the girls and wondered aloud how they had got the book down.

"Oh, we've been jumping for it, Marsie," indicating a wiry child, "jumped the highest. She reached it."

Leaving out the ethics of their helping themselves to things put up on top shelves, I suggested they might have got it more easily and more quietly by standing on a chair.

"Oh, jumping's more fun," they chorused.

...On the days that Betty did stay home and take care of the little Characher herself, she had groups of other young mothers and their children to keep her company. From every nook and cranny they came—rooms over grocery stores, shack houses in backyards, hotels downtown. Often they were wheeling baby carriages piled with lap robes, pillows, books, sun-tan oil, bottles, diapers, and, of course, the baby. It was a pleasant sight to look out on a large circle of young mothers lying around sunning themselves, smoking, drinking cokes, occasionally turning a baby over to brown on the other side or moving it out of the sun altogether, or changing it, or giving it a bottle. It made our garden stem useful and worth the effort to keep it in order.

I never had time to sit in it; it was as much as I could manage to mow the lawn. I never decided whether Rob was too heavy for us a lot of trampling in and out such like work, or vice versa, or just allergic to work, period. He traded on the theory that outside work was gardening work, and if there weren't gardeners to be had, it wasn't his fault; and he couldn't be expected to take a ball of clay in his hands and create one. Snow shovelers ditto. Each time I manned the lawn mower or the snow shovel, he followed me around, moving from window to window inside the house, tapping with his finger to get my attention; and when I looked up, he would shake his head decidedly and wig-wag me not to do it, that that work was too hard for me.

Well, as I said before, it was gratifying to see this nicely mowed lawn being appreciated.

Our garden was so appreciated that summer, and such a lot of young people spilled over and brought picnic suppers with them, which also spilled over, that we decided we needed some outdoor cooking equipment. It would save the trouble of running in and out of the house for coffee, salt and pepper, mayonnaise, paper plates, paper napkins, ice—all the thousand things which picnicking requires and which are remembered one at a time. So we got a rolling barbecue grill on which the coffee could be made out of doors, potatoes baked or a casserole heated, and even steaks or chickens or chops or hamburger broiled.

When we dreamt up a chuck wagon or sort of outdoor kitchen cabinet and serving table combination and called our neighborhood handyman in to build it.

TIRED OUT AT END OF DAY JUST WANTED TO SIT DOWN

"Felt as If I Had No Energy Left," Says This Man. Was Nervous, Dizzy; Digestion Poor. Says Tyrtone Built Him Up. "Feel Fine Now."

MR. EARL RYAN

"During the last six months I felt so rundown and tired all the time it just seemed I had no energy left," said Mr. Earl Ryan, 181 Glasgow Avenue, Hamilton, Ontario, in a recent report.

"When I got through with my day work I just wanted to sit in a chair until bedtime. My nerves were on edge, I couldn't get my proper sleep, and I was subject to headaches and dizzy spells. More recently I began to have a terrible backache and pains in my limbs, joints and muscles. I was worn out and thoroughly miserable.

"I tried different things I heard of, but nothing seemed to be helping me, so a few weeks ago I got some Tyrtone and to my surprise the very first week I went to only a very short time. I continued taking it and soon all my troubles began to disappear, giving me trouble no more. My backache and dizzy feelings are gone and I feel better than I did in years.

"Now I do not get tired as I did before and I want to recommend Tyrtone to all who suffer as I did. By way, for I know it is a really good medicine."

Tyrtone is made from 12 of nature's finest herbs and roots. It acts on stomach, kidneys, liver and bowels, aids in elimination of excess acids and impurities from the system and promotes better assimilation of food for increased strength and energy.

Syrtone is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST. Find out how it can help you, too.

CONSULT GREECE ON ANY STEPS TO SETTLEMENT

Britain and U.S. Reply To Russian Proposal

By EDWARD CURTIS

London, May 20 (AP)—Britain today announced she will refuse to negotiate a settlement of the Greek civil war "behind the back of the Greek government."

Informants in Washington said a similar reply was given by the United States to a proposal by Russia for halting the three-year-long civil strife between the Athens government and Communist-led guerrillas.

Athens "must be fully consulted on any steps, Britain holds.

Tass, the Soviet news agency, said in Moscow that Andrei Gromyko had proposed negotiation of a Greek settlement based upon recent peace proposals of the guerrillas, who have created a fantastic government of their own. Athens has rejected such proposals as several times before and demanded unconditional surrender.

Tass said Gromyko proposed that if the three powers worked together on the Greek problem, they jointly call for an end of hostilities, a general amnesty and free, supervised elections. He also called for an international commission to control the frontier areas, which is a departure from previous stands.

Gromyko, according to Tass, has proposed that the United Nations on the Greek question under certain circumstances should transfer the whole matter of all foreign militiary aid to the Nationalist government.

Cottage Built By Blind Man Rammed by Truck

Lancaster, Pa., May 20 (AP)—A small cottage being built by a 60-year-old blind man from his foundation to day by a 20-ton trailer truck that crashed into it. He said he did collapse when he heard the crash. He said he did not come to others by phone after he was informed they were interested in the dance.

Mayor Resume and Mr. Atkin were in Detroit in the afternoon to make arrangements for the evening and there they met four nurses. Mr. Atkin had engaged a room and Mayor Resume a suite. "The girls used the room as their headquarters," he said.

Before he took the stand, Commissioner Crone suggested that Mr. Atkin seek leave of absence from the hospital "until he has cleared himself of these allegations." Mr. Atkin's counsel, James Tice, said the suggestion would be complied with.

In regards to suggestions that he had tried to "date" nurses, Mr. Atkin said: "The girls know perfectly well I was only joking. I've been married 30 years and my wife could reach me any time she didn't ever interfere unnecessarily and seriously asking any of those girls out."

During the testimony, Commission Counsel Mitchell Isaac asked Mr. Atkin to say whether Mrs. Ellis' statement was true or not. Mr. Atkin replied, simply: "Yes—the best friend I have."

Taking the stand before Mr. Atkin was called, Dr. Morgan, superintendent of East Windsor Hospital, testified that he received a call from Atkin to attend the party from the "Mayor's Office." He said he went to the mayor's office. He left Atkin replied, midnight and that he was home by 2 a.m.

Flying Balls Of Fire Reported By Finns

Helsinki, May 20 (Reuters) — Finnish military authorities said today they received reports of "flying balls of fire" moving in the direction of the Russian frontier.

The inhabitants told authorities the balls had been seen for days and made a whining noise as they passed overhead at about 900 feet.

Authorities said that during the last few years various types of flying bodies have been reported from Sweden, Norway and Finland but scientific investigation proved them to be natural phenomena.

Washington, May 20 (AP)—It was 80 degrees below zero at nearby Fort Belvoir, Va., Thursday.

The weather was artificially produced behind five-ton doors in special chambers by the Army Engineers' snow engineers research and development laboratories to test military equipment.

Officials said it took them eight hours to get the chamber that cold.

280 Alaska Natives Cut Off On High Ground by Floods Still Rising in Yukon River

Algerian Beggar Sees Much of World for Free

Montreal, May 20 (CP) — Mohamed Bourraq, self-styled Algerian beggar, picked up here several weeks ago as a "completed" seaman and deserter from a British merchant ship, has lost his appeal against deportation from Canada.

When word of the rejection came yesterday, young, sad-eyed Bourraq was placed aboard the British freighter Merchant Prince by immigration authorities. Bourraq reached the Montreal jail for more than a year after jumping ship at Three Rivers, Que.

"It was almost two years ago when he was convicted and ordered a British merchant ship. When the vessel docked Montreal he was turned over to immigration authorities. Bourraq exercised a stowaway's right of appeal. His plea was rejected.

He was put back aboard the ship, but it never touched his homeland or a port where he could be legally discharged.

After coming to Canada the ship returned to Three Rivers, with Bourraq still aboard. by this time he had become friendly with officers and men and was treated like one of the crew.

But Bourraq wanted nothing of the sea and disappeared one night. About two months ago immigration officials found him working in a Montreal restaurant.

When he reaches Britain he will be placed aboard another ship—if one can be found going to his homeland.

Who's Police Chief Mixup Settled

Litchfield III., May 20 (AP)—A mixup over who is police chief of Litchfield has been settled.

For seven days, this city of 7,000 didn't know which of two men was the chief.

Leroy Hankins was appointed to the job by Mayor C. Willard Peterson. But the city council had refused to confirm him. Consequently, R. G. Stanford contended he remained chief until his successor was approved.

The two men quarreled over the tail key, the police squad car and charging gasoline to the Police Department.

Franklin went out Thursday night when the council confirmed his appointment by a 7-to-3 vote. Stanford said he'll get out.

Horace Atkin, business administrator of the Metropolitan General Hospital at Windsor, whose administration is under investigation by a royal commission. INVESTIGATE HOSPITAL ADMINISTRATOR

Hospital Superintendent Denies He Dated Nurses

Windsor, Ont., May 20 — (CP) — Testifying before Metropolitan General Hospital superintendent, today denied charges that he tried to "date" nurses employed under him at the hospital.

The royal commission had previously heard Miss Valerie Droge, former superintendent of nurses at the hospital, testify she left the hospital after working 10 days because hospital's superintendent tried to "date" her.

Hearing continues here before a Royal Commission probing administration of the hospital. Atkin told the commission he once attended a party in a Detroit hotel on the invitation of Windsor city Mayor Resume.

Mr. Atkin explained that he was told to invite anybody he wanted to and "I ran into one of the girls—nurses—in the elevator and—and—and—like a group could go to the party."

Mr. Atkin referred on at least two occasions to the nurse he originally contacted as the one "who made the arrangements" to go to Detroit. He said he did contact two others by phone after he was informed they were interested in the dance.

Mayor Resume and Mr. Atkin were in Detroit in the afternoon to make arrangements for the evening and there they met four nurses. Mr. Atkin had engaged a room and Mayor Resume a suite. "The girls used the room as their headquarters," he said.

How Charges 'Two Georges' Attempt to Wreck T.C.A.

Ottawa, May 20 — (CP)—Trade Minister Howe charged Thursday that George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, and George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail — what he called the "two Georges" — were making "phoney" statements in connection with the structure and performance of Canada's North Atlantic air service.

Speaking before a Liberal nominating convention in a Toronto election riding in the western suburbs of Ottawa, Mr. Howe said:

"I think Mr. Drew is a poor politician to challenge a newspaper successfully, but I would like to brand as malicious, false and wholly irresponsible, the stories that have been featured in the Globe and Mail — on the front page."

He told the convention, which chose John McDonald, 35-year-old Ottawa lawyer, to contest the riding now represented by Mr. Howe, Dr. Wellington Bridge, to be a pointless effort to deal at all with opinions expressed by these two men (Mr. Drew and Mr. McCullagh) on a subject of which they know nothing."

But since the decision to instal British Overseas Airways Corporation planes in Trans - Canada Air Line's new North Star aircraft now was under fire from Mr. Drew, "it has been some doubt cast on the 'reliability' of the T.C.A. experience and equipment" and he felt he must place the facts "in their proper setting."

"It is a matter that touches all of us," said Mr. Howe, "since not just the government of Canada is being censured, but the government of Great Britain, many thousands of Canadian craftsmen, some of the world's great engineers and perhaps least important of all — myself.

Burmese Rebel Force Reported Demanding Tribute

Rangoon, May 20 — (AP)—A rebel force in control of Central Burma has been demanded and received some $92,000 'protection' money from the Burma Oil Company and is asking monthly tribute, an authoritative source said today.

The rebels are members of the anti-fascist People's Volunteer Organization. are demanding $30,000 monthly as "protection" money which the P. V. C. group has proclaimed in Central Burma, an informant said.

The British Embassy recently warned Dr. Phillips Talbot, Burma Oil Works at Yenangyaung to check on British interests and the safety of British Methodist employed there.

Bulletin

W. GERMANY RATIFIES CONSTITUTION

Munich, May 20 (AP)—Western Germany today ratified a constitution uniting 11 states within the Russian sector into a federal republic.

Ratification was completed by the parliamentary action of eight, or two-thirds of the states of the western occupation zones.

The eight states voted "yes" by overwhelming margins, with virtually all the opposition coming from the Communist-dominated Bavaria, the big state in the United States occupation zone, which voted "no", but reserved the right to ratify the new government upon reaffirmation of the others.

CAPITALISM STILL BEST, MAKE IT WORK..McCULLAGH

Gives Impressions Of Trip to Europe

Toronto, May 20 (CP)— The way to combat Socialism and Communism "is to amend Capitalism and make it work", George McCullagh told a service club luncheon meeting today. After a fact-finding tour of Great Britain and western Europe the Toronto newspaper publisher said he was convinced that "Socialism is not the most desirable system under which to live."

In a speech prepared for delivery Mr. McCullagh told members of the Canadian and Empire Clubs that "this is a testing time for all the world." Canada had a "proud and noble part to play" in the great laboratory test of which is either going to be produced a formula for peace or the millennium."

War Not Near

Mr. McCullagh, who included Italy, France, Holland, Western Germany and Germany in his tour, said he had returned "with the definite conviction that war is less a possibility today than ever since the cessation of hostilities."

In an attack on the present Socialist government in England Mr. McCullagh said: "It is a system which gives free play to individual initiative only in the production of goods. Its theory of human nature is a regimented society."

Security can be achieved only by assiduous application of the principles of human dignity, hard work and thrift, and consequent success, Mr. McCullagh said. He said that there might be some excuse for England drifting into Socialism "because of her great material and human wealth and her geographical isolation" but "if political leaders suppose that socialism can be established in Canada and such evasive like goes it is nothing short of wicked."

Outlook Optimistic

Western advantages:

1. Last year and two years ago Western Germany was poverty stricken and economically stagnant. Today in industry is flourishing, living standards have been raised and recovery is well under way.

2. Last year and two years ago West Germany was a political vacuum. There was no government nor did anyone care much about it. Today a government of sorts is busy setting up their own political machinery and working as a whole have taken an interest in politics again.

3. Last year and two years ago the western powers were split on their German policy. With a security fears largely alleviated by the Atlantic Pact powers are close to Britain and the United States and united in a common policy.

Russia's Position

1. At the end of the war the Soviets had the only zone which could support itself economically, agriculturally. In the Russian zone of living was far higher than the Western zones. Today, stripped by requisitions and shipping vast quantities of goods to Russia, the Russian zone is a liability.

2. At the end of the war, the Russians had a chance to win German support by a lenient and impartial policy. Today there is no hope for such support except by force of arms.

Red Prestige Lowered

A major factor in the lowering of Soviet prestige in Europe was the failure of Russia's attempt to force the western powers from Berlin by starving the population through the blockade.

The west's stand with the air lift dashed out any illusions about all of Europe to resist Communism.

To sum up:

The west goes to Paris Monday with a unified German economy headed toward recovery; a stable, democratically-elected government and with as much support from west Germany's 46,000,000 people as the occupation power could expect.

32-INCH PICKEREL CAUGHT

Campbellford, Ont., May 20 (CP) — Fred Wilson caught a pickerel which weighed seven pounds six ounces as he landed here Thursday by Norwood. The fish was 32 inches long. Mr. Wilson's pickerel was the largest fish caught in this district so far this season.

English Couple Sit Out Battle Of Shanghai in Sand-Bagged Home

By ANNE LANDMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Portmeter, May 20 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. W. J. Hawkins of Somerset, England, have lived through all the battle of Shanghai surrounded by sand bags in Communist armies.

They live in suburban Hungjao, 10 miles from Shanghai's Bund. Their house is a rambling three-storey stucco surrounded by a garden and wall.

"We like it here," remarked Mrs. Hawkins, 58, and China born. "We've lived here 30 years so I guess we'll just stay."

Shells fell in the Hawkins' courtyard repeatedly. Hawkins said. The windows and doors of the house are heavily sandbagged. An ample food supply is on hand.

Mrs. Hawkins says she has been with a cold for several days. The had been moved from the hospital to the house. The bedroom spot under the slabs on the first floor. She fears a 19-foot Union Jack.

"I must get up tomorrow," she said cheerfully. "This is a very nice place from which to watch the show."

Levelled houses stud the desolate countryside all about the Hawkins home, but there are many a handful of foreigners remaining in Hungjao, Red Cross and Mrs. Hawkins said. Most of the others have moved.

As I started to leave, Hawkins said:

"You must come see our children."

He led the way to a large multi-storeyed living room with several vases of flowers in it. Tea pot and cups were set out on a small table by preparation for afternoon tea. Photographs of their five daughters were placed in a corner on a small table.

They were pretty, too.

Foreign Ministers To Enter Parley In Strong Position

Reds' Bargaining Situation At Lowest Ebb Since Yalta

By WES GALLAGHER

Berlin, May 20 — (AP) — Britain, the United States and France will go into the Paris Foreign Ministers Conference in their strongest position since Yalta.

The Soviet Union's bargaining situation has been considerably weakened economically and politically since the Moscow and London conferences.

In both previous conferences the West was in a defensive position trying to seek agreements with Russia.

At the Paris conference for the first time diplomats believe the West can take the offensive or sit tight and let the Soviets seek to break the deadlock.

Advantages Outlined

Russia's Position

1. At the end of the war the Soviets had the only zone which could support itself economically, agriculturally. In the Russian zone of living was far higher than the Western zones. Today, stripped by requisitions and shipping vast quantities of goods to Russia, the Russian zone is a liability.

2. At the end of the war, the Russians had a chance to win German support by a lenient and impartial policy. Today there is no hope for such support except by force of arms.

Slick Swindler Cheated Workers Of $1,500,000

New York, May 20 (AP)—A Brooklyn man is accused of netting close to $1,500,000 through the cash sale of land corn he allegedly never delivered.

William Cocuzzo, Jr., 31-year-old naval reservist, was booked yesterday on grand larceny charges involving the alleged "land car swindles."

He then would park the car outside some large office building or factory and wait for workers to pass by and solicit it. Then Cocuzzo would strike up a conversation with the employees and offer to sell the car several hundred dollars below market value.

Word about the bargain would get around, and other workers would want the same "buy." Then Cocuzzo would collect payments in advance, but never delivered the car.

The District Attorney said Cocuzzo's activities extended into New York, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Hampshire and Vermont. McDonald said more than 800 persons may have been defrauded in the alleged scheme.

Foreign Ministers To Enter Parley In Strong Position

By WES GALLAGHER

Berlin, May 20 — (AP) — Britain, the United States and France will go into the Paris Foreign Ministers Conference in their strongest position since Yalta.

The Soviet Union's bargaining situation has been considerably weakened economically and politically since the Moscow and London conferences.

In both previous conferences the West was in a defensive position trying to seek agreements with Russia.

At the Paris conference for the first time diplomats believe the West can take the offensive or sit tight and let the Soviets seek to break the deadlock.

Advantages Outlined

Western advantages:

1. Last year and two years ago Western Germany was poverty stricken and economically stagnant. Today in industry is flourishing, living standards have been raised and recovery is well under way.

2. Last year and two years ago West Germany was a political vacuum. There was no government nor did anyone care much about it. Today a government of sorts is busy setting up their own political machinery and working as a whole have taken an interest in politics again.

3. Last year and two years ago the western powers were split on their German policy. With security fears largely alleviated by the Atlantic Pact powers are close to Britain and the United States and united in a common policy.

Russia's Position

1. At the end of the war the Soviets had the only zone which could support itself economically, agriculturally. In the Russian zone of living was far higher than the Western zones. Today, stripped by requisitions and shipping vast quantities of goods to Russia, the Russian zone is a liability.

2. At the end of the war, the Russians had a chance to win German support by a lenient and impartial policy. Today there is no hope for such support except by force of arms.

VOTERS' LISTS POSTED IN PUBLIC PLACES

With summertown having completed their work in the city, preliminary lists of those entitled to vote in the federal election on June 27th have been posted up for examination by the fallible voters. These lists will be revised after the expiry date for filing appeals and will then be printed.

The lists may be seen on posts, public buildings and other places and should be examined by voters to avoid disappointment on election day.

MAYOR STOREY WILL BROADCAST SUNDAY

Mayor D.L. Storey will be guest mayor on the CBC broadcast "Mayor of the Town" to be heard Sunday evening at the above network time, 6:45 P.M. The program has an American hookup and is heard throughout the United States.

Each week the mayor of some city in Canada is guest for the broadcast and Mayor Storey has accepted the invitation to speak on Sunday. The topic to be discussed by Belleville's mayor will be the tourist possibilities of Hastings County.

ALL-GIRL CHORUS PLANNED FOR AUTUMN

It was announced today that plans are being made to organize a group in the early fall to be known as the Belleville All-Girl-Chorus. Auditions are being held to determine the suitability of voices for acappella singing which is in chorus or choir style unaccompanied by instrumental music. T. E. Schwab and the Chorus will be conducted by Reg. Hinchey.

GRADUATES IN MINING ENGINEERING

Bryson Carlyle Donnan, son of Bowen Attorney R.C. Donnan, has graduated in mining engineering at the University of Toronto. The name of the successful Belleville student was included in the list published in yesterday's metropolitan newspapers.

NEW CAR BADLY DAMAGED IN COLLISION

Extensive damage to a new 1949 model auto owned by Joseph Bayreuth, partner of Armin Plumbing, just east of the city, was occasioned Wednesday when it was in collision with a transport truck.

Mr. Bayreuth was driving west on the four-lane highway just east of the city and was in the act of passing a transport owned by Lewis Cartage of Toronto and driven by Jack Brown of that city, when the two vehicles collided.

It was reported that the transport veered suddenly just as Mr. Bayreuth was about to pass. The entire front of the Bayreuth car was crushed but there were no personal injuries.

Western Parade With Cowboys And Indians Will Open Kinsmen Convention in City

A rooting, shooting band of yelling cowboys aboard honest-to-goodness cow ponies, escorted by a full group of feather bedecked Indians, all reminiscent of the old days of the West are expected to take over the city for a few brief moments on Saturday morning.

Cowboys, many of whom possibly never before have been astride a cow pony will make a valiant effort to stay aboard their "hoss," while mebbe just as likely, wearing feathers, buckskins and tomahawks, will ride bareback alongside.

But the excitement will not mean that mean hands from a spread back in the sticks have taken over the city. It will mean merely that Kinsmen delegates from District No. 8, in the city for their annual convention, are having a bit of fun.

As a bit of diversion from convention sessions, scheduled to last from Friday over Sunday, Kinsmen have planned a big parade which will take off from the Armouries last promptly at 10:30 in the morning.

Taking part in the parade will be the cowboys and Indians — 18 horses all told, the Kinsmen Boys' Band all decked out in their new uniforms, the public schools band, and all officials of Kinsmen District No. 6, including the National President.

Adding variety to the fun will be several horse-drawn vehicles as well as old gasoline buggies which years ago were put into such hails. Also present will be the "educated" Ford owned by Ward Redgston of Foxboro.

The big parade will form up on the Armouries lawn and will move along Bridge Street to Front and then north on Front to Station Street and return to the Armouries by way of Pinnacle St.

Kiwanis Show Proves Success In All Phases

"Tippee" chortled that old maestro of Kiwanis Club show activities, Ted Reynolds, today. "It was the best thing we've done since we started." And that was the tone of responses from the general public over four years of show activities in the city.

He was speaking, naturally about the 1949 edition of the Kiwanis Club's musical extravaganza, "Step Your Troubles Up," which just finished a more or less sensational four day run at the Belleville Institute.

Another packed house greeted the production at its closing presentation last night.

The general consensus of the show-loving public placed a definite stamp of approval on the show.

It is stated that financially the effort was a great success with generally hoarse greeting performers giving the first-night show across utter the first-night show.

Maestro Ted Reynolds waved enthusiastic today over the success of the two-day and three-night entertainment effort. "It was a grand show and it was just that because we had the fullest co-operation of everybody connected with it. I would like to pay private tribute to all and everyone, the featured artists, the chorus, the accompanists, Mr. Hinchey and his splendid group of musicians, not forgetting the stage hands who did such a wonderful job from start to finish."

"I want to thank everybody. We worked hard to give Belleville a good musical entertainment, and that Belleville appreciated it is shown in the office figures. Again thanks to everyone."

Toronto Man Given Term on False Pretences

Pleading guilty to a charge of false pretences involving the passing of a worthless check in the purchase of an automobile, Walter Spry, Toronto, was sentenced to three months in the county jail when he appeared before Magistrate H. Lloyd in Magistrate's court this morning.

Giving evidence in the matter Police Chief Jack Spratt of Tweed, stated that on May 11th, Spry had traded cars with used car dealers C.E. Way, of Tweed giving a cheque for $375 for the difference. When cashed, it was found the cheque was worthless.

Spry was apprehended on May 12th by city police on a charge of drunk driving and was given seven days in jail by Magistrate T. V. Wills.

In addition to the false pretences charge, Spry pleaded guilty to a charge of intoxication and was given ten days concurrent in default of payment of a fine of "ten and costs."

Inspector J. C. Hayes told the court that he held a warrant for Spry from Campbellford police on a false pretences charge.

Police Blotter

Two young sons of Mrs. C. Way, Bay Street, who earlier in the week had run away from their homes after being missing from school, have returned home. It was stated today by police. The boys returned home of their own accord.

Milk bottle thefts were reported in the Moira Street, West, area, while a Quinte Concrete Products, Ltd., official complained that young boys were damaging newly manufactured concrete blocks. Police officers were directed to patrol the area in question.

15-INCH TROUT CAUGHT NEAR PARLIAMENT BLDGS.

Ottawa, May 20 — (CP) — A 15-inch speckled trout was caught almost in the heart of the capital Wednesday. Norman Bent hooked the trout while fishing with minnow in the Ottawa River not far from the parliament buildings. He kept it overnight in a bathtub as live proof of the catch.

Increases in Salaries of Anglican Clergymen Given Approval by Synod

Increases in the salaries of Anglican clergymen serving on self-supporting, as well as mission charges were approved yesterday by the annual meeting of the Incorporated Synod of the Diocese of Ontoria held in Kingston.

Present minimum salary for the ministry on self-supporting charges is $1,200 and on mission charges $1,400. The committee recommendation calls for $200 annual increase in each case, effective next January 1st.

Progress both in the membership and finances was noted by the committee on the state of the church. Rev. Ernest Tenkey, rector of St. Paul's Church, Chairman of the committee, reported that 1948 families and individuals had joined the church during the past year. The church population shows an increase of 569, or an average of three plus for each family, gained.

Better Financial Picture

The financial picture according to Mr. Teskey was encouraging but he also stated that the number who donate individual properties is still dangerously low. His report on the mission givings and stipend committee which was given by Canon N. R. Boddy, Gananoque, in his report said, "it is encouraging to note the generous support of church people all across Canada in the work, as evidenced by the material increases in financial returns. Only five parishes failed to reach their full Prescott.

Draw for Motor Car Expected To Swell Attendance at Show

All roads lead to the local Armouries tonight for the final night of the Canadian Legion Motor Show, which in addition to offering a full night's entertainment will see the winning ticket drawn for the new Ford Prefect sedan.

A bumper crowd was on hand Thursday night, viewing the many shiny new autos on display and for the half-hour radio quiz show which centred on the draw for the spectators. Background music for the performance was supplied by Kaye Martin on the Northern Electric organ.

Prize winners for last night's draw were Mrs. Murray of Toronto who won the handsome chest of silver; Ross Jackson of Belleville who won a copy of the record player, and Ed. Smith, Massey Street, who took home the lazy-boy chair and ottoman.

Tonight, the final night, the Legion motor show will see Ted "Tester" Kennedy and Howie Meeker, stars of the Toronto Maple Leaf Stanley Cup winners, draw the winning ticket for the sedan which is being given away. There will also be a draw for an electric iron which will gladden some lucky housewife's heart.

Also for attendance bible and rod and reel and fishing tackle.

15 FREIGHT CARS JUMP RAILS

Moncton, N. B., May 20 (CP) — Eighteen cars of an eastbound freight train jumped the tracks on the Canadian National Railway's main line 18 miles east of here today but there were no casualties among the train crew. C. N. R. officials, who reported considerable damage in the wreck, were unable to say how long it would take to clear the line. Arrangements were being made to transfer passengers around the wreck.

EXEMPTED

Fort Erie, Ont., May 20 (CP) — County Judge Reid of Welland has ruled that insurance men doing business from their own homes are exempt from 1100 business tax paid by other insurance companies operating from offices.

Glenn C. Kennedy and Robert Graham, local life insurance men operating from their own homes, were told they didn't have to pay the tax levied by Fort Erie municipality.

City Loses Out To Force P.U.C. Raise Water Rates

Toronto, May 20 (CP)— The City of Belleville lost out yesterday in its battle to compel the Belleville Public Utilities Commission to raise the water rates. The judge refused to back the city, which asked that the Commission increase the rates to pay principal and interest on debentures issued for extensions to the water system.

Questioned on the matter today, Mr. O. H. Scott, manager of the local public utilities, stated that the court ruling would make no difference in the policy of the utilities as the matter had been covered by agreement between the city and the utilities.

Assault Charge Is Withdrawn

A charge of common assault laid by Thomas F. Stevenson, against city police officer Constables Joyce and Finkle, was withdrawn in Magistrate's court here today. The assault charge was scheduled to be heard by Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook.

The incident which resulted in the assault charge being laid against Finkle occurred some weeks ago at the city barns when there is said to have been rather heated discussion between Mr. Finkle and Mr. Stevenson, representative of a labor union.

City Solicitor G. Pringle appeared in court on behalf of Mr. Finkle and asked that the assault charge against his client be dismissed.

Magistrate Lloyd said he had received a letter from Mr. Stevenson asking that the charge be withdrawn and said he was permitting the complainant to do so. The charge was accordingly withdrawn subject to payment of court costs by the complainant.

Pleads Guilty To Careless Driving

A fine of $5 and ordinary court costs was imposed against Stanley Keays on a plea of guilty to a charge of careless driving when he was heard in magistrate's court today before Magistrate J. L. Lloyd of Northbrook.

The case originally was up before Magistrate T. V. Wills, but a plea of guilty by the accused was entered by his solicitor, Magistrate as he ordered Keays to appear before the higher magistrate.

The charge against Keays arose out of a motor accident which occurred on the Highway east of the city on April 18th.

Today in court J. E. Keays, father of the accused, stated that Stanley had joined the Navy, Mr. Keays objected to the procedure, claiming that his son really had pleaded guilty on two different occasions and should not be penalized for paying fees.

Magistrate Lloyd explained the procedure and said he would be up and he would try the case from the beginning. The magistrate informed Keays he would be no court costs, except court costs already paid, to be returned. As agent for his son, Mr. Keays pleaded guilty and forfeited the deposit. Constable F. Sheridan presented the facts of the case.

The constable told the court that Keays, driving a cleaner truck, had been driving north on Herchimer Ave., east of the city, when the truck suddenly veered to the south highway lane but had failed to stop before entering the north lane and had struck a passing car driven by Paul Gauthier of Aylmer.

Wrong Person Charged, Case Is Dismissed

It was a case of the wrong person being charged with the offence when in city magistrate's court here Magistrate T.V. Wills, a charge against Mrs. B. Somberg, Station Street, of permitting a dog to run at large was dismissed.

The charge was that Mrs. Somberg being the "owner or harborer" of a dog did permit the same to run at large contrary to the city by-law.

Giving evidence in her own behalf Mrs. Somberg stated she had been in bed with the dog on the date in question and had paid a neighbor to look after the dog.

The constable in charge of the case stated he had no sympathy with Mrs. Somberg on the charge in question but under the circumstances said he could not convict the accused.

Missing Teen-Age Girls Located At Bloomfield

Toronto, May 20 (CP)— Two teen-age girls, missing from their Toronto homes since Sunday, were reported Thursday night found at the home of friends in the Prince Edward County town of Bloomfield, about 120 miles east of here. TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Industrials and western oils declined steadily in a dull session on the Toronto stock exchange today. Changes are generally small with a few firming tendencies appearing in gold-mention. Golds and base metals moved narrowly to hold steady.

Volume for the first three hours was 346,000 shares, about 8,000 shares less than yesterday's similar period.

Almost all industrial issues trading were lower and under mild selling pressure.

Key western oils continued downward for the second consecutive session.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Produce quoted on the spot market here today follow: Churning cream No. 1, 56 cents fob, 63 delivered. Butter prints unquoted.

New Type of Diesel For Underground Hauling in Mines

Edinburgh, May 20 — (CP)— Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer today disclosed that a Scottish firm has developed a new type of diesel locomotive for underground haulage in mines.

He said he was hopeful Canadian orders for the new product soon would be placed.

Sir Stafford, addressing the Scottish Economic Conference, said the tunnelling industry in Scotland can and must play an important part in the export drive to Canada.

The Chancellor said Canada, next to the United States, is the biggest market for Scotch whisky. During the last year, he said, whisky exports to Canada "rose considerably."

Mother Shoots Her Young Son, Wounds Self

Mount Juliet, Tenn., May 20 — (AP)— A young housewife shot and killed her young son shortly after he had finished his dinner Thursday night and then critically wounded herself, Sheriff Ewing Atkinson said today.

The mother, Mrs. Alvia Hutchens, 29, was reported in critical condition in hospital.

Atkinson said neighbors rushed to the Hutchens' three-room frame home after hearing shots and found the 2 1-2 year old child, Charles, lying on the living room floor. He had been shot with a .22 calibre pistol. The mother was found in the yard.

Atkinson said there was no known motive for the shooting.

Britain's Exports Down in April Third Month in Row

London, May 20. (AP)—Britain's exports declined in April for the third month in a row.

The Board listed imports in April at £187,500,000 ($710,000,000) —£44,000,000 greater than the value of goods shipped abroad.

The exports were 43-per-cent greater in volume than those of 1938.

TWEED
Three Join Staff Of Hydro Office

Tweed (Special)—Two new men have joined the permanent staff of the Tweed Hydro office and one made a temporary appointment, has joined the staff for the summer months.

The local manager, E. M. Johns announces the appointment of Herbert Cox of Toronto as junior engineer, a new post, to be attended by a hydro manager Miss George Dunbar who formerly worked out of the Toronto office, as area electrical inspector here. A. G. Breckenridge of Toledo, Ont., a student at Queen's University, Kingston, will be here for the summer as part of his apprenticeship with the hydro Mr. Cox is a graduate of the University of Toronto in this year's engineering class. Mr. Dunbar has not yet taken over his duties here but has arrived in the village. He is awaiting the transfer of a man to his office to assist him. It is expected that the local office will be converted as that office space will be available to the new men.

Cadet Inspection

Platoon Commander Jack Leslie, a member of the staff, the corps; Ian Paul was platoon N.C.O. and Sergt. Mel Plue was in charge of the band. Flm LeSage was platoon marker.

Members of the corps, in their various manoeuvres were highly complimented and their efforts reflected on the excellent instruction received from Carl House, a member of the staff. The inspection opened with the general salute followed by inspection; the march past, advance in review order and another general salute.

Presentation of the "best shot" medals was made by Capt. Graves. The displays, included those in first aid, the fourth respiration, bandaging a broken jaw, and splinting a fractured upper leg were exceptionally well done. Demonstrations by the Bren gun and winkle-bolt gun rounded the inspection.

Instructor Carl House, Capt. Jack LeSage, members of the corps and bugle band were the recipients of gold medals from Captain Graves. A large number of spectators were on hand for this annual event.

The cadets headed by the bugle band marched along the main streets of the village after the inspection.

Kinmen Day Ball Park

Tweed Kinmen Club purchased the Lucas property near Memorial Park Wednesday and bull-dozers will be put to work in the near future to clear the land for a ball diamond. The park will be turned over to Tweed Memorial Parks Board and it will become their property since the Kinmen cannot have real estate under its regulations.

The intention is to place floodlights over the diamond but it is doubtful if this will be accomplished in time for this season's play. The local softball clubs have held no organization meeting and it is not yet known what clubs will be entered this year. It may be necessary to play the first games at the Separate School diamond if there is a delay in getting the new ball park in shape.

Inquest Closes Poisoned Tarts And Jellies Case

Goldenlig, Surrey, England, May 20 (CP)—The law today closed its file on the death of Frederick Radford, 46, who sent presents of poisoned tarts and jellies to his wife when she was in hospital and then took his own life by swallowing prussic acid.

A coroner's jury yesterday returned a verdict of murder and suicide after hearing evidence concerning the poisoning of the fatally eaten by Mrs. Radford while she was in sanitorium suffering from tuberculosis. The suggestion had been made that through her death Radford hoped to become free to marry for the third time.

Medical evidence showed that although Mrs. Radford would have succumbed to tuberculosis, her death was hastened by arsenic poisoning administered through the pies, tarts and jellies sent her by her husband.

But Radford maintained his innocence to the last. He left a note saying he was tired of being badgered about the matter and "I know nothing about."

He had sent the tarts and jelly to the hospital and friends and relatives of the dead woman testified that they had complained of illness after eating them. A doctor at the hospital said he had eaten part of a tart intended for Mrs. Radford and had immediately become ill.

Traces of arsenic found in a laboratory showed they were poisoned with an arsenic solution introduced through holes in the crust.

Says Asiatic Nations Can Get Together For Security

Seoul, May 20 (AP)—President Syngman Rhee of South Korea declared today that if the United States believes a Pacific pact is impossible now "I think Asiatic nations alone can meet together for their own collective security."

Rhee told a press conference that messages had been exchanged on the subject and "certain nations have indicated an interest."

Rhee mentioned Australia and the Philippines as countries showing an interest in a possible meeting.

WARNS AGAINST 'DUMPING' OF U.S. RUBBER GOODS

Toronto, May 20 — (CP) — A warning against the "dumping" of United States rubber goods on the Canadian market was given by C. H. Thomson of Montreal, president of the Rubber Association of Canada. Speaking at the annual meeting of the Association he said Canadian industry would have to maintain a vigilant outlook as competition with the United States becomes severe.

Several Killed As First Shells Fall in Shanghai

Shanghai, May 20 (AP) — The first shells of the civil war smashed into teeming Shanghai proper today as the Communists returned to the mainland on this largest city in all Asia.

In the old French quarter at 10:15 a.m. Chinese civilians were killed. Ten others were wounded.

In garrison communities said two companies of Communists tried to seize the government radio transmitter in the Woosung sector, 10 miles north of Shanghai but were beaten back.

It said that government positions were intact on the east side of the Whangpoo River in the Pootung sector. The Reds last were 25 to eight miles from Shanghai proper on this front.

It reported that Shanghai's time is drawing short.

The Blood Chit, Canada's watchfort thoroughfare, was banned to civilian traffic. What the Nationalists are doing there is not clear. There were no important troop loadings on ships waiting at anchor.

Nationalist troops are on the move in Shanghai—north, south, east and west.

The United States Navy still has not resumed the ferry service from Shanghai to Nanking on the Yangtze. This service was suspended temporarily three days ago.

CAPITALISM STILL

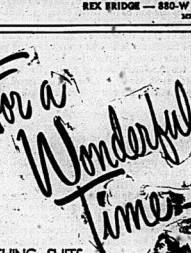
Of his visit to Italy, Mr. McCullagh said that nation "to me presents the most-encouraging picture of all Europe." He said that "if the wishes of the Italian people can be made articulate through their leaders, they will never be willing to become engaged in war."

The publisher found the average German much different from the Italian and German girls prettier. "Those we went to war with and I am afraid he is not particularly against Hitler yet."

Canada might assist in dealing with the German problem and the plight of the German people by including in immigration plans a "substantial number of those people whose forebears have proven such industrious and loyal citizens."

Urges Co-operation

Mr. McCullagh, who himself a Protestant, said that if Communism is considered the greatest evil "we would be the greatest if we did not co-operate to the utmost with that group which could fight Communism with the great perseverance effectiveness and ow a spiritual, rather than a purely political, plane—and such a group is materially the Roman Catholic church."



Switzerland, composed chiefly of Germans, French and Italians presented "an immense lesson for those Canadians of faint heart who have despaired, of Canada's future because of its multi-racial composition and French-Canadian problem."

Urging industrialists to take an active interest in politics, Mr. McCullagh said that fighting in wars is only a form of public service. Those who went to war expected a willingness to die for their country and "surely it is equally noble to live for one's country—perhaps just as difficult and most certainly a more-abiding and more-rewarding task."

F. D. R. JR. WINS

During the Second World War the population of the free nations had opportunity to study great men as leaders of the free against the tyrannical and aggressive dictators. Two of the outstanding figures of modern times have been former British Prime Minister Winston Churchill and U. S. President Franklin D. Roosevelt. Their grasp of affairs widened the horizon of the world and inspired those who love and fought for freedom as nothing but human personality can do. In that climactic period of history from 1939 to 1945 a brighter light shone on statesmen than ever for the age was one that tested the right of freedom and democracy most to the core.

Today the name of Churchill is as magic and the memory of the late President of the United States is precious in the minds of the free, who live in his country and in other democratic lands and even in those dark lands where men of vision have caught the gleam despite the dim setting in which they are placed.

Recent days have bought the name of Roosevelt to the fore as the first of the sons of Franklin Delano Roosevelt offered his services to his state as a representative in Congress and won handsomely. Good fortune will accompany him as he begins his career as Congressman. He will be regarded with interest by people everywhere.

In the New World and in the Old too where democratic institutions prevail, F. D. Roosevelt Jr., will have a meaning to people. Even to lands where the light of democracy does not shine except in small groups of brave hearts the election of the son of the Great War President will have a significance.

Sons of great men have a great task before them for they are inevitably measured up against the political stature of their fathers. But during history the sons of great leaders too have often become great. That the scion of the noble Roosevelt family will occupy no small place in his country's national life can well be expected.

HAZARDS

The home, the refuge and abiding place of practically everyone, and the dream of even the homeless wanderer, the repeated haven of safety and security, possesses another reputation however, not so often recognized or admitted, that of the place where most accidents occur, causing injury and often fatality.

Yet that is really not so strange. Everyone knows the record for fatal fires, for innumerable falls, including plunging down a basement or house stairway, or tripping over familiar objects. In fact the home is credited with being the scene of the accidents outnumbering the mishaps of other places and locations.

The home is a little world in itself. Just as men, women and children inhabit numerous countries so men, women and children are centred about the home. It is the axis of their world. There the most of their time is spent, each home possessing an invididuality from the conduct of those who dwell in it. It is the place of all places where rest calls for sleep, it is still, in a large measure, the place where most meals are prepared and enjoyed. It is the place with which everyone is familiar and that familiarity like familiarity anywhere else may breed accidents of numerous kinds, — in many cases, that of children, accustomed due to methods of heating in the winter months to even in the warmest months of the year for meals have to be cooked yet in and year out and where there is fire there is the danger of burns or scalding. It is easy to step on a nail or a tack and run the risk of blood poisoning from infection.

The centre of the family life, the home, has to be guarded carefully against the designs of fate or chance which seem to await an opportunity to harm and injure young and old who dwell in this little haven or world within the greater world without.

The accidents which cause so many injuries in the home are a warning to everyone to be on the guard against risks to which people seem prone.

Another nation has come into full stature and has begun its modern history, Israel has been added to the United Nations. This achievement has made history and the new state has been launched on her course one among the world of nations.

DESTINY

We are blunderers all, for
No way the result of our lives we learn
Tomorrow is hidden, and there's no light
Clearly, to show us the wrong
from right.
We grope in the dark with hope and fear,
But we never know all that is happening here.

A baby is born and the first fair cry
Changes the lives of all those nearby.
Boy meets girl and the smiles

That follow may run through a thousand years.
A spark is dropped, and we'll never learn
Through how many homes that fire will burn.

We are blunderers all. But a lifetime through
We help or we harm by whatever we do.
For we carry about as we come and go
The joys and sorrows of all we know.
Whatever our purpose, it seems that we Are a part of that secret
destiny.

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 20th, 1920

In a bowling match at Peterboro the Ponies of the Belleville Major League, composed of Joe Earnish, Pat Drumm, Jack Commins, Jack Yerex and Allan Meagher lost three points, but as they had won three points in a match here, an extra game was played to break the tie; the result was that the Ponies won by a small margin. A picked team from this city composed of Dan Doran, Art Whalen, Dave Tobe, Pat Delmar and Frank Stevens was successful in winning from their Peterborough opponents three points out of four.

Mr. H. Reynolds of this city is greatly interested in radio and has set up in his house a transmitting set. His station call is NEGE. Recently he was in conversation with a station in Seattle, Wash. An operator in England heard the conversation, but as he had not a transmitter he could not answer the call. The English operator, however, sent Mr. Reynolds a card advising him that he had heard a transmission from station YEBM.

Mackenzie's Column; President Dutra's Visit to U.S. Symbolic Event

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

The visit of Brazilian president Enrico Dutra to the United States is a happy interlude of sunshine through the international storm clouds.

It is symbolic of a great friendship which cannot be too assiduously guarded in these days when the countries of the Western Hemisphere must stand together for the common good.

Long-time Friends

In an address before a joint session of the Senate and House, the president referred to relations between Brazil and the United States "as a rare example of free association of two peoples which has prevailed over a period of more than 120 years." He spoke of President Truman's visit to Rio de Janeiro in 1947 for the signing of the Inter-American Treaty of can Defence Pact, and said it was a memorable event in the friendship of the two countries.

Dutra said the Inter-American defense pact "is the expression of reciprocity of the American Republics in common defense against aggression." That is true at least on paper — but he might have added that such an agreement to be effective must be supported by vigilant, unfailing friendships and study of ways and means to strengthen the association.

Brazil Important

The visit of Dutra to the United States is of course an excellent illustration of how friendships are to be cultivated.

We mustn't overlook that there are nineteen other republics belonging to the Hemisphere Pact. That idea of friendship shouldn't be allowed to tie fallow too long lest it lose its fertility.

It is well for the Americas to remind themselves that they still are the "new world." The countries across the seas from the Americas are tremendously important. Who can say that those resources don't exceed the total of those in the new world?

Certainly if we stand together, and for all and all for one, there will come the time when the Americas need have no fear of aggression.

MANY ANSWERS TO AD

Toronto, May 20 (CP) — Mr. and Mrs. Max Boye of suburban Weston had 14 replies today to the invitis in answer to an advertisement they had printed. The ad read: "Apartment to let—young couple with children preferred." The couple have a two-year-old daughter of their own.

Rutland, Vt., May 20 (AP)

One of two world war veterans who could serve a lifetime in jail for non-payment of debts declined today to consider taking a poor debtor's oath to gain freedom.

Edward J. Fugatt, counsel for Ralph J. Fugatt, 39, former Springfield, Mass., newspaper writer and his client had ruled against taking the oath.

Fugatt and Bernard J. Smith, 33, of Fair Haven, Vt., have been confined to the county jail for about two months.

They were sent there for alleged failure to pay civil court judgments of more than $2,000 each in separate cases arising from automobile accidents.

Shea intends to test the constitutionality of the law under which the men are imprisoned.

Legal authorities reported that under the century old law it is possible to hold the men in jail for life—but not indefinitely.

Fugatt, a combat veteran and former German prisoner, said he was unable to pay the judgment because he's broke. He said he will allow his father to mortgage his home to satisfy the debt he owes.

Two Escape Injury As Car Roles Over Embankment

North Bay, May 20 (CP) — Two Copper Cliff men, Arthur Wiltenberg and James R. Twist miraculously escaped serious injury today when the car in which they were driving left Highway 17 and rolled down a north of Powassan, somersaulting and down an embankment and was badly demolished.

The two men were thrown from the car but escaped with sustained only minor bruises and a shaking up.

The Copper Cliff men were travelling from Toronto to their home when the mishap occurred.

CHARGED WITH CAUSING HARM

Whitby, May 20 — (CP)—Lawrence Green, 30, was charged today with criminally causing harm as a result of a street fight Thursday in which Thomas Mc-Leod, 24, suffered a knife wound in the stomach. The wound is not believed serious.

BELLS TOLL AT ALDERVILLE

Peterbrough, May 20 (CP) — Bells of Alderville, Indian Reserve tolled 31 times yesterday during funeral services for Chief John Josiah Tobico. The peal of bells, one for each year of the dead person's life, is an ancient Indian custom.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

ON OUR OWN LEGS

There is a long hill leading from the lake to the campus. The other evening as we drove up the hill, groups of boys were returning from camp. The greater number of them walked along and paid no attention to our car, but a few straggling stood by the cold wind and thumbed up the hill. The distance was comparatively short and most of the boys were willing to walk, but a few wanted a lift.

We hear a great deal today about free enterprise and the contribution it has made to the building up of America. The boys who were willing to walk up the hill correspond to the people in daily walks of life who are not thinking more than the opportunity in life to make their way. Always there are a few standing at the roadside, they thumbs raised, asking for a lift. In the office they ingratiate themselves with the president or the boss, in the sitting all the right hand, or at his left. In the mill they pay more attention to keeping on the good side of the foreman than they do to the proper performance of their tasks. In college they believe that the way to make good is by getting in with the right crowd and doing the proper thing.

We should thank God for the open road and good strong legs to carry us. This is what America stands for.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE BEAUTIFUL MAPLE

For weeks now I have been watching my favorite maple tree that stands like a sentinel, viewing the world from the front of my library. I bought it many years ago when it was hardly more than eight feet high, and I paid $10.00 for it. Today it stands like a queen, in all its Springtime beauty and glory, for its leaves are out and it reaches as higher than my home's roof.

All during the days of Autumn I watched the leaves of another Springtime, gradually, silently, and beautifully, change their colors, each day more colorful than the day before—until finally each found its place on the bosom of Mother Earth, and only the tree's bare branches remained.

Now, however, my maple's life has been resurrected to its full virginal glory, and perhaps many a seed has been carried by the wind to some fertile spot where its own life may be duplicated in following years. Nature is so deliberate.

When a boy I used to tap a large number of sugar maples and boil the sap into syrup that my mother put into cans for the following Winter. My love for this syrup seems to grow with the years, but none tastes so delicious as that which I made myself in those early Spring days. I wonder if the memory doesn't have something to do with it, however?

Maple trees have always intrigued me for they are likely to be abundant and lavish. Today I watched the gentle wind carry the new leaves, as though they were hanging from the throat of Pan's cesai I watched the gentle light upon some of the branches, and watched the green leaves change from limb to limb and then crawl down to the earth and die for some hidden nut. And I watched the morning sunlight spread its silver and gold upon the new-born leaves.

To plant a maple, and give it care, is one of the best investments that anyone can make about his home. Its growth and increasing beauty will amaze you. Each year will increase its beauty and repay you times over for cost and labor in its behalf. It's a generous tree and I've made it like that of a mother's arms.

'Mad Parson' Arrested After 2-Year Quest

London, May 20 (Reuters) — Britain's most elusive lunatic, John Edward Allen—the "mad parson"—was arrested here Wednesday night. He had been the object of a two-year search.

Allen, found guilty of strangling a 17-month-old baby in 1937, escaped from Broadmoor criminal lunatic asylum disguised as a parson, July 30, 1939.

For two years police scoured Britain for him.

WHETHER TO BLOW OR LET IT DRIP

Not long ago I cited here the opinion of R. Wallace Teed, M.D., (Transactions American Academy of Ophthalmology and Otolaryngology, Jan. Feb. '40) that "the older teaching that otitis media" (inflammation of middle ear) "is due to nose blowing is fallacious and should be discarded.

This was so sudden that I became flustered and sounded off here without waiting for the publication of Dr. Teed's report.

Now that I have the data on which the author based his conclusion, I'm not quite so certain as I was before.

My idea of the right way to blow the nose was that (a) the less you blow it the better; (b) if or when you do blow it have only gently, without pinching the nostrils; (c) blow only when it is about to drip, bending your head forward so the floor and chair members will be mostly vertical instead of horizontal, and hold handkerchief or disposable tissue not against the nose but an inch or two below the nose while you have blowing.

That technique is moderate or neutral, as compared with blowing ing the nostrils and blowing forcibly, on the one hand, and sniffing or snuffing up the nose from running, on the other. Frankly, I still believe that is a moderate rational position, but it's the best I can do at present.

Dr. Teed studied the men in the training tank at the U.S. Submarine Base, New London, Connecticut, for two years during the war, his observations there compelled him to doubt that old theory that improper blowing of the nose during the acute upper respiratory infection (C-R-I) was the immediate cause of acute otitis media (middle ear inflammation).

The training involved preliminary exposure to air pressures increased 50 pounds per square inch above atmospheric pressure. Upper respiratory secondary to frequent infections of the eustachian tubes by the training exposures, in order to equalize pressure in the middle ear cavity (within the ear drum) with the pressure in the outer ear canal and in the nose and throat passages. Each man inflated his eustachian tubes perhaps 50 times during those days.

Dr. Teed was electrified to see men with acute infections of the upper respiratory tract go through the tests. He was convinced they'd suffer otitis media immediately only one man out of approximately 30,000 developed middle ear inflammation in the sequence.

From this training tank experiment, Dr. Teed is convinced that otitis media is due to obstruction of the eustachian tube. This creates a relative vacuum in the middle ear cavity, a depression of the air contained in the cavity. Result: pain. It becomes infected the condition is called purulent otitis media or, popularity, gathering in the ear, ear abscess.

Dr. Teed's report of his observations at New London emphasizes the importance of the eustachian tube (1 1-4-inch air vent and drainage tube connecting middle ear cavity, which houses the famous hammer, anvil and stirrup ossicles, with the nasopharynx or nose-throat cavity above the soft palate) in the evolution and treatment of middle ear disease and deafness.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Diet and Acne

I am eighteen and subject to acne. For several years I have refrained from eating sugar in any form. While one is advised to eat fruit, it seems to aggravate the condition in my case.

(J. H.)

Answer—Aside from following the general principles of the basic health or protective diet, the character of the diet has little to do with the condition. Send stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet on Acne—Blackheads and Pimples.

Mattress For Backache

I am thirty pounds overweight and have hypertension. One day my back feels pretty good, and the next day it nearly kills me. Would sleeping on a mattress help?

(Mrs. R. F.)

Answer— For the first few nights you may find it pretty hard, but in the long run a very firm mattress without spring is best for your back.

Consult a Physician

Son, 13, is going through a somewhat nervous and "jumpy" condition. We wonder whether his age (puberty) would account for it.

Answer—Certainly not. Send the boy to your physician.

The Pause

I want to distribute these pamphlets on the Menopause. Because of the women who think that "because they are "going through the change" everything should "pause." I wish more doctors would tell women the truth about their ailments. Having worked in a doctor's office for twenty years I know your attitude and teachings are right.

(——)

Answer—Thank you. Any reader who sends stamped self addressed envelope may have the pamphlet The Menopause.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

The number of people who really matter in the world is extremely small. The vast majority of us are merely cyphers. It matters so little that even if we have made a million dollars, and built up fifty acres of factories, ten days after we're gone, not even a ripple remains of the record of our passing.

Even for the hundreds of millions of us who don't make a million, anybody's life will serve as well in one place somebody else will do our job the minute we lose it. Even the great leaders, engineers, probably, the men now living, all over the earth, have not enough thought to change, in the slightest degree, the course of events.

Take Hitler, for example: If Hitler had been killed in the first week, could events have taken the course they did in the past twenty-five years? It is a pretty safe guess that none of the battles to be gathered around him could have led the German people into the ruin Hitler brought upon them. And as for Churchill, had he been shot by the Boers in 1900, would there have been anyone among the muddled gentry available in 1940 to have seized events by the throat and forced them to bend them to his will?

It might well be that in each generation there are only twenty or forty or sixty men born with the right stuff in them to be the rest of us are just pawns of various events. Now, one man may move or be moved save by these few men of destiny.

Now comes the $64 question: what if the twenty, forty or sixty men who were born in this generation were all killed in the last war, from the U.S. the United States, five from Britain, three from France, six from Russia, six from Italy, two from Belgium, and so on? Suppose these were the men who, when in their prime were to have seized hold of events for us—and all now dead!

Philosophers say that events shape these men. But could events have shaped Goering into a Hitler, or Bevin into a Churchill? My own impression is that events shape men only to a very limited degree. The disposal of a mere handful of Canada Opening Era of Expansion Says St. Laurent

(By The Canadian Press)

Moncton, N.B., May 20 (CP)—Liberal election policy is before the Canadian people today, five weeks before they go to the polls June 27 to elect their 21st parliament.

It was enunciated Thursday night by campaigning Prime Minister St. Laurent in a coast-to-coast CBC broadcast and a public address in this English-French railway city.

Broadly, the 67-year-old Prime Minister asked for an extension of 14 years of Liberal rule to allow the party "to continue to work for peace and security, for trade and prosperity, for full employment and social security, for complete recognition of Canadian nationhood and the development of all aspects of our national life."

Outlines Policy Structure

Mr. St. Laurent stated the R Mr. St. Laurent called the structure of policy with these observations:

1. The iron ore of Labrador and Quebec, the oil of Alberta, the mineral discoveries from end to end of the land are all indications that Canada is just at the opening of a great new era of expansion.

2. Foreign trade stands at levels considered unbelievable in 1939 and the outlook today "is far better than it was at the end of the war."

3. The government feels that "some vast construction projects like the Great Lakes-St. Lawrence Seaway and Power development have been delayed too long.

4. All three levels of government must combine to promote low-rental housing projects, slum clearance and community planning.

5. A new Liberal administration would consult the provinces to work out some way to amending Canada's constitution in Canada rather than through British parliamentary amendments to the British North America Act.

Second only to peace was "a high level of external trade."

Since the war Canada had recognized that the restoration of the western European economy was an essential condition of our own lasting security and prosperity."

Good Relations Continue

Relations had never been better with the great outlets, retain and will, the U.S. and we are confident that solutions can be found to the problems of keeping up mutually advantageous trade."

The Trans-Canada highway would be advanced without delay now agreements were reached with the provinces. A great deal of employment potential lay in development projects which would affect all areas.

Canada's housing construction surpassed all other countries but the growth of the population was outpacing supply, Ottawa had been given the lead although housing is primarily a provincial and municipal responsibility.

The Liberal party wanted to see a provincially-administered contributory health insurance system established as soon as there are facilities to support it but there must first be agreement with the provinces.

Old age pensions were recently boosted $10 but the party wanted a contributory system and that also required agreement with the provinces. An "overwhelming" majority of the people favored family allowances.

A royal commission was studying the broad field of taxation which the government could best use to encourage the development of all the talents and capabilities of our people." Federal encouragement also was given to those things which are "distinctively Canadian in the arts and in literature."

Coldwell Wants Subsidized Low-Rent Homes

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Halifax, May 20 (CP)—M. J. Coldwell, National C.C.F. leader, said for Newfoundland, today after injecting the controversial housing question into his national election tour and describing it as one of the most important issues in the June 27 election.

Mr. Coldwell was scheduled to fly to St. John's for a meeting in the new province tonight before flying back to Sydney, N.S., where he will speak Saturday night.

Speaking at the Halifax Arena Thursday night, he declared that the building of low-rental homes with government subsidy is the only answer to Canada's housing problem.

Shirking Duties

Accusing the Liberal government of shirking its duties and passing the buck on the housing question, Mr. Coldwell said "no nation has been able to solve its housing problems without subsidized housing."

The C.C.F. had been opposed by both the Liberals and Progressive Conservatives when it introduced a motion in the parliament calling for action of this kind. The two old parties had voted against the motion, despite demands by the Canadian Federation of Mayors and Municipalities, the Canadian Welfare Council, the Canadian Legion and many other organizations for subsidized low-rent housing.

Turning to labor, Mr. Coldwell said the Liberals had followed the same tactics when faced with demand for a national labor code. "It is deplorable that we haven't yet got a national labor code," he said.

Does Not Condone Violence

He referred to violence in the strikes by seamen on the east coast and by asbestos miners in Quebec and declared that such violence could occur in Saskatchewan because the C.C.F. government there had passed a labor code which would ensure peaceful settlement of labor disputes.

"The C.C.F. doesn't condone violence and it is a libel that this violence occurs, but when it does occur, it is the duty of the government, either provincial or federal or both, to inquire into the violence and punish those responsible."

Rededicate London's Oldest Parish Church

London, May 20 (CP)— London's oldest parish church, gutted by German bombs and restored largely by Canadian and American generosity, will be reopened for worship July 14.

The fourth in All-Hallows-by-the-Tower, Rt. Rev. John Wand, Bishop of London, will officiate at the rededication. Queen Mary will attend.

Restoration of the church has been aided by gifts from various Canadian firms.

Americans, too, aided in reconstruction of All Hallows, which survived the great fire of 1666 but was almost completely destroyed by fire and high explosive in the German blitz.

From commonwealth countries came a new font, hewn out of Gibraltar rock, a sanctuary chair from Australia and a rare timber from New Zealand. South Africa is to finance new pews.

R.C.A.F. Considers Installing Four American Pratt and Whitney Engines in North Star Aircraft

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)— RCAF headquarters Thursday said in a statement that it was considering the installation of four American Pratt and Whitney engines in a North Star aircraft now being constructed for special service use.

However, there has been no final decision and no order has as yet been placed for a power plant for the North Star, scheduled to be completed by Canadair Ltd., in Montreal and delivered to the RCAF late this year.

Altogether the RCAF has 22 North Stars, equipped with British Merlin in-line engines. These engines have been proven satisfactory, the RCAF said, and will not be changed. The Pratt and Whitney engine is a radial, air-cooled job.

The statement said:

"The aircraft in question is not an addition nor a conversion as far as the RCAF is concerned, but is a replacement for an earlier North Star destroyed while on loan to T.C.A. (Trans Canada Airlines)."

High Altitude

The new North Star will be used for high-altitude long range air training of RCAF air crew and, with this in mind, the aircraft is being constructed to accommodate two full crews.

The North Star, to be delivered to the RCAF experimental wing at nearby Uplands air station, also will be available to government officials making flying trips.

It will have room for 32 daytime passengers and 23 night-time passengers, in addition to two full crews.

The statement added:

"It is being designed to meet a continuous requirement for movement of service personnel over long distances."

An official explained the R.C.A.F. had in mind movement of government officials for conferences in London and Washington and other capitals of Atlantic Pact signatories.

Text of statement:

Plans are proceeding for acquisition by the R.C.A.F. of a presurfaced North Star aircraft to be used for high altitude long range flying training of air crew and provision is being made for accommodation of two full crews for this purpose. It is being designed to meet a continuous requirement for movement of service personnel over long distances. It is anticipated that such needs will increase as result of Canada's present international agreements.

Provision is made for sleeping en route, to allow personnel to arrive at their destination fit and ready for work. The internal arrangement under consideration provides for 32 day-time passengers and 23 night-time passengers, in addition to two crews.

Draft specifications call for investigation of an alternative American engine installation (double one aircraft Pratt and Whitney), but this investigation is not yet complete. From point of view of defence requirements it is advisable to have an alternate installation available and proved should the need arise.

No Intention of Change

There is no intention however of changing engines at present North Stars. The fact that the RCAF North Stars have not had a single forced landing nor been involved in injury to personnel during the 18 months of operation in which over 1,650,000 air miles in 1949, also 60 orders have been placed for any other power plant.

The engine in question is not an addition nor a conversion as far as the RCAF is concerned, but is a replacement for an earlier North Star destroyed whilst on loan t T.C.A.

Urge no More Race Tracks For Toronto Area

Toronto, May 20 (CP) — Rev. D.M. Perrin, Oshawa, charged yesterday that a new way around the Lord's Day Act which might permit "every bowling alley and every pool hall in town" to operate on Sunday "is being fought by the Lord's Day Alliance in Oshawa.

He told the Toronto Anglican Synod that a bowling alley in his city had begun operations on Sunday "on a club basis." No money was paid but the alleys were open to club members, he said.

"If that club can get away with it, there's no reason why every bowling alley and pool hall in town can't have its own club and operate on Sunday," he said.

Mr. Rose said that 40 per cent of all racing in Canada was done in Ontario last year.

The board approved sending a protest to the Ontario Municipal Board which asked that no further race tracks be allowed to open in the Toronto area.

Drew Says Canada Faces Disaster if ERP Withdrawn

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hamilton, N. B., May 20— (CP) — Canada faces "disastrous prospects" if the United States withdraws European recovery program support of Canadian trade, George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Thursday night.

Mr. Drew, who winds up the eastern end of his coast-to-coast Federal election campaign tour with a meeting today in Moncton, Que., said Canada's whole foreign trade now rests on E.R.P.

He spoke earlier in Newcastle, N. B., and briefly at Bathurst, N. B.

In Newcastle he repeated a charge that the CBC is a propaganda agency for the government and that it is competing unfairly with private stations.

The government "wants to make sure of effective control over broadcasting agencies so that it can confer no favors in favor," he said.

Separate Control

The CBC, he added, should not have power to control private stations and still compete against them. There should be a separate agency to control the publicly - owned broadcasting system.

At Bathurst, Mr. Drew spoke from the back of his private railway car as the train made a brief stop. He said there are some people in Canada who are trying to arouse seeds of suspicion and distrust. He warned that a Progressive Conservative government would not tolerate the activities of communists in any sphere.

At his evening meeting here, he said members of the ill-fated expedition to Hong Kong should be given pay at Pacific war theatre rates retroactive to the day of their October, 1941, sailing from Canada.

Many members of the force, which he has charged was ill-equipped and only partially trained, came from this area.

COTTON TARGET UP

Britain's production target for cotton cloth for 1949 is 2,050,000,000 yards—150,000,000 more than last year.

SNOW IN S. CALIFORNIA

Los Angeles, May 20 (AP) Southern California's rugged winter isn't over yet. It snowed Thursday night in the San Gabriel and San Bernardino Mountains, as much as three inches falling in Big Bear Valley resort. Los Angeles residents even reported seeing white flakes here, but the Weather Bureau explained that it rarely snows when the temperature is in the sixties.

FLAMES BAFFLE POLICE

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Fire of unknown origin gutted the Thompson Mincemeat Company building in suburban Leaside early today. Two police constables discovered the fire, but were driven back by flames when they tried to enter the building.

Movies of Ethiopian Natives Shown At St. John's League

Stirling.—The May meeting of St. John's ladies' league was held at the home of Miss Anne Fanning with 25 members present. The meeting was opened by Rev. A. J. Anderson. Mrs. Woodcock, the president, then welcomed Mr. and Mrs. Mallory, who were the guests for the evening. It was decided to hold the annual league banquet in the parish hall early in June.

Mrs. Melville Tanner synopsized the chapter, "The Threat of War", from the study book. "We can have either war or civilization not both," she said, "civilization depends on there being something greater than the will of any nation or any race. It will only be when men together all over the world, learn to speak the same language, and to practise diligently in one another, and share the same hope for freedom and democracy, that peace will be possible and the threat of war forgotten."

Mrs. Ken Mumby then read a humorous and very human story of the Rev. Wesley Pettijohn's trials and troubles entitled "The Preacher Sees the Light". Rev. A. J. Anderson introduced Mr. Mahon, the principal speaker of the evening, who told something of Bishop Taylor and Mrs. Mahon spent a year and a half, recently.

Mr. Mahon spoke of the difficulty in getting pictures of the natives who are very backward, but he was able to get some interesting and splendid movies, many of them in color, which he had taken during the trip over, and during their stay there.

Mr. Mahon was head master of a boys' school and said that the boys were interested and very eager to learn.

Mr. and Mrs. Mahon brought back some handicraft work which was fascinating.

Rev. A. J. Anderson closed the meeting and refreshments were served.

Mrs. J. M. Wood Addresses St. Paul's Women's Assoc.

Stirling.—The May meeting of St. Paul's United Church Women's Association was held in the church parlors on Tuesday afternoon with 100 present. Guests were present from the following churches: Springbrook, Wellman's Corners, Mount Pleasant, Bethel, Carmel, Salem and Frankford.

The president of St. Paul's W.A., Mrs. W.T. Elliott, presided over the meeting. During the short business period, the secretary reported 12 cards, and six letters were sent during the past month, and the visiting committee reported 39 calls made during April. Mrs. Gordon Bailey, treasurer presented a complete financial report. Mrs. A. Armstrong read a paper, for the Citizen Corps plan for hospital care, reported, at the Dixie Conference. Mrs. Elliott was appointed the delegate to the Ladies' Aid, and Women's Association Annual Convention to be held in Grace United Church, Belleville, on Thursday, May 26. A motion was put forth that the W.A. purchase silverware, the president to be in charge of same.

Mrs. R. A. Patterson, in a very gracious manner, welcomed the guests and extended to them the sincere hospitality of the ladies.

The scripture lesson was taken from Matthew 13, and was read by Mrs. R. Barker; and the reading, based on the scripture lesson "Some Weeds in Every Garden" was read by Mrs. C. Mallory.

Program

Mrs. Walter Warren accompanied by Mrs. Will Heath, sang very effectively the solo "A Memory." A piano duet "Electric Flash Gallop," was rendered by Mrs. Arthur Fyeas, and Mrs. Kenneth Weaver.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen delighted the audience with the reading entitled "The Sacred Stone." Mrs. Harold West and Mrs. Ivy Thain favored the audience with a humorous duet, "I Was For Me," with Mrs. N.E. Eggleton at the piano.

Faith, Gratitude and Prayer

After the singing of a hymn, Mrs. R.B. Duffin introduced the guest speaker of the afternoon, Mrs. J. M. Wood, of Belleville, president of the Women's Association of Prince Edward and Hastings Counties, who forcefully emphasized in her address on "Faith and Gratitude" and the need of prayer. The speaker cited several personal references in her life where the hand of God guided her. "We are the mothers of our church and we have the only solution to peace, God used unsuspecting people to do His work."

Following her recitation of the poem "I Met God in the Morning," the speaker closed her address with a challenge to her listeners to awake, and by their individual lives make Jesus real to the people.

The president moved a hearty vote of thanks to the guest speaker, Mrs. Wood, to all those who gave of their talent so willingly and to all who helped to make the afternoon one long to be remembered by those present. Mrs. Harold Elliott of Bethel, and Mrs. J. A. Warren of Frankford, on behalf of the visitors thanked the St. Paul's W.A. for their hospitality and for a pleasant and profitable afternoon.

The Parish Benediction brought this very outstanding meeting to a close, which St. Paul's W.A. served refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed by all.

Friends Honor Bride-to-Be With Gift Shower

A miscellaneous shower was recently held at the home of Miss Lorraine Gladwell, 107 Lingham Street, in honor of Miss Carolyn Rickett, bride-elect of this month.

The time was spent in a social get-together with refreshments being served by the hostess.

Carolyn was the recipient of many lovely and useful gifts, for which she graciously thanked the givers.

Anil Baneyie Addresses Rotary Supper

Stirling.—The highlight of last Tuesday evening's Rotary supper meeting was an address by Mr. Anil Baneyi from Fatsangar, India, who is spending two years at the Bateman Hall. Mr. Baneyi, who has worked for ten years with the Sale Shoe Company in India, will be spending two years at Batawa, two years in England and two years in France, after which he will return to his native country of India.

Indian Facts

In the very interesting address he outlined some of the facts regarding his own country. Canada with an approximate population of 13,000,000 would cost as much as compared to India with its population of over 400,000,000 people. He pointed out that even with the terrific rate of birth mortality, the population was increasing approximately three millions per year. There are over 200 definitely different languages and dialects, but English is the language which is commonly used and is basic.

Tribute to Mahatma Ghandi

Mr. Baneyie stated that the British rule in India language has done much to unify the country, and that during the past several years, communications had certainly been improved. He also paid glowing tribute to Mahatma Gandhi whose main theme was "truth and love," and who was a hatred a..d liberate by non-violence."

He mentioned was the fact that there are bells in India in every hut up in the tons, which have been there for centuries. They were not cast in India but no one knows where they originated.

A vote of thanks was moved to the speaker by Lick Hadley. Guests Inclided W. C. Mallory, Belleville; Ken Couch, Trenton. E. A. Roberts, Trenton; E. James, Belleville and Fred Peppercall, of Stirling.

Prime Minister And Mrs. St. Laurent 41 Years Married

Moncton, N.B. May 20. (CP) Prime Minister St. Laurent and Mrs. St. Laurent, on a cross country election campaign tour, observed their 41st wedding anniversary in this Maritime railroad centre Thursday.

After the welcome the Prime Minister chatted briefly with several Canadian National Railways workers on the platform of the train and then retired to his private car.

DIRECTOR OF NURSING

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Miss Gladys J. Sharpe, of Toronto, who graduated from Toronto Western Hospital in 1925, has been appointed director of nursing for the hospital, it was announced Thursday night. She has been with the Canadian Nurses Association as recipient of the Florence Nightingale International Foundation Scholarship in 1937.

Importance of News of Women Is Stressed

Toronto, May 20. (CP)—News about women, weighed as one of the chief topics of discussion on Thursday at a meeting of the editors of the Canadian Press Central circuit region held their annual meeting here.

The editors—all men—agreed that the women's sections of their newspapers are becoming increasingly important, imposing greater demand for lively reporting of events dealing with the home family, education, and other subjects of special interest to women.

Emphasis on women's news developed during a panel discussion on CP news features, led by F. R. Cahill of the Toronto Telegram and J. Frank Willis, of the Ottawa Journal.

Mrs. Ida Clarke, the Montreal Gazette, and Milford Smith, the Hamilton Spectator, led a discussion on proper handling of parliamentary news from Ottawa. World and Canadian news generally and the place of pictures in the paper were other subjects reviewed.

Mrs. J. Watson, D.C. Enrolls and Dedicates Guides

Mrs. John Watson, District Commissioner, assisted by a welcome guest of Company, 2, Girl Guides last Wednesday, Commissioner Watson first enrolled a New Guide, who had completed her probationary period, as a First-Class Guide, who has become a Guide leader, was dedicated.

After these ceremonies were completed Mrs. Watson gave the Company instructions regarding the Empire Church parade, invited the members, and their mothers to the Association tea, and then explained about the Guide Camp. This Camp is to be held at Kingston in May, and as it is farther away than usual, only girls who have attained their Second Class will be allowed to attend.

Patrol Leaders, and Seconds, held a Court of Honor meeting on Monday, at which they discussed plans for their closing meeting which will take the form of a banquet. The mothers of the girls are to be invited and the much coveted badges, and other awards will be presented at this time.

Company 2 wish to correct an error in their last report. The Scout Troop, which entertained them in March and which they entertained recently, was Troop No. 1 and not No. 2 as previously stated.

Women's Activities

HOLLOWAY ST. W.A.

The regular meeting of Holloway Street United Church Women's Association was held in the Church parlors on Thursday afternoon, with Mrs. A. Campbell, the president, in the chair.

The secretaries of all departments gave good reports and many items of business were dealt with. Mrs. G. Hobbs gave a few highlights from the Dominion W.A. Presbytery, which was held in Toronto.

The Worship service was taken by Mrs. C. Perkins and her theme was "Mothers". Mrs. Townsley opened this part of the meeting with quiet music, "My Mother's Prayer" and Mrs. Allen Kings gave the call to worship by reading a poem, followed by a scripture reading from Proverbs 30:; 30-31.

Mrs. B. H. Morton gave a reading "Over the Hills to the Poor House", which was much enjoyed and Mrs. G. Cherry contributed a duet, accompanied "Dear Little Mother" accompanied by Mrs. W. Phillips.

Mrs. Perkins then introduced Mrs. W. F. Tondak, who gave a very interesting talk on her trip to England, followed by Mrs. McDonald very graciously moving a vote of thanks to all who took part in the meeting.

Refreshments were served by Mrs. H. Morden and Mrs. F. C. Harrison and their group.

Fifteen members were in attendance at this meeting. Mrs. W. Green and Mrs. W. Oliphant, Mrs. Lowther, (nee Ruth Oliphant) and baby daughter, Susanna, also Mrs. W. Oliphant, the baby's other great grandmother.

Treatment of oily skin

When a girl has a shining nose that defies the efforts of the powder-puff, when her forehead beads and her chin looks as if it had just been buttered, it is her conviction that this affliction tops the list of good-looks grievances. A dry skin may be a nuisance, but it has little effect upon appearance. And it can be subdued by the free use of creamy cosmetics.

The distressed ollies are victims of sebaceous glands that do not, seem, know that moderation is sometimes too much. These little geysers perform numerous duties. They eliminate a certain amount of wastes. They keep the skin surface soft, smooth and pliable. To a certain extent they protect the cutaneous coat from injury by friction, and by exposure to strong sunlight and flaying winds. Like the sweat glands, they keep the body from losing heat too rapidly.

From the blood streams they pick up elements that unite and form what is called "sebum". This substance is particularly necessary for the health of the hair without it the shafts would become dry and brittle, break at the touch of the comb.

During adolescence, when glandular changes are taking place, these oil sources are extra active. As bacteria is more likely to make trouble for an oily skin than a dry one, pimples often form, causing some teen-agers of both sexes much unhappiness.

Soap should be used freely, especially at bedtime every bit of the lather must be rinsed away, first with warm water, then with cold. Dissolve a teaspoonful of ordinary baking soda in a cupful of water, apply with pledgets of cotton, let it dry on.

Use soap again in the morning and, after the warm rinsing, frisk an ice cube over the facial surface. Dip each in witch hazel and dab it on, letting it dry. Half an hour later you can play with the powder puff and the make-up kit.

Oily cosmetics can be used for the removal of make-up but should be wiped away immediately. There is a difference in powders; some are heavy and have an oily base. Find one that is of light consistency. The rouge compact will give a better effect than cream rouge.

The diet is of importance. All fats excite the sebaceous glands

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Don't Teach Your Children Fairy Tales About Life

It is never safe to bring children up with an unrealistic point of view toward life.

If they are taught to believe that anything, or anyone, is wholly good or wholly bad it is sure to cause serious difficulty in their emotional growth as they leave childhood behind and try to cope with the problems of maturity. Led to expect to meet a life, they may become disillusioned and bitter when they find how far reality can fall short of rosy dreams. On the other hand, if they have been given a distorted outlook by parents who have been disappointed in their own hopes and ambitions their confidence in their ability to achieve and their trust in other people may suffer serious damage.

The only safe, sane and fair thing is to tell children the truth from the very beginning: to explain that no one is perfect, and that life is composed of both happy and unhappy experiences to which the person of character must learn to adjust himself. Children who have been handled in such a way are going to grow up with the ability to stand on their own two feet, see things in their true proportions and cope with their problems.

A mother of two children, a girl of 16 and a boy of 13, whose marriage apparently has been unusually happy, writes me of the difficulty that now confronts her because she and her husband have always given their children the idea that all marriages are happy.

"We tried to teach them through fairy tales when they were very young," she says. "They are fine children, and of late now we believe that some day they will meet their prince or princess and be as happy as we have been. We have been believing that all marriages should turn out as ours has."

Now the children are witnessing the spectacle of an unhappy marital fiasco, brought about by his own misdeeds.

"Our children have been asking questions about their uncle and his wife," the mother writes. "We have been very evasive, but cannot keep on this way. We don't like to tell them the truth, and try as we can we tell them their uncle deserted his wife during her illness! We know it's going to affect their outlook on life.

"Shall my children be disillusioned just at a time when they will be seeking the companionship of the opposite sex?"

As I see it, there is only one thing for this mother to do, and that is to correct as quickly as possible the bad mistake she made earlier in teaching her children fairy tales about life. She can tell them that her own happy marriage is the way the love of a man and a woman should normally turn out, and that it will do as well if each of them has the right attitude toward the other and toward the responsibilities of life. But she will have to go on to say that when either husband or wife fails in these respects, there can be no happy marriage.

If she explains all this carefully, there is no reason why it should disillusion the children or poison their outlook on romance. On the contrary, if the explanation is given with understanding good by giving these teen-agers a and wisdom, it can result only in sound, mature point of viewpoint toward the realities of life, and by showing them the importance of developing in themselves the qualities that will make them happy and successful marital partners.

This mother should stop being evasive about her brother's mistreatment of his wife, and take herself and her children out of the dream world in which they have been living. Mighty spoken, the truth can never hurt anyone.

1. Yes indeed this conversational beginning is proper ... and very delightful, I think ... for letters or notes between intimate friends. It gives the note or letter a natural, spontaneous touch, gives the impression of a place to face chats.

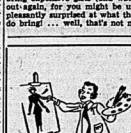
2. Strictly speaking "yours" should be included in the complimentary closing in a letter... for example, either "Yours sincerely" or "Sincerely yours" in formal correspondence. But in informal letters and notes, the "yours" may be omitted, and the closing be, for example, a simple Sincerely.

3. Yes ... it is discourteous to end any note or letter with any form of "hasty" or hastily."

Whom not to invite to a shower! Dear Mrs, Beeckman:

Whom should a shower list include? Should I invite people who I know would give expensive gifts even though I don't know these people very well? Should I include relatives with whom I don't get along very well?

CB



If you don't watch out you're going to have a horrible time at that shower! A shower should be a merry festive occasion, with the intimate friends of the bride-to-be invited to come to the informal gathering, each bringing a gift, a simple, inexpensive gift usually. But to invite people you don't know very well just because you believe the women will bring expensive gifts (and watch out again, for you might be unpleasantly surprised at what they do bring! ... well, that's not my idea of a good party. And to invite relatives with whom you don't get along very well, lady, that's inviting disaster.

When to give a sleek shower Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My sister-in-law is expecting her baby soon. What is the nearest possible date that I may have a shower for her?

S.B.F.

There is no rule about this ... the hostess' good taste and judgment, the circumstances, and the preference of the guest of honor (subtly inquired about by a relative or intimate friend of hers) determine the most convenient and acceptable time. Some baby showers are held before the baby birth, but nowadays there is quite a trend to give the baby shower about five or six weeks after the arrival of the baby.

Windsor Photographer Protests Slurs Cast on Sponsors o. Dance

Windsor, May 20 (CP)—Jack Dalgleish, chief of the Windsor Daily Star photographic staff, yesterday protested slurs being cast on sponsors of the ball at which nurses from Metropolitan General Hospital and prominent Windsorites attended.

Mr. Dalgleish a member of the Detroit Press Photographers' Association, testified before the Royal Commission probing affairs of the hospital that the association was "very careful" who was invited and that it "is a shame for dance has to be associated with this court."

The photographer was particularly perturbed when Commission Counsel George Mitchell asked him if there was anything "untoward at the dance."

Dance Well Done

"Absolutely nothing" replied Mr. Dalgleish, "the whole dance was very well done."

Previously Mr. Dalgleish's testimony, and that of two other nurses from the hospital identified as Miss F and Miss G, the financing methods of the hospital were explained in the hearings before Judge Eric Cross of Woodstock, one-man Ontario Royal Commission probing affairs of the municipally operated institution.

Dr. Clifford Weber, a member of the staff, revealed that the annual budget was set by taking the previous year's deficit and adding 10 per cent.

Further evidence on "party" planning by Rocco E. Atkin, hospital administrator at the hospital, was given by Misses F and G. They corroborated testimony made yesterday by five other nurses that Mr. Atkin had attempted to line up members of the staff as companions on various occasions.

Miss F. said she had been asked to go out with Mr. Atkin one week after her arrival in 1945. On that occasion the proposed party was to include Mayor Arthur J. Reaume and "other friends."

She said she refused to go out with married men and the invitation was not repeated directly, although she again was invited through a third party.

Warned Girls

Miss G., a supervisary member of the staff with 10 nurses under her, testified that she had warned her girls against spending any time talking to Mr. Atkin, after one girl had complained about being "bothered" by the man in regard to attending a party.

She advised them to confine their association with Mr. Atkin to purely business matters. There was indication in her evidence that this advice was disregarded by those particular nurses.

Technical matters in connection with administration were discussed by Lorne S. Cumming, city solicitor, before the probe was adjourned until tomorrow.

Mr. Dalgleish was the first of the male members of the party in the Book-Cadillac Hotel to be heard.

The dance, with which the party was connected, is an annual function and admission is by tickets sold by members of the association.

"I sold tickets to Mayor Reaume, Mr. Atkin, and to several other persons, including myself," Mr. Dalgleish said. "It is very embarrassing that any slur should come on the free association."

Some of the tickets sold by Mr. Dalgleish at $10 each, four went to Mayor Reaume, Mr. Atkin, Dr. F. J. G. Morgan, superintendent of East Windsor Hospital and Gordon H. Fuller, Windsor contractor. All have since become central figures in the probe.

Dalgleish said he sold a single ticket to Mayor Reaume, who later informed him that others were coming. The others bought tickets directly, the results used by the group of civic officials and nurses from the hospital.

He explained that he felt Mayor Reaume should be represented at the ball as mayor of Windsor.

Constant bickering between factions of the hospital board of governors marked many sessions leading up to and following the resignation of Mildred Maybee, superintendent of nurses, a former board member said earlier today.

Mrs. R. C. Sanborn, a practicing physician, has resigned from the hospital board when she did not agree with a vote of confidence the board tendered the hospital and when it turned down her request to investigate Miss Maybee's resignation.

Resignation by Miss Maybee touched off the present probe that yesterday brought to light the Dexfield party where nurses were squired by influential Windsor citizens, the persons named as buying tickets from Dr. Dalgleish.

Financial Setup Explained

Dr. Weber introduced the first evidence of the financial setup at the hospital. He said there was never a meeting to strike the budget, that the board brought up in a finance committee.

"I recall asking about it and was told the quarterly statement of income and expenditure showed by Lorne S. Cumming, city solicitor, before the probe was adjourned until tomorrow.

"I recall asking about it and was told the quarterly statement of income and expenditure was 90 per cent. I don't think that was proper."

City Solicitor Lorne Cumming testified that the general contractor for a new nurses' home has been let to the Gordon Fuller Construction Co., which sent a tender for $312,922, approximately $10,000 lower than the next bid.

BUSH FIRES IN ALBERTA

Winnipeg May 20 (CP)—Blazes in the Lac La Biche area of Northern Alberta today presented the most serious fire threat to forests of the three Prairie Provinces, with rains and cold weather having eased the hazard in both Manitoba and Saskatchewan.

An improved situation also prevailed in British Columbia, with a 35 acre fire at Goat Lake near Powell River being the only major forest fire in the west coast province.

PICTON

Rattler Scare At Cherry Valley, Reptile Escapes

Picton—Almost as much excitement as there had been a bank robbery, commented one citizen of the village of Cherry Valley as word flashed through the quiet rural village that a rattlesnake had been seen there. Soon men, armed with guns and a variety of weapons were on the scene, but the reptile made good its escape in the foundation of an old building.

It was definitely a rattlesnake, said Frank Wiggins, first to see it. It was easy to hear the rattles as it reared up ready to strike, he said. The exact length of snake is not known as it was not completely visible due to long grass. When it crossed the sidewalk it was longer than the width of the walk. A watch is being kept for the snake and, if it is a rattler, is very rare in this district.

Struck by Car Seaman Killed

Capetown, May 20 (CP)—Harold Powers of Halifax, seaman aboard the strike-bound Canadian ship Cumberland County, was killed here Wednesday when struck by an automobile.

The driver was connected with the strike of Canadian seamen's union members aboard the ship, police said today.

Valley Field, driver of the automobile which killed Powers and injured Fred Bryce, another Canadian seaman, appeared in court yesterday for preliminary hearing on a charge of culpable homicide.

The Canadian Press reported erroneously yesterday that Powers had been killed in a street fight.

Meanwhile, Capetown police confined the crew of the Cumberland County to their ship. Immigration officers advised the Canadian seamen that all ships entering South African ports—regardless of what flag they sailed under—were considered "prohibited immigrants."

DUPLESSIS TO REST

Quebec, May 20 (CP)— Premier Duplessis will leave Quebec today for a few days rest, it was learned reliably.

It was not known where the premier will spend his holiday following a recent illness which kept him away from his office for more than a month.

Pistols Found In Stolen Car Used by Bandits

Montreal, May 20. (CP)—Provincial police reported today that they had found the car used by two bandits who Thursday robbed the Varennes, Que., branch of the Provincial Bank of Canada of $21,000 in bonds and cash.

The car, stolen earlier in Montreal, was found at suburban Longueuil, about 20 miles from the south shore village where the robbery was committed. In it were two .32-calibre pistols, two felt hats and two trench-coats.

Three Rescued From Steamer Near Pelee Is.

Kingsville, Ont, May 20. (CP) —Two adult and a child were rescued from the steamship Pelee when it ran aground off the fish dock near Pelee Island in a raging sea Thursday night. They were brought to shore aboard a lifeboat which put out from the Island.

The Pelee got into difficulties as she was tying to the dock Thursday afternoon about four o'clock. Her crew had made two lines fast to the dock when the wind hit, causing the lines to part, and putting the ship at the mercy of the gale.

"Mrs. Susan Hensing is old and lame.

Walking only with a cane.

Her powers of thought are on the blink.

He'll tell the court I cannot serve 'Cause sickness gets me with my nerves".

Replied Commissioner Yarnon W. Janney:

"Your kind, clever letter created And I know you'd have made a wonderful juror.

But we need you are from jury service;

Be sure we don't want to make you nervous."

Spokane, Wash. (AP)—Bosses and workmen beamed approval at a banquet as the Idaho division of the Milwaukee Railroad was awarded the line's fire safety award for 1946.

Top executives applauded vigorously as the trophy was presented Thursday night for the lowest fire loss of the railroad's 18 divisions extending from Chicago to the Pacific coast.

As the banquet broke up with much handshaking, sirens moaned and fire trucks whisked by.

Destination? A small fire in the Milwaukee Railroad warehouse.

PICK BANANAS GREEN

All bananas, even those eaten locally in the tropics, are picked green, because they are not fit to eat if permitted to ripen on the plants.

Court-Martial Faces Captain of Cutter

Boston, May 20. (AP) — The captain of the coast guard cutter Eastwind which collided with a tanker off the New Jersey coast last January with a loss of 53 coastguardsmen will face a court martial.

The coast guard said Thursday night that Capt. John L. Glynn will go on trial here Tuesday.

The coast guard did not disclose charges against the captain. Glynn said, however, at the trial of a junior officer recently that he was under charges of having put an inexperienced officer on watch.

Lieut. Ronald H. Estey, Jr. was adjudged guilty on two of four counts in connection with the collision.

C.N.R. NET HIGHER

Montreal, May 20—Operating revenue for the Canadian National System, all inclusive, for the month of April, 1946, amounted to $40,325,000. Operating expenses were $38,748,000. The net operating revenue was $1,607,000. In April 1945, revenue was $40,941,000; expenses $36,776,00 and the net operating revenue $4,165,000.

HOWE SAYS

"You have heard or seen many recent comments by the two Georges — Mr. Drew and Mr. McCullagh — that great aircraft, the North Star.

"They seem to believe, for some reason beyond my comprehension, that public confidence must be shaken in Canada's aircraft industry if Canada's great industrial skill in the North Star is related with Great Britain.

"I feel, therefore, that some effort must be made to expose the phoney quality of the statements that are being made."

(The Globe and Mail said Monday in the first of a series of stories dealing with North Star aircraft that it had learned from technicians at Dorval airport that "replacement of the Merlin engines in its North Star fleet has been secretly planned by Trans-Canada Air Lines." At that time an official of the line denied that T.C.A. planned to discard the Rolls Royce Merlins. Trade Minister Howe said it was "preposterous" to suggest that T.C.A. was replacing engines.)

(The North Stars and their engines have become a subject for discussion in the present Dominion election campaign, follwing charges by Progressive Conservative leader George Drew in the House of Commons that the engines were subject to failure. Use of Merlins in the North Star has been vigorously defended by Trade Minister Howe.)

(The Royal Canadian Air Force, as well as T.C.A., has a number of North Stars. R.C.A.F. headquarters said Thursday that it is considering installing four Pratt and Whitney engines in a North Star now being constructed for special service use. It added, however, that the Merlins in its regular fleet have proven suitable and will not be changed.)

He said that one article suggested that the North Star and its magnificent Rolls-Royce engines are not first class." In his view, the North Star was "unexcelled in the world today" for "performance under all conditions of flying."

"There are larger aircraft, and there are no aircraft available to commercial air lines as suitable to the conditions under which we, in this country, must be prepared to operate."

Of the Merlin engine, he said it was performing as expected.

"C.A.V." singing experience has been no worse than that of any other air line, but in some respects has been far better," he continued.

"... at least, do not intend to follow the practice of the Georges by throwing mud at other people's fine achievements. Let me tell you though that there is no finer or safer aircraft in the world today than the Canadair produced the North Star. If Mr. Drew and his friend could find a single authoritative opinion to the contrary you would have heard of it long ago.

"Perhaps George McCullagh can be induced to print in his paper what Senior C.O.A.C. (Canadian Overseas Aircraft Corporation) officials told him about the North Star during his recent visit to England."

Regarding Canadair, which produces the North Star aircraft, it is very difficult," said Mr. Howe, "for a private business to defend itself if its products are unprincipled and irresponsible comment of the kind that has been levelled."

He said the policy of the Liberal government was to turn the government-owned aircraft industry back into private hands once the war had ended.

"A great deal has been done, and more will be developed, with fine modern plants in Montreal and Toronto, when a large and successful American firm became interested in the plant at Cartierville, where the North Star was being built, I was delighted."

Mr. Howe said he made arrangements with that firm to lease the plant on terms favorable to the government.

5,000 Employed

"The company has been most successful indeed," he said. "Over 5,000 men and women have been maintained in continuous employment at high wages. The aircraft, and its sales and repair work, produced at the plant have been of the very highest quality and, at the same time, fully competitive in price with any other manufacturer in the world."

He said he did not believe "responsible electors of Canada will turn the government of this country over to the Conservative party headed by George Drew and operated by George McCullagh."

He criticized the Progressive Conservative party stand that Canada's trade with the United Kingdom was deteriorating and made brief references to the lack of hydro power last autumn in Ontario and the Ontario Charities Bill, which recently was adopted in the Ontario Legislature.

"The Georges . . . have bombarded you with statements about our trade with Great Britain," said Mr. Howe. "In fact, I seem to remember that Mr. Drew is even prepared to produce a magic formula to make the dollar and the pound sterling freely convertible.

"I venture to suggest that in adopting the Merlin engine, we did far more to help our trade relations with Great Britain than anything that is likely to stem from Mr. Drew's secret and magic formula."

Of the Ontario Hydro issue, he said:

"The record of the two Georges is too fresh in your minds. Under George Drew (formerly premier of Ontario), the Ontario Hydro found itself last autumn in the humiliating position of having to ask the people of Ontario to endure black-outs for long periods every evening."

He then turned to the Charities Bill, which was called in the Ontario Legislature both a bill to abolish charities and a bill for the relief of George McCullagh.

"You are now witnessing an attempt by this precious pair to destroy Trans-Canada Air Lines a great air transportation system built up laboriously by the present government over the last 12 years. You are witnessing an attempt by the same two men to destroy a great aircraft industry in the city of Montreal.

"How long I ask you, could the government's Polymer (rubber) plant at Sarnia survive under such administration? How long would Eldorado (uranium) mining and refining last? What of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation? This great public service has been under constant attack from the Globe and Mail since its inception.

"I venture to predict that if ever George Drew forms a government at Ottawa, the days of the CBC will be numbered from that day."

BOY SCOUT SAVES CHILD

Oakville, May 20 (CP)—Robert Mufustin, 11-year-old Boy Scout yesterday saved four-year-old David Hossack from drowning in 40 feet of water.

Young Hossack was standing, hands in pocket, watching Robert fish when he fell into the river. Mufustin dived in and pulled him out.

Rev. A. Lougheed Accepts Call to Lindsay Church

Shannonville — Rev. A. W. Lougheed of the local United Church has accepted a call to become the minister of Seagrave United Church, Lindsay Presbytery. This change of pastoral relations to take effect July 1st.

Mr. Lougheed has been pastor of the Shannonville charge for the past seven years, holding the position of Boys' Work Counsellor, for both the conference and the Presbytery for several years, and was also Presbytery secretary of the Board of Religious Education.

Mr. Lougheed has had a varied experience in the ministry, serving as a missionary in Le Pas, Manitoba, during building of the Hudson Bay Railroad. He graduated from Wesley College, Winnipeg, and spent four years on a charge in that city prior to moving east in 1927.

He celebrated his ordination to the ministry in June 1939, while pastor of the Fitzroy Harbor Church, where he resided for some seven years, prior to his transfer to the Bay of Quinte Conference.

Mr. Lougheed was instrumental in the holding of the first Boys' camp, which has been held for some years past, in the Belleville district, and which is now a "going concern."

Man Questioned After Girls Missing

Anderson, S.C., May 20 (AP)—The wet clothing of three missing school girls today was found in a man's automobile. He claimed he took the girls swimming and let them out near their homes Wednesday night.

Jimmy Lee Rigin, 40, is being held for investigation.

Police said Rigin disclaimed knowledge of where the three car. He said the clothes found in his car were extra garments the children had taken along to swim in.

Cleveland's Negro Fielder Bids Fair to Become Colored "Ruth" of American League

By JACK HAND
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Red Rolfe is spinning his spurs as a successful big league manager at Detroit.

The former New York Yankees third baseman, who never managed any baseball team except Yale University, until this spring has his Tigers in second place, two games behind the American league-leading Yankees.

Rolfe set up a pitching "big four" of Hal Newhouser (4-2), Virgil Trucks (5-1), Ted Gray (3-1) and Freddie Hutchinson (2-2). He confided Dizzy Trout to relief work. Old Diz has been generally effective in 11 bullpen assignments.

Hutchison, who turned back Washington with sevn hits yesterday, 10-1, is as handy with the bat as he is on the mound. Hutch drove in three runs with a single double and triple.

Detroit picked up a full game on the Yankees who were dropped by Cleveland, 3-2, on terrific slugging display by Larry Doby. The Indians' Negro outfielder smashed a 390 foot plus homer—said by veteran observers to be the longest ever hit in the Yankee Stadium — as Steve

The grip pictured at the left is the way beginners are apt to grip the club. And it is the wrong grip. To grip the right way, move the thumb over until it is opposite of the tip of the forefinger. Then when the right hand closes over this left hand the two are properly locked and that left thumb provides important support for the shaft by lying under the shaft at the top of the backswing. You will find by experimenting that there is actually a big difference when you swing the club with the thumb in the wrong position as compared to swinging it in the correct position. Try it and see. I am dwelling on the left hand work in the grip because, while the grip of both hands is extremely important the left predominates.

Gromek shaded Bob Porterfield.

Doby later hit a single with the bases loaded in the fifth to break a 1-1 tie.

Dodgers Are Hot

Gromek gave up eight hits including Yogi Berra's third homer of the season.

A jittery defence cost Boston Red Sox a 10-inning ball game, on an error by third baseman Billy Hitchock on Vern Stephens' throw. The Red Sox made four errors in the game but Hitchock's was the big one that gave Chicago a 7-6 margin.

Rookie Crower Bowers who had four hits opened the 10th with a single. He was sacrificed to second and scored on Joe Tipp's grounder to Stephens who Stephens' throw- glanced off Hitchock's glove for an error.

Homers by DiMaggio, Al Zarilla and Birdie Tebbetts were wasted by Boston. It was Mickey Harris' loss and a first victory for Spec Shea in relief who acquired by the White Sox from the Yankees.

Boston Braves and New York Giants, tied for first place in the National League for an entire week, remained deadlocked. The Braves evened up with two runs in the ninth to top Pittsburgh 2-1, and the Giants bumped Cincinnati 6-2.

Vern Bickford of the Braves won his own game with a ninth-inning single scoring Phil Masi to eliminate a two run uprising. Sheldon one also picked up his fifth victory for the Giants although nicked for 12 Cincinnati hits. Johnny Mize's ninth homer and a two run double by Walker Cooper sent Johnny Vander Meer down for his third loss.

Brooklyn, slashing through the west with three straight victories moved into a third place tie with Cincinnati on Preacher Roe's 2-0 shutout of St. Louis. It was the Cards' fourth straight loss in a row since returning home and the third setback for Howie Pollet who yielded only six hits to eight for Roe.

Stan Musial pocketed a $500 cheque and accepted the Hillerich Memorial award for winning the National League batting title last year. Then he broke out of his slump with three hits in four trips.

Philadelphia A's and St. Louis Browns were not scheduled, and a National League game between the Phillies and Chicago Cubs was postponed because of threatening weather at Wrigley Field.

Larry Doby Hits Record Home Run In Yankee Park

"It's those ball balls", he said "I can't seem to get my bat around fast enough to meet them. Those fast-ball pitchers just fire it past me before I can move a muscle.

"It's a funny thing, though. Last year those fast ball pitchers were my meat. It was the curve ballers I had trouble with. This year, I've been hitting the curve pretty good. No trouble with it at all. But those fast balls—gosh.

So what happens, in his first time at bat against the Yankees, Ed Lopat throws him a fast one. The Indian star cuffed it 350 feet on the fly, clearing the 20-foot wall in deep centre. Veteran observers thought it was the longest ever hit in the spacious park.

'Mad Russian' Busting Fences For Newark Bears

(By The Associated Press)

Maybe Lou Novikoff is dissatisfied but if he is, his bat certainly isn't.

The famed Mad Russian, spurred by the Pacific Coast League, is wrecking baseballs at a record pace for the Newark Bears.

He made his first appearance of the season a week ago and clouted two home-s and drove in five runs. He has been playing great ever since.

Last night he again drove home five runs including the winning run in the last of the ninth when he managed to give the Bears a 7-6 triumph over the league - leading Jersey City Giants.

Novikoff, first man up in the ninth, got route to Fitzharris. Roger Bowman, cracked a 3-and-2 pitch into the left-field seats to tie up the game.

The Giants ran up a 5-0 lead in the first three innings and led 6-3 at the end of the sixth. The Bears scored once in the seventh and knocked starter Wes Bailey gunning for his seventh straight victory, out of the box in the eighth when they scored twice to tie the count. Novikoff then climaxed the thrilling game with his four – bagger, the first of the season yielded by Bowman who now has a 5-2 won-and-lost record.

The Giants whacked four Newark pitchers for 14 hits including homers by Pacetilla and Wes Westrum. Westrum's belt was his 11th of the season and it enabled him to tie Torrance Ed Sanicki for the circuit lead in that department.

Syracuse celebrated its first home night game of the season by shading Baltimore Orioles 2-1. All of the scoring occurred in the first three innings with the Chiefs wrapping up the game with two in the third on two singles, an error and Ray Lamanno's double.

Harry Perkowski, who won 20 games for Tulsa of the Texas League last year, went the route for Syracuse, spreading 11 hits to win his second game of the season. Workhorse Al Widmar went the distance for Baltimore and was tagged with his third loss in nine decisions.

Scheduled games between Montreal and Toronto, and Buffalo and Rochester, were postponed because of rain.

$14,750 GRANTS APPROVED

Ottawa, May 19 (CP)—An expenditure of $34,750 from the Federal health grants has been approved by the Health and Welfare Department for hospital construction in Saskatchewan.

Hospitals at Saltcoats, Elrose, Invermay, Radville, Outlook, Shellville and Preeceville, will benefit from these grants. The projects represent an increase of 96 beds.

OSCAR

The old familiar cry "Play Ball" will echo for the first time in many communities tomorrow as the official baseball season gets under way, Gene (a Old Man Winter with his evening, brushing snow-balls) Autry has the 1949 edition, the say matches. The old warm weather is with us and with it the popular summer pastimes, popcorn, peanuts, lemonade and what not.

Here in Belleville auspicious ceremonies followed by the opening game of the season will usher in the diamond sport; all the fine grounds the Northern Electric and Trenton Flyers will clash in the first official game of the Belleville and District Baseball League to inaugurate the loops lengthy schedule.

There will be fitting opening day ceremonies starting at two o'clock. There will be music from the Belleville Public Schools band, the same group that led the 1948 edition, the band should be productive of some good diamond fare. Both team managers, Bill Grandaus and Jack Keeping the identity of their starting pitchers a secret. The admission is 35 cents and 15 cents and a large crowd is expected to take in the opening day performance.

The Bay of Quinte Country Club is holding its annual President versus Vice President tournament on the club links on Sunday starting at 1.30 p.m. All members wishing to play should call the club pro before starting time. The qualifying round for the club championship must be played on Saturday June 4 or Sunday, June 5. Top 16 scores will be taken. The last round of the Tip Top Tailor Trophy Tournament must be played by June 5 and the final round by June 19. A mixed foursome match is scheduled for May 29.

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club opens its official season on May 24 with jitney play, so genial Gerry Hyde, boss-man in charge of the greens, tells the club inferno on. Play will start at 2 p.m. and will consist of three games. A fifty cent fee will be charged. The club extends a cordial welcome to new bowlers and to visitors, subject that the green will be open tonight, all day Saturday and Monday evening for beginners.

Tonight's sports feast gives us at Memorial Arena where two giants of the mat-and-mug game will clash in the main bout. They are Hi Lee, towering ramist from the Ozarks and Wladislaw Talun, the Syracuse wrestling rifle a Man. Both weigh up the beam at six feet eight inches and each crowd the scales at nearly three hundred pounds. No kidding, there is no truth in the statement that the referee will wear stilts. Should be a mighty battle as there is no love lost between these gifted specimens of pachydermic agility. In the semi-final Art Brady, handsome young blonde from Colorado will take a fall with Dangerous Dan O'Connor while Frank Valois, that villain from Mawrzail will try to lower the colors of popular Frankie Stack. Curtain at 9 o'clock.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, May 20 — (AP)—A long - range tip" offered to this column by the all-American pro football Conference will be back with eight clubs for the season — no word as to where the eighth is coming from — or why — Col. Earl Hall, whose Oak Ridge (N. C.) Military Academy grooms Wes Fesler's and a few others for major league baseball, has come up with another fine prospect. He's Billy Joe Davidson, a 16-year-old, 218-pound catcher — one shoulder pain which caused Ike Williams to postpone his 74½-percent title match against Enrique Bolanos, came along while Ike was at a dinner. Must have been a heavy meal.

While of Him

Ben White has won the Hambletonian Stake four times, but if Ben White has this year he won't necessarily be the fifth . . . One of the eligibles is a horse, Ben White, named ofter the veteran trainer. He'll be driven by Charlie Thomas and starts in the Buggy Whip Derby.

Painful Silence

Early this season when Duke's baseball team visited Clemson, Carol Cox of the home team hit two home runs in one inning . . . Later Duke came along and Eli Maricich of the visiting team performed the same feat . . . Then it was South Carolina vs Clemson and Ray Mathews did it again for Clemson — two homers in one inning . . . The oddity is that all three of the double - clouters, Cox, Maricich and Mathews, are left halfbacks in football . . . Those guys weren't just hitting the pitchers, they must have been intercepting them.

Time Has Come When a 'Feller' Needs a Friend

Like Father Like Son is Kirkwood Saga

New York—Pitcher Bob Feller of the Cleveland Indians said today that he would quit baseball before he'd descend to mediocrity. However, Bob quickly added that he feels a long way from being washed up, despite his mediocre mound performance this season.

Said Feller: "When the day comes that I can't stay up there with the best, I'm going to call it a career. But that's a long way off."

Feller has been troubled by an aching back this spring and out of action for a couple of weeks after a "one-inning stint" on opening day. He said that he thinks now he'll be returned to action too soon and should have waited another ten days.

The Cleveland right-hander said that if he doesn't feel right after his next ball game, he is going to ask for a two-week vacation away from baseball in order to get a complete rest.

Philadelphia, May 20 (AP)—A husky young movie actor on a pitching vacation matched strokes with the best in the pitch-and-putt business today as a definite threat to win the $16,000 Philadelphia Inquirer Tournament.

Joe Kirkwood, Jr.—in the movies he enacts Joe Palooka—shared the first round lead with Bobby Locke, the South African who currently is the hottest thing in professional golf. Each posted a four-under-par 68 yesterday over the 6,670-yard Whitemarsh Valley Country Club course.

In addition to Kirkwood and Locke, 19 others bettered the course's 72 par. Right had par and 33 in all were within five shots of the leaders.

Kirkwood, the 37-year-old six footer, son of a famous golfing father, has dropped up in several recent tournaments to the number 10 spot. He finished seventh at the Masters in Augusta, and did well at Greensboro, N.C., and Wilmington, N.C.

His father, Joe Kirkwood, Sr., has travelled the world giving exhibitions of trick golf shots.

Kirkwood, Jr.'s second drive yesterday were nudging the 300-yard mark most of the day and his approaches and putts were deadly accurate. Two putts went into the cup from 20 feet for a best, and only the 17th and 18th holes—the parent-in-law-pars him—gave him trouble.

It was the same pair of finishing holes that kept Locke from exclusive possession of the lead.

Leaving the 16th green, the methodical South African was five shots better than par. But an offline drive held him to par five on the 17th and a pair of shots that stopped in sand traps cost him a one-over five on the final hole.

Leafs' Sanicki Tops League In Home Runs

New York, May 20. (AP) — Al Mierkowicz, veteran outfielder of the Rochester Red Wings, is hammering International League pitching at a .372 gait, top mark in the circuit.

Mierkowicz, once the property of Detroit Tigers, has collected 32 hits in 86 tries to the plate, including games of Wednesday.

Bobby Morgan of Montreal Royals and Johnny Blatnik of Toronto Maple Leafs are tied for second at .365.

Ed Sanicki, Toronto outfielder, who led the league in runs batted in last year, leads the loop in homers with 11 and runs scored with 36.

Wes Westrum, Jersey City catcher, who has hit 10 homers, three of them with the bases loaded, leads in runs batted in with 32.

Louis' Boxing Club Censured By Dempsey

(By The Canadian Press)

Two horses scheduled to run at the Salisbury track in England were found temporarily blind and paralyzed in the hind quarters Thursday.

E. W. Lane, owner of one of them, said: "There seems to be no doubt that my horse 'and the other in the stable were 'got at'." The horses are Lane's Nightime, four year old, and Happy Trio, three.

Trainer Walter Nightingall said the horses were perfectly sound on arrival.

A veterinary surgeon examined Nightime and Happy Trio and reported they were "suffering from suspected poisoning by some toxic substance and at present both are affected by temporary blindness."

The Grand Trunk Boating Club will be hosts at the eastern division championship regatta of the Canadian Canoe Association July 30, it was decided Wednesday at a meeting of the clubs from the division at Montreal. The regatta will be held off suburban Font View.

One casualty was reported at the Toronto and district Scholastic Athletic Association meet yesterday. Dick Munshaw from Earl Haig High School broke his leg when he landed awkwardly in the junior pole vault event.

The new International Boxing Club headed by Joe Louis was criticized in Montes by Jack Dempsey, former world heavyweight champion.

In an interview Dempsey expressed disapproval of the new club's action in billing Ezzard Charles-Jersey Joe Wolcott fight in Chicago June 23 as a title fight.

"What right has one or a group of persons, to pick out two men and tell them they are fighting for the world heavyweight title?" Dempsey asked.

Brampton fans will get a look at revamped Brampton Excelsiors Saturday when they clash with Owen Sound Crescents.

The Excelsiors of the Ontario Lacrosse Association's Senior circuit will have Archie Browning, star of last year's New Westminster Adanacs, and fleet Gordon Cruickshanks from Weston, Ont.

Last year's punch line of Nick Ferri, Harry Graham and Carl and Harvey Midagesti is expected to be more potent than last season, while the team's defensive strength has been bolstered by Al McNair and Jack Bryans with Sammy Arthurs playing goal.

At Montreal, Roy Ashworth, president of the Canadian Amateur Swimming Association, announced that the Canadian Amateur championships will be held in Vancouver on or about August 14. The swimming team to represent Canada at the British Empire games in New Zealand next year will be picked from the forthcoming meet at Vancouver.

Ten teams are already entered in the Intermediate division of the Ontario Rugby Football Union, it was announced at Toronto. The deadline for new entries is July 15.

Teams have been entered from Hamilton, Brampton, Toronto, Niagara Falls, Cobourg, Trenton RCAF, Oshawa, Peterborough, Orillia and Oakville. In addition two teams are expected to be entered shortly from the Kingston area and from Fenelon Falls, Brantford and Kitchener.

Baseball's hall of fame at Cooperstown is going to be enlarged to almost twice its present size. Officials of the sports shrine announced work would begin immediately on an addition to the present three-storey structure. The addition, also three storeys, is expected to be completed within a few months.

The new structure will contain baseball library and offices as well as exhibition halls, one of which will house the Babe Ruth collection. The collection, made up of uniforms, gloves bats and other mementos of the late Babe, was willed to museum.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Batting, Larry Doby, Indians—Smashed 430-foot plus homer, one of the longest ever hit at Yankee Stadium and drove in two runs with single in Cleveland's 3-2 victory over Yankees.

Pitching, Preddis Hutchinson, Tigers — Held Washington to 7 hits and contributed single, double and triple in 10-1 win.

SEEK URANIUM HOARD

Frankfurt Germany, May 19—(AP)—Two new arrests spurred the United States army tonight in its search for a uranium hoard which may have been used by the Nazis in their wartime quest for the atomic bomb.

Two Germans were arrested allegedly trying to sell four grams of uranium. They were charged with possessing war materials which are forbidden to Germans.

Hollywood, May 20 (AP) — Cleveland Indians will start entering before the cameras May 27.

The baseball club is scheduled to begin location scenes for the Cleveland Story" on that date. The shots will be taken on the home grounds with the entire team taking part; Bill Veeck, Lou Boudreau, Tris Speaker and Hank Greenberg are slated for important roles.

Republic and producer Herbert Kline are still looking for two boys of 11 and 12 to appear in the juvenile delinquency story. George Brent is set for a role as a radio announcer.

More Ball

Speaking of baseball brings us to Lorraine Day. She is a different gal since being married to New York Giants polit Leo Durocher. She had a kneeling scene in "I Married Communists."

When she finally finished it and straightened up she remarked, "now I know how Walker Cooper feels."

Abbott and Costello ("Who's on First?") probably won't be back in action for quite some time. Lou is seriously ill and their next film has been postponed indefinitely.

Garbo fans will be interested to know that the silent Swede is scheduled to begin tests for her new picture this week.

Capsule Review

"Quartiet (Rank) contains four short stories of Somerset Maugham — two good, one fair and one dull. They are tastefully filmed with a cast unknown in the United States. Best sequences: A British lad who learns about gambling and women in Monte Carlo; A Col. Blimp whose wife writes passionate poetry. The film should appeal to discerning American patrons.

COMMITTED SUICIDE

San Francisco, May 20 (AP)— A coroner's jury held yesterday Commander Everett Olin Rigsbee, Jr., skipper of the United States aircraft carrier, Antietam, committed suicide. Rigsbee was found last Thursday in his stateroom aboard the Antietam, a bullet wound in the right temple. Commander Carter Jennings, administrative officer of the Antietam, testified Rigsbee had been depressed since the carrier had been ordered deactivated.

'Duke' Ellington And Band Will Be Here Monday

Local modern music lovers are in for a fine evening of entertainment on Monday evening when "Duke" Ellington and his 20-piece band make their appearance at the Belleville Memorial Arena.

The "Duke", one of the world's outstanding musical figures, will be conducting his band with exactly the same stars it has always boasted, including Johnny Hodges, Al Sears, Lawrence Brown, Harold Baker, Jimmy Hamilton, Harry Carney, Al Killian, Ray Nance, Sonny Greer and vocalist, Kay Davis.

In his younger days "Duke" Ellington almost became a commercial artist. As a high school student he was offered a scholarship to the famed Pratt Institute in New York but he passed it up in favor of music because of his love for the piano. Unable to read sheet music, his piano practice has had to depend mostly upon his resources. This was the beginning of the unique chord combinations which identify his present unorthodox but brilliant style.

He finally mastered written music and at 16, produced his first composition. Today the "Duke" has authored close to a 000 original compositions and tunes.

The Ellington orchestra has also given concerts in Carnegie Hall, the Chicago Civic Opera House, San Francisco's Philharmonic Hall, the Philadelphia Academy of Music, Boston Symphony Hall and the Hollywood Bowl as well as his tours through Europe.

Despite his multiple interests and activities "Duke" Ellington continues to be one of the pleasantest, best-liked and most respected of present day American figures.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Modern bridge books are following a practical trend. Latest to reach me for review is "How's Your Bridge Game?" It is by Florence Osburn, bridge editor of the New York Herald Tribune.

This book is a combination of 200 bidding quizzes and 50 deals of play. They will have an appeal to players of every degree of skill. A beginner or an expert can profit by them.

Immediately the book opens up on examples that hold the reader interested. Quiz hand number one is shown here:

SOUTH
♠A K 5
♥A Q J 10 9 8
♦10
♠7 6 3
♥K 7 6 5 2
♦A J 8 4
♣10

The bidding shown is like this:

South	West	North	East
1 H	4 D	4 H	4 S
5 H	Pass	Pass	Pass

Opening lead from west is king of diamonds. Show south how to make the safest plan for taking his needed 11 tricks. Study the possibilities and determine if there is danger.

As you can see, declarer has no trump losers. There are plenty of hearts in south for ruffing dummy small diamonds. Plenty of hearts are in dummy for ruffing south small clubs.

There seems to be no place to dump the second and third spades in each hand. Two tricks may be lost in spades. So what? By cashing the three sides aces, declarer can afford to give up two spades. The first trick goes to dummy's ace. Not more than two trump rounds are necessary to pull opponents' trumps. Three-ruffs will take care of diamonds and clubs. Remaining trumps can be cashed and two spades are given up. This looks like the perfect hand.

But have you forgotten the bidding? Does it have any influence on your plan of play? Maybe you would first like to take a look at the opponent cards. Good idea.

JOHN MASEFIELD 'SLIGHTLY BETTER'

Oxford, England, May 20 (Reuters) — The general condition of John Masefield, Britain's 70-year-old Poet Laureate, who is recovering from pneumonia, was said today to be "slightly better." But a statement issued by Mrs. Masefield added that convalescence would be "further delayed owing to cardiac complications." Masefield has been in a nursing home here since April 17.

Answer to Yesterday's Puzzle:

pop said. I'll arrange with Mr. Judge to meet me at 9 forty five and we'll take a nice leisurely walk to the school building accordingly.

Ma was telling pop about the meeting of the Parents Teachers Association, saying, Really, William, I mean really, there isn't a single Lydia Ibrza. Somebody spoke up cleverly and suggested that the organization ought to change its name to the Mothers Teachers Association she said.

A good idea, there's nothing like a good discriptive name, pop said, and ma said thanks for your distant co-operation, but we'd much prefer to change the conditions so the present name would have real significants. In other words, we'd like to have a few fathers show up at the meetcussing the matter seriously, and decided if you and Mr. Judge were to put in a combined appearance next week, it would at least be a start and a beginning ma said.

By golies, it mite be arranged, pop said. What time are the meetings over? he said and ma said Ten o'clock. It's surely no hardship to ask you to stay out that late. Thats just about the time you would normally be nodding in your chair over your newspaper, neither in nor out of bed to all intents and purposes, she said.

I'll get in touch with Mr. Judge and put it up to him, pop said, and ma said. Oh William, really! I mean really!

But of course pop said. Ten o'clock heh? he said, and ma said No, eight. Ten is the time it's all over, she said.

you and Mrs. Judge home, he said.

Not being quite the end of the subject.

RUPTURE

Read the following testimonial from a well-known Ontario Farmer:

Oct. 15, 1946.
R.R. 6, Picton, Ont.

J. L. Armstrong, Esq.,
Specialist, Ottawa, Ont.

Dear Sir:

For some time past it has been my intention to write you in appreciation of what your appliance has done for me.

Ruptured in early childhood, cause unknown, the hernia eventually descended into the scrotum, and at times caused me considerable inconvenience, pain and anxiety, in latter years greatly interfering with my work. Upon reaching manhood I wore trusses for several years but they could not hold my rupture. Your patented appliance being highly recommended, I had you adjust one. It fitted perfectly, held securely and was very comfortable to wear. IT CAUSED A COMPLETE CURE OF THAT LONG-STANDING RUPTURE IN LESS THAN SEVEN MONTHS. I have not worn it or any other support for over 20 years now and there is not any sign of rupture whatever. As I was ruptured for over 25 years, one can readily appreciate what a cure has meant to me. I am now 55 years of age, still actively engaged in farming.

I do strongly recommend your patented appliance to any who are ruptured. I know of others who have worn it with entire satisfaction. You may use this letter if you wish to.

Yours faithfully,
ERASTUS JESSUP.

Mother and Newborn Child Refused Admittance for Best 'Technical Reasons'

Toronto May 30 —(CP)— A young mother and her newborn child were refused admittance to the Red Cross outpost hospital at Wilberforce, Ont., recently for "definite technical reasons", an official at Red Cross headquarters said Thursday.

At a meeting of the Wilberforce branch of the Red Cross Wednesday it was said the mother gave birth to the child on the way to the hospital. Hospital officials refused her admittance so the woman's husband drove her to a hospital at Bancroft, 35 miles away.

Helen Singer, Ontario Red Cross executive, said today "it was after midnight and there was no possible way of getting a doctor except to drive for one. It would have meant a very long wait for the mother and child to try to get one, so the best possible course was for them to drive on to Bancroft."

The outpost hospital at Wilberforce, 80 miles north of Peterborough has one bed and one nurse. It is staffed largely with first aid and public health cases.

QUEENSBORO

Queensboro — Mr. and Mrs. Fred Allair and family Peterborough spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Joe Allair.

Guests of Mr. and Mrs. Bruce Leslie over the weekend were: Mr. and Mrs. Harry Sager and Jackie Wilson of Ottawa and Miss Dorothy Leslie of Omemee.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Rollins spent Sunday with friends in Belleville.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Holmes and Leslie and Mr. and Mrs. Allen Sager spent Saturday in Toronto, and attended the Beattie and Bayliss wedding.

Mrs. Wm. Cassidy, Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander and Mrs. Leslie Hall, Alexander, spent Sunday in Bowmanville, and Whitby.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Tokley were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Fred McGee, Tweed.

The members of L.O.B.A. held a very successful dance in Orange Hall on Friday night.

Mrs. R.A. Sager spent Saturday with friends in Toronto.

The community held a miscellaneous shower at the home of Mrs. R.A. Sager, on Wednesday afternoon for Miss Frances Alexander, who is to be married in the near future.

Barbara Franklin, Madoc, spent the weekend with her grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Ralph Franklin.

Mrs. Wm. Fry of Campbellford spent Wednesday, a guest of Mr. and Mrs. John Alexander.

Recent guests of Mrs. Charles Keirl were: Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Vivian, of Toronto; Mr. James Phillips of Kingston, and Mr. and Mrs. K. R. Vivian and family.

Home and School

The Shannonville Home and School Association are planning for a district field day to be held in the Shannonville on Wednesday June 1st. A booth will be on the grounds, and it is expected six schools in the school area will compete for the cups and ribbons. Four large cups are being donated by the Shannonville merchants in both the senior and junior classes, boys and girls. Mrs. Roy Reid, Mrs. Stanley MacDonald and Mrs. K. R. Vivian will have charge of the refreshment booth. It is expected that this meet will become an annual event, the cups to be competed for each year.

Surprise Party

A surprise party was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Vesterfelt in honor of Mrs. Vesterfelt's birthday. Thirty guests were present in the occasion. The evening was spent in round and square dancing. The music being supplied by Miss Shirley Vesterfelt at the piano with Messrs. Thomas River and Sidney Fitzgerald on the violin.

Mrs. Vesterfelt received many lovely gifts as a token of the esteem in which she is held in the community.

Dainty refreshments were served, which were brought by the guests.

Mr. and Mrs. Robert Diddle of Belleville, were Sunday callers at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Russell Wetcott.

The local ball players are practising to get in shape for their first game of the season with Reid next Tuesday evening.

1,700 PRESENTED AT COURT

London, May 19 — (CP) — East met west today when another 1,700 persons were presented at court. They were attending the King's second presentation party for the Diplomatic Corps and socially elite of countries starting with the letters M and Z.

Wednesday more than 30 Canadians were presented in the first party for countries from A to L.

Soviet Ambassador George Zarubin and his wife headed the delegation from Russia. Twenty-eight Russians had invitations.

'Geordies' Open Canadian Tour With 4-1 Win

Montreal, May 20 (CP)— Newcastle United opened their North American cross-country exhibition tour with a 4-1 victory over Montreal All Stars before 15,000 soccer fans here Thursday.

Held scoreless during the first half when they seemed just under the floodlights, the Englishmen rallied strongly in the second half to score all of their goals. It was their first experience playing under lights.

Andy Menyes, playing inside right, scored for Montreal.

Next engagement of the Newcastle schedule of the Canadian tour takes them to Toronto for a game there May 24.

Equestrian Statues in Washington Still Command Casual Affection

By GEORGE RONALD
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Washington, May 20 (CP)— Sixteen equestrian statues — bronze men on bronze horses — are a time honored part of the Washington scene. But the honor shown these motionless riders is an odd mixture of curious respect and casual indifference.

Day, in day out, camera-wielding tourists "shoot" the 16 heroes and read the hard cold inscriptions of their deeds. And every sunny day at noon, office workers dash for the statue of general so-and-so and curl up with a sandwich and a magazine.

But Washingtonians proudly steeped in history, bristle at any suggestion that 16 equestrian statues are too many. Donald M. Nelson, early chairman of the war production board early in the Second World War can testify to that.

Not For Scrap

Plagued by a shortage of scrap metal, Nelson suggested some of the bronze horsemen might be melted down in the name of national security. There was a roar of disapproval. In a barrage of letters to newspapers, citizens branded Nelson an unsentimental brutal destroyer of landmarks. They'd have him know, they would, that those 16 statues contributed greatly to the "flavor of the capital.

Nelson, called a press conference a few days later. His activities had told him the metal in the statues wasn't the kind needed for war production he said. He found the needed scrap elsewhere the equestrians stayed put.

Jackson Oldest

Nine of the 16 are American Civil War leaders; two are generals who fought under Washington in the Revolutionary war; one is Washington himself.

Oldest of the 16 equestrian statues — and the oldest of the United States — is of Gen. Andrew Jackson, seventh president of the union, Jackson, his hat raised in salute, as gazed across at the White House from Lafayette Park since 1853.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

The carpenter's version, built to my specifications, took on the precise shape and proportions of a place Noah might have wheeled at one end and long handles protruding from the other.

At first it looked like a monstrous wheel-barrow. But by the time I had painted the bottom and back white, as the decal Bulgarian figures stared stark out; the wheels and handles, black; the inside, yellow and white; and applied the over-all pattern; a decal border of flowers, fruits, assorted vegetables, and little figures, it could have been entered in any class of cart. Personally, though prejudiced by a hundred dollars cash outlay, several nights of lost sleep while planning it, and several days of work decorating it, I thought it looked like a ravishing Old Country harvest organ.

It could be rolled to any spot in the garden; the front let down to make a large work board; and at serving time that front made a buffet table. In the chuck wagon were stored china cups, plenie dishes, coffee pot, dime-store silver, pot holders, asbestos gloves, chefs' aprons, mustard, pepper and salt, barbecue seasonings of all kinds, paper napkins, paper plates, mosquito candles to be lighted and set in holders and placed fifteen feet apart on the ground (they worked, too), a rack of highball glasses, an ice bucket, tongs, tray, bottle opener, jiggers—the works.

Beneath this cabinet were two large shelves where lawn cushions, waste basket for used plates and so forth, barbecue irons, scuttle and charcoal, and all manner of miscellaneous equipment were packed.

The set-up was an instant success. Our little ice-cream freezer churned exactly seven minutes by the clock to churn fresh strawberry or peach ice cream. Mary-Lou and there were always plenty of eager beavers to do that reward-ing part of the work. Even Roger took his turn.

I had though cooking alfresco would make summer work easier; the lodgers and we could take turns using the barbecue. But there proved to be no such thing as taking turns. Let the fire be lighted and lodgers, neighbors, friends, and we ourselves showed up to cook. Standard menus were meat—what kind was according to how many points we had; steak and chop nights we collected red points from the guests, too—baked sweet potatoes or casserole of macaroni and cheese or au gratin potatoes, salad bowl, coffee, toasted buns, corn roasted in the husk, ice cream or watermelon or strawberry shortcake.

Roger thought the barbecue so absolutely out of this world that one exposure to it of the Russian colonels stationed in Great Falls to oversee Russia's Lend-Lease tryout on amalgamate U. S. A.-Russian relations that it was our duty, if nothing more agreeable, to have them for a supper in the garden. "Just high-brow first and then broiled chicken and a casserole and salad bowl and homemade ice cream and coffee," he said. "Something easy like that. They're musical. Better have the big home Shostakovitch's new symphony. Be a nice touch."

"How of them will there be?" I asked, ignoring the touch.

"There'll be Colonel Bolovitch and Colonel Kolovitch and Colonel Dolovitch. And their wives, of course."

"That's six," I lalled. "Rob and you and me. That's nine."

"We'll have to have their interpreter, Colonel Bolovitch sneaks a little English, but the others don't know a word. We couldn't possibly manage without the interpreter."

"That's ten."

"Well, yes, but you see the interpreter has a girl friend. We've got to include her. He's going to have a rough evening passing the conversation around for so many people, anyway. He ought to have some fun out of it."

"Eleven," I said.

Roger went on, "It doesn't sound very courteous, does it, to the colonel from the Base."

"What colonel? We have three already."

"I mean Colonel Cartwright, the new C.O. He's near of the party —he works with the Russians— and he'd be an addition, anyway. He'll help talk to them."

"He speaks Russian?"

"No. But he knows how to make signs. He's used to it."

"All right. That's twelve," I said with finality.

"Colonel Cartwright's wife," Roger rebuked me.

"Thirteen, then."

"You can't have thirteen. Someone might be superstitious. I'll ask alight to make fourteen."

"Fourteen and no more," I said firmly.

"Roger," Roger answered. "I'll do the inviting tomorrow."

I made up the grocery list:

broilers, macaroni, cheese, corn, matoes, cucumbers, radishes, celery and onions for the salad, coffee, strawberries, and whipped cream for the ice cream Roger said he'd freeze.

We planned the party for Thursday night. First, however, Roger consulted Weather, No rain, nor dry; we laid our plans.

The morning of The Day dawned bright and hot. I got a good head start on the barbecue—when the sun went under a cloud. Grateful for the shade I flew out to the garden and set up the fold-

It was while I was hulling strawberries for the ice cream that Roger phoned to say, "So sorry. It's going to rain."

"But the weatherman said—"

"Yes. I know what he said. Pressure areas have changed since then. A cold current has met up with our heat-wave."

"I'll have to call off the party."

"No, we couldn't do that." Roger exclaimed in shocked surprise. "What would the Russians think? They wouldn't understand. Anyway, they're dead set to come."

I knew who was going to win, but I said weakly, "What'll I do?"

"If you get pneumonia in the kitchen!"

"Not that I know of."

"Well, try."

Finally, after the seventh try I heard of a woman who, though not a caterer, was a good cook.

Together we hirated the big table top up the basement stairs and onto the drop-leaf dining table. While Mrs. Sullivan put a chloe on the long-since unused gas fixture, I spread the cloth.

The best china and glass were dusty from disuse. I wiped them with damp cloths as I set a tea towel as I counted them out: fourteen dinner plates, fourteen bread plates, fourteen dessert plates, fourteen cups and saucers, fourteen individual sauceys, fourteen glasses—for caviar and anchovies and salted nuts and appetizers of all kinds.

I, after hustling out of the store when I realized it was one thing for Roger to grind ice cream out of doors, quite another in a busy kitchen. I flew down to a creamery and left an order for an ice-cream cake to be delivered at 3:30 p.m.

Our guests burst in on us a little after seven. People who travel in foreign countries know the feeling of being surrounded by babble in 4 strange tongue. One expects it in other countries, but sometimes, if you really want to feel lost and ineffectual, try it in your own front yard.

Sunday School Lesson of the Week

The Fellowship Is The Thin

By ROY L. SMITH

Among other things the ministry of Jesus of Nazareth was an effort to bring humanity together in better understanding, more sympathy, and a friendlier spirit.

There is an inclusiveness about the teachings of Jesus that is very heartening in this day of divisions. Such words as "all men," "whosoever," and, "every man," were on his lips frequently.

In one of his most moving prayers Jesus prayed that his disciples might "all be one." In his own attitudes he was cosmopolitan, eating with the rich and powerful on the dinners and outcast with equal frankness and generosity of mind.

Christianity is a Fellowship

In the story of that last meal Jesus took with his disciples we get the impression that he was endeavoring to set up a fellowship among those who believed in him. With infinite sadness he assured the little company that one of them was a traitor, that one of them was to betray him, and the tragedy of it was that in so doing he would be undermining the common ties that bound them all together. It was not a personal matter with Jesus. He could forget himself. But the betrayer was to betray his fellows as well as his Lord.

From this week's Sunday School lesson we get the impression that Jesus thought of this last meal as an occasion when the little group should come together into close and intimate terms of the richest fellowship. Instead, it became an occasion, of suspicion, betrayal, and divisiveness. This was the supreme tragedy. Jesus, as the Lamb of God, could survive. But the disciples were in desperate need of unity among themselves in an hour when every man must stand or fall dependent upon the loyalty of every other member of the group.

The Shame of Christians

Down through the centuries it has been the shame of Christians that the sacred ceremony which was originally designed to unite the disciples in a fellowship has become a subject for controversy which has divided Christendom.

At the World Council of Churches held in Amsterdam in 1948, it was discovered that there was no one form of the Holy Communion in which the delegates could unite.

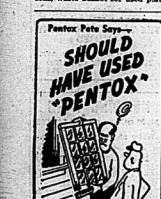
The result was that while the holy service was being celebrated in the great Nieuwe Kerk according to the rites of the Dutch Reformed Church, a considerable number of the delegates remained seated in their seats unable (unwilling) to participate. They had the feeling that in spite of the dignity and the solemnity of the occasion it must have missed the Christian Lord very much to find that his own people could not get together in such a simple service.

Going It Alone

Once some of Jesus' disciples complained that some who believed in him were not following him exactly as they were. An historic reply was: "Those who are not against me, are for me."

The Sunday School lesson for May 25: "With Jesus in the Upper Room," Mark 14: 12-26; Luke 22:7-39.

It is highly unfortunate when a group of Christians withdraw from the fellowship of other Christians and refuse to participate with them in a common assault on the evils of our times. The forces opposed to righteousness are so overwhelming that nothing less than a common front and a common effort on the part of all believers is sufficient to give any promise of any victory.



Unity and Harmony

An orchestra is made up of various instruments. The violin, however, is not asked to be less a violin because it is asked to play alongside a flute or a bassoon. Neither is the French horn insulted or degraded by sharing in the music with the bass viol. The fact that such an orchestra the creator of sublime beauty is the fact that the violin goes on being a violin, altogether different from the piccolo or the kettle drums, playing its part with joy and vivaciousness, while all the other instruments do the same. Incidentally, an orchestra can produce music when all the instruments are playing together which no one of them can possibly produce by playing alone.

There are times when there is need for violin solos and there are other times when the drums can go it alone. But there are other times—and they are in the majority—when each instrument is asked to surrender the centre of the stage for the conductor who leads them all in producing harmony. There is something in this which seems to apply to the churches of any community.

FOUR MID-SECTION STATES SWEPT BY TORNADOES

Two Persons Killed Nearly Score Injured

Oklahoma City, Okla., May 21 —(AP)— Tornadoes lashed four states across the mid-section of the United States Friday night. At least two persons were killed. Nearly a score were injured. Property damage was unestimated.

Hardest hit was Oklahoma. But twisters flicked out at scattered communities in Colorado, Kansas and far across the Mississippi Valley, causing two deaths in Tennessee communities.

It was Oklahoma's fourth straight night of twisters.

Most of the communities hit were small.

Far away in Tennessee, an isolated storm injured three persons in the small communities of Golo and Barn Creek.

The small number of casualties apparently was explained by the fact that residents in the western Oklahoma and Kansas regions hit hardest are accustomed to them. Most of them sheltered safely in storm cellars.

In addition to the tornadoes the affected states also felt severe rain, hail and thunderstorms.

Railway Workers In Berlin Battle Young Communists

Hundreds Injured When Reds Fight 12,000 Strikers

By DANIEL DE LUCE

Berlin, May 21 (AP)— Twelve thousand striking railway workers fought young communists in the ruin of strike breakers today in nearly a dozen stations of Berlin's elevated railway.

Hundreds were injured during the fighting, which raged through the morning. The outbreak shut off rail shipments to western Berlin and threatened to force the city back to the austerity of the blockade period.

An elevated passenger train was set ablaze during one melee. Clothing was torn from women who got into the fight.

Russ General Insulted

Western Berlin police said Maj. Gen. Pavel Kvashnin, transport chief of the Soviet zone, was insulted and threatened by a group of strikers at the Tempelhof elevated station in the American sector.

The police said they gave Kvashnin protection from the strikers and he was able to drive away without physical injury. Another Soviet transport officer reported he was beaten by strikers at the Hermannstrasse station, also in the American sector, police said. He was reported not severely injured.

This is the crux of the situation:

The Soviet-appointed Berlin Kommando management of both semi-railroads and Berlin's elevated line, Railway workers went out on strike early today to enforce their demand for payment of wages in west marks instead of east marks. West marks are four times as valuable as the Soviet zone currency. East marks are banned in the west.

Fighting broke out when the Russian-controlled management sent scabs, mostly young Communists, including teen-age girls, into the western section of the city to "recapture" elevated stations seized by the anti-Communist strikers.

Reds Outnumbered

The strikers outnumbered the communist strike breakers. Both sides fought with clubs, showers of stones and their fists.

Western Berlin police fought with the strikers against the communists and Soviet control of railway police. In breaking up one fight the policemen fired their pistols in the air. That was the only shooting.

Western Allied officials maintained a hands-off attitude in connection with the walkout but were sympathetic toward the strikers. However, one British source said: "This strike can't be allowed to go too long."

British and American planes of the air lift and trucks continued to supply West Berlin, Although anti-communist railway union which called the strike had pledged itself to operate western Allied and German Inter-zonal trains, switches and signals in west Berlin yards were left unmanned.

Trains Blocked

This blocked all incoming supply trains from Western Germany. A few trains managed to get through but all stopped through by running against untended red signals. It was the only train that moved.

The Russian military command ordered all Berlin - bound trains halted on the outskirts of the city, because of the strike.

Two hundred strikers at the Schoenberg station of the Berlin elevated line, Berlin city hall hurled rocks, at four Soviet officers who came up in a sedan.

Sympathy for Strikers

Brig. - Gen. Frank L. Howley, United States commandant, expressed sympathy for the strikers.

Howley questioned whether it was the strike or Russian interference with the Berlin rail freight shipments from Western Germany.

He said the Russians could settle the strike "very easily" if they had the desire, but noted the strikers' entirely legitimate demand for payment of wages in west marks, which are four times as valuable as Soviet zone marks, unless they now receive.

West - Berlin city officials said the strike has spread and has completely disrupted freight movements, despite the promises announced by Howley.

Scores of minor casualties were reported in the day of fighting between strikers and young communists sent in to try to break the strike.

Fifty persons, all of them communist "activists," were reported to have been jailed.

Police and Reds in Rough Scrap

A smaller fumber of west - German police fought a rough and tumble battle with communists at railway police at one point, swinging fists and clubs. They arrested 12 railway police officers. The strike was called by the West Section (UGO), to back the workers' demands that the Soviet - run railway system pay their wages in west marks.

Its 12,000 members walked off their jobs at a minute before midnight and they had threatened. Most of them were employed by the Soviet - run railway system, which daily carries 500,000 persons.

Federal Election Spotlight Swings To Quebec

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

The general election spotlight swings to Quebec today as two campaigning national party leaders moved into the French-speaking province, after touring the Maritimes.

George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, made his Quebec political debute Friday night with an address at the packed provincial forum of Mont-Joli, in which he promised to restore provincial rights.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. chieftain, started his campaign to the east-ern provinces at Newcastle and addressed the first C.C.F. meeting held there in the Soviet. Leo Rogers, Credit leader, returned to Ottawa from a three-week tour of his province of Alberta.

Prime Credit

Mr. Coldwell, kayoshing his tour of Newfoundland, told a C.C.F. rally in St. John's that the C.C.F. deserves credit for social security measures now in the Canadian statutes - and promised, if elected, the government or in opposition, to prevent exploitation of fishermen. They would be assisted to organize collectively "for their common interest."

He said the C.C.F. believes that the basic rights of organized labor should be protected by a national labor code along the lines of the Provincial Labor Act in force in Saskatchewan.

Mr. Low addressed a campaign meeting in Sydney and predicted the Social Credit group will make sweeping gains in the June 27 federal election.

He touched on Social Credit monetary theory, declaring that is the only party which can put adequate purchasing power in the hands of the people, and abolish the causes of unemployment and want.

Mr. Drew addressed his Mont Joli audience in French, the first time he has spoken French in his campaign, and before his party's "belief in Canada's sovereignty in international affairs."

Canada desired peace, a peace that was true and Canadian and was guaranteed through collective security.

He repeated his criticism of the government's taxation and trade policies and promised again to reduce personal income taxes and profits.

Hazen Minister Martin, campaigning in Newfoundland, visited the iron-producing centre of Wabana and told a meeting of iron-ore workers that the Liberal party is living by the principle of co-operation of management, workers and community.

Agriculture Minister Chevrier, speaking at London, Ont., criticized Mr. Drew for suggesting that the $4.50 relief licence fee should be dropped. The revenue lost, though such a move, he said, would have to "come from some-where."

Five Injured In Bancroft Car Accident

Bancroft (Special) — Five persons were injured near here yesterday when a truck swerved around a curve and crashed broadside into a motor car.

Those injured are Chas. Toplas, driver of the truck, Leonard Toplas, and Ted Cavey of Peterborough. William Cook, Oshawa, said to be the driver of the car and his wife.

The truck, police stated was going around a curve and the driver suddenly applied the brakes. The vehicle skidded 100 feet and crashed into the car, Mr. Cook said. Both vehicles went into the ditch.

All the injured were taken to the Red Cross Hospital here where they were treated by Dr. O.W. Anderson, M.B., B.S. Lamb attended the injured at the scene of the accident.

Charles Toplas suffered concussion and severe facial injuries and was transferred later to St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough. William Cook sustained broken ribs and is at present in the hospital here. The others were sent to their homes after medical attention was given.

U.S. Inaugurates Dual Inspection System at Border

Buffalo, N.Y., May 21 (CP)— One-stop dual border inspection of vehicles at Canadian-border points has been adopted permanently, it was announced today.

In the past, Custom Officers and Immigration Officers worked at different sets of questions. The system of dual inspection at one stop was tested last summer.

Herman R. Landon, Assistant Commissioner of Immigration, came here from Washington to-day to confer on further details.

Within the next few days, the dual system again will be installed at the Peace Bridge and the Rainbow Bridge at Niagara Falls," he said. "Within a week or two after that the system will be in operation at all of the ocular bridges in the Niagara Falls and Buffalo area."

LIFT FOOD RATIONING IN HUNGARY, REPORTED

Vienna, May 21 (AP)—Chancellor Leopold Figl said today rationing of most foods will end in Hungary next month. He lifted as important exceptions milk, bread, flour, fats and sugar. All other foods will be ration-free effective June 20.

Record of V.C. Recommendation Lost, Story at Last Revealed, Award Made

By H. L. JONES*
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 21 - (CP) - The story of a war hero Britain almost forgot was told today.

It was the announcement of the posthumous award of the Victoria Cross to George Albert Cairns, Victoria, Australia bank clerk, who died on a Burma hillside five years ago.

The award of Britain's highest military decoration might never have been made if his 36-year-old widow, Ena Cairns, hadn't lunched last December to a broadcast account of battle action in Burma involving her husband's regiment, the South Staffordshires.

The broadcast told how Cairns, lieutenant, led a chindit assault on a Japanese-held hill.

The broadcast told how Cairns' commanding officer had recommended him for the V.C. Mrs. Cairns didn't know.

The V.C. recommendation went to Gen. Wingate, Chindit leader, but Mrs. Cairns still got the word "was killed in a plane crash." Destroyed in the crash were the official records of the action and Victoria Cross recommendation.

Maj. J. M. Calvert, D.S.O., long surviving witness of the action, supplied the necessary evidence and the award was made.

Cairns was married in 1942, two days after he joined up. Within a year he was drafted to India. Within two years he was dead.

Caretaker of a number of properties in the city, Mr. S. J. Price, 219 McDonald Avenue, has been named chief beneficiary in the will of the late Mrs. Byron Call, George Street, by whom he was employed.

Interviewed this morning by the Ontario Intelligencer, Mr. Price, a veteran of the First World War, seemed unaffected by his good fortune. He said that he would continue in his present employment for the time being but may eventually take a trip to his native, England.

Mr. Price said he had known of the legacy for about a month but could not state the amount he would receive at the time. It was not been probated. It was estimated the estate is worth about $75,000 and Call was believed that it would be $100,000 but it was believed she had left $10,000 to the United Church and small legacies to three or four others.

Mr. Price said he looked after the Call estate for five or six years, buying the groceries and paying the bills. Mrs. Call had been living retired.

A modest frame cottage on McDonald Ave. has been the home of Mr. and Mrs. Price for the past 20 years. Mr. Price served overseas with the 18th Battalion in the First War and was wounded twice. He and Mrs. Price will celebrate their 30th wedding anniversary this Fall.

Mr. and Mrs. Price have two children, Miss Lillian Price, living in Campbellford, and a daughter, Miss Jean Price, who is a teacher at King George School.

Mrs. Price is a sister of Mr. Price by a previous marriage, who was killed overseas in the last war, while serving with the RAF.

Strive to Keep Ford Strike Negotiations from Collapse

Detroit, May 21 (AP)—Government men, striving to save the Ford strike negotiations from collapse, today worked to keep the company and the striking United Auto Workers (C.I.O.) at the peace table.

The strike's 11th negotiation session was scheduled today.

A union attempt to walk out unless Ford agreed to start 1949 contract negotiations from scratch forced the new issue on the U. A. W. "speed-up" strike 17th day of Ford, all of whose 106,000 production workers are idle, bluntly refused.

Federal mediators Arthur C. Vial and Sylvester Pete Garmon worked. The two formally entered the negotiations yesterday.

The reconvening of the talks increasingly bitter verbal battle between Walter Reuther, chief negotiator, and Ford Vice-president John S. Bugas.

Bugas told Reuther in a letter: "Your intention seems throughout to be to keep the strike on possible device to keep this strike going."

This was in reply to a Reuther accusation that the company was using a legitimate strike as a subterfuge to delay contract negotiations.

The Union wants to negotiate a new contract before it expires, a date that the parties try to negotiate a full year ahead.

In the former the U.A.W. will seek a guaranteed annual wage with a wage increase and health and hospital insurance. The strike issue bears on assembly line manpower and production rates.

The Union head said the U.A.W. would file unfair labor charges under the Taft-Hartley law if the company did not do so soon.

Ford previously offered to start contract negotiations June 1. The present contract expires July 15, and Bugas said the law only obligated the company to "negotiate collectively at a reasonable time" before the expiration date.

The union has charged in its petition that the "unwholesome atmosphere" of a strike might hamper new contract talks. It has expressed hope for a strike settlement before June 1.

WINS AWARD

Brantford, Ont., May 21 (CP)— The Nurses' Alumnae Association of the Brantford General Hospital has been awarded a $100 prize by the Registered Nurses' Association of Ontario, for outstanding achievement in their recent recruiting campaign. The hospital nurses put up posters, gave lectures and spoke before high schools in towns and cities.

Driver Leaps Just Before Truck Crashes Train

St. Thomas, Ont., May 21 (CP) — A flying leap from the cab of the transport truck he was driving, a split-second before the vehicle crashed into a New York Central train, 1½ miles east of Shedden, saved John McKinnon, 28, of (175 Queens Ave. north) Kitchener, a possible injury Friday.

McKinnon, driving a transport loaded with 10 tons of beer, leaped from the truck as the vehicle failed to hold at a N.Y.C. crossing on No. 3 highway and fell unhurt on his back.

The transport was travelling at 40 miles an hour when the McKinnon applied the brakes on nearing the crossing to meet the passing of a double - headed passenger train, they failed to hold and the truck crashed into the train at the rear of the tank car.

Increase in Leprosy In U.K. Causes Concern

London, May 21 — (AP) A sharp increase in leprosy — today the number of leprosy cases in Britain is increasing at a rate which causes us great concern."

Dr. Gordon Ryrie, Medical Secretary of the British Empire Leprosy Association, told reporters there are at least 300 cases of Europeans in the United Kingdom, of which only 14 are in a leper hospital.

The Association is urging parliament to enact legislation making it a criminal offence for known lepers to go without treatment. Less than 20 per cent of the 300 known cases are Britons, according to Ryrie, who also is a surgeon at a London hospital.

The remainder are visitors from India, China and other countries.

Sweden to Return Russ Fighter Plane

Stockholm, May 21 — (Routers) — Sweden has agreed to a Russian demand for the quick return of the Soviet fighter plane in which a Russian air force pilot crash-landed near here Wednesday. Thursday the Swedish Foreign Office received a request that Russian Embassy officials be allowed to interview the 27-year-old pilot.

Deny Report King Had Treatment At Mayo Clinic

London, May 21 —(AP)— A Buckingham Palace spokesman said today reports that Mackenzie King had his leg treated at the Mayo Clinic, Rochester, Minn., this month were "absolutely untrue."

"The King has not left the country," the spokesman said.

He added the King received Prime Minister Attlee May 17 and doctors on the fourth and other physicians on the 17th.

"In the meantime the King he was either in London or at Windsor Castle," the spokesman explained.

It was "palpably absurd," the spokesman added, to think that the King could make a foreign journey without being informed early and often.

Walter Whitby, a retired Nebraska City, Neb., executive, claimed yesterday he saw a man who resembled him as his life was King carried into the Mayo Clinic a fortnight ago.

INVESTIGATES CHARGES

Prairie Provinces Prepare to Battle Worst 'Hopper Infestation in Decade

Regina, May 21 (CP)— Soon now, in the millions, will be hatching in its billions. The battle of 1949 is on.

Latest predictions point to the worst 'hopper infestation on the prairies since 1938. Unless the winged menace is checked, it will spread over the world's best wheat is grown. Right now, as the insects begin to emerge from the egg, is when the farmers' attacks gets under way.

The three all three prairie provinces, alarmed at reports showing an unusually heavy "crop" of hopper eggs have planned extensive campaigns, much more than any undertaken previously. Saskatchewan, the province most in danger, is declaring a "hot spot" in the fight and will provide the brunt of its defence with Manitoba.

Entomologists estimate that 40,000,000 acres in Saskatchewan are menaced.

The battle line' in this province is expected to run north and south through the province, with provincial roads, roughly from Saskatoon in the north to Swift Current in the south, as the line where 5,000,000 acres of grain land are massed, the hardest hit area is expected to be around Biedelene Hat in the southeast. Authorities expect a 2,000,000 acre infestation, chiefly in the south.

In Saskatchewan alone, grasshoppers have destroyed, since 1935, crops worth well over $30,000,000. The worst year was 1938 when loss was placed at $30,000,000. In Alberta, 'hoppers have consumed for an average of five per cent of grain crops from 1941 to 1948 and in Manitoba the 7.4 per cent in that province's "bad years" of 1938 and 1939 were even lighter but no figures are available for that province.

'Hoppers cause their damage by nipping off the heads of grain plants, attacking all available cereal crops. Strangely the 'hoppers have no love for southern Alberta's sugar beets.

The farmers are ready for the summer-long fight.

Few farmers ship their respondibilities, but many municipalities plan to "get tough" with the pests. In Alberta, municipal by-laws compelling all farmers to undertake anti-grasshopper measures. In Saskatchewan, farmers with badly infested fields to summer fallow them this year. Manitoba has the loss of a farmer's entire crop. No compensation is provided.

The bait is sawdust mixed with arsenite or chlordane. A gallon of chlordane, mixed with enough dust or bran, will cover 13 to 14 acres.

'Hoppers presumably find the bait succulent for they die daily by the millions on western farms.

There is no grasshopper insurance for western farmers. The farmer stands the entire loss. It's the farmer's fight. This year he's at ready for it.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, May 21 (CP)—A dry, cool air mass is disturbed by a slow moving low pressure area which will bring rain to the province reaching Windsor after sunset tonight and extending to Toronto by Sunday morning. Behind the slow skies over the province with moderating temperatures. There will be little change in temperatures Sunday as cloud will prevent any rise from being marked.

Tommy Colden Holds Lucky Ticket in Legion Show Winner Top Prize of 1949 Ford Car

And well he might, for a few minutes beforehand Ted "Feeder" Kennedy, captain of the Stanley Cup champion Maple Leafs hockey team had drawn his ticket from the drum and which gave Mr. Colden a brand new Ford automobile.

"Once in a Lifetime"

"Tisha" said Tommy, "is something that happens once in a lifetime. And shucks, there isn't a lot of justice to the thing because I bought car a few weeks ago. However.."

And that is the way it was.

Tommy Colden held the lucky ticket that brought him the new car given away for a dollar by Bleecker Canadian Legion at their Motor Show.

Special guests of the last night of the three-day Canadian Legion Hockey Night in Belleville were Kennedy and Howie Meeker of the National Hockey League and Stanley Mikita, champions of Toronto Maple Leafs.

A crowd of 2,000 Armouries greeted the show on its final night and today Canadian Legion officials here declared that the Motor Show was a success in all phases.

Ted Kennedy and Meeker were guests of the Legion during their brief stay here and with Legion officials were honored at the Queen's Hotel.

Besieged by Enthusiasts

Later a large crowd of Belleville youth besieged the hockey stars for their autographs. Both team captain Kennedy and Meeker made brief addresses to the youngsters telling of their experiences in the National Hockey League and handing out some good advice to potential National Hockey League players.

The guest stars were introduced by Geo. H. Carver, sports editor of the Intelligencer, who "quizzed" the hockey players in a brief interview.

"Feeder" Kennedy ably assisted by his fellow hockey manager Howie Meeker drew the lucky tickets from the drum. A large number of prizes were awarded and the list will be published on Monday.

George Tustin P-C Candidate

Prince Edward-Lennox Progressive Conservative delegates selected George J., Tustin of Napanee as candidate for the federal election at a convention at the Napanee town hall Friday afternoon. Lasting Nesbeth, Picton barrister, and Don Thompson, Sophiasburg farmer, also let their names go before the convention but Mr. Tustin, who is seeking re-election, had an easy overall majority on the first ballot.

BUTTERS ACTING AS BEREAVED ANGUS SALE

Walkerton, May 21 (CP)—More than 500 buyers from all parts of Ontario attended the annual cattle sale of the Grey and Bruce Aberdeen Angus Association, considered one of the best successful ever held here. Twelve bulls sold at an average of $254 and 33 cattle each averaged $296.

Leo Marcus Heads Students' Council

Leo Marcus, third from student of Belleville Collegiate, will be next year's president of the student council, after being elected by acclamation. Other officers receiving acclamation were: Joan Harbeck, as gen. vice-president, and Ralph Neat as commercial vice president.

Elections were held on Friday and the following were elected: Treasurer, George Ewald, runner-up, Arthur Newman; secretary, Joan Roland Leggett; secretary, Joan Allen, runners-up, Keith Cameron and Joan Norridge; technical vice president, Harry Smith, runner up Ralph Neat.

The ballot counting was supervaries by chief returning officer Howard Hart, who was assisted by Mr. D. C. Stirling and teacher and retiring president of the students' council, Kip Summers. The aim of the Students' Council is to promote understanding between the staff and students and to make school functions running smoothly.

Induct Members In 'Y' Club

Three new members were inducted into the Y's Men's Club of Belleville at the Y.M.C.A. on Thursday night. The inducting team of Gord. Jack Wigmore, Ross Booth, Lawrence R. Wood and Gerald Hyman gave the charge of responsibilities of the Y's Men's Club, the Y.M.C.A. and Queen's Park to the candidates. They were Wm. "Al Arthur" Scott, and William Holway.

Following an impressive ceremony, initiation took place under the direction of Archie Byrd and Morley Lovelace. In addition to the candidates for induction, Earle Mercer, Ontario Junior Bound Club recently transferred to Belleville, was also initiated.

Freak Accident Injures Boy

2nd Thurlow—Norman Clarke, 2nd of Thurlow, met with a painful accident on Thursday night, while playing ball with other boys and most of the community on the farm of Manley Minshall.

A lay rack blew over pinning Norman underneath. He was quickly released by several of the boys and taken to the Belleville Hospital.

On examination by Dr. O. Gibson, who was in attendance, found a bad break just below the hip and as result he will be a patient there for some time.

Waco (AP)— This is the story of the bawling calf, the cow thief and the patient cow.

Not so long ago farmer Roy Long bought a cow. The cow had a calf. They were contented in a green pasture.

Roy went to a cattle auction sale yesterday.

A cow was run into the ring. He liked the look of it. Then it reminded him of the little calf's mother at home. So he bought the cow.

When Roy arrived home he heard the calf bawling.

Roy turned the new cow loose in the pasture. The cow ran to the calf. The calf ran to the cow. This made Roy suspicious.

Sir, it was the little calf's mother which had been stolen from the pasture a big farm in the auction ring. Roy' unknowingly had bought her twice.

Where did you get that cow Jim?

He will — just as soon as the sheriff can lay hands on him.

Fort Pierce, Fla. (AP)— A fish caught a man. The man got away.

O. G. Sanders made a big grab for fish while angling from a bridge. The fish pulled him hard on the line, then left up for a moment.

But it was a fishy trick, for he came back with a big splash.

Hill went over the rail into the water. He landed on a part of the bridge structure until other fishermen helped him to safety.

The fish also got away.

FOUR ESCAPE INJURY

Bethany, May 21 (CP)— Four persons, including a baby, escaped serious injury when their automobile was wrecked by a train 25 miles east of Peterborough. Wesley Clapper was driving Mr. and Mrs. Ira Reid and their child home when the accident occurred.

Unit of City Fire Department Moves Into New Finely-Equipped Hall

It is moving day for the Belleville Fire Department!

Today the local fire fighters are moving into the shiny new fire hall on Moira Street West, on which the building contractor is now putting the finishing touches.

As a result of members of the local fire department, including Fire Chief Jack Vance, will now be stationed at the new hall—eight men for each twenty-four hour shift. Also stationed at the new fire hall will be the recently purchased aerial ladder truck, the fire bumper and the fire chief's car.

At the Front Street fire hall will be stationed the men—seven on each shift—one of the pumpers and the ambulance.

A modest frame cottage on Mac-

Spic and span in its coat of white paint with red trimmed doors the new Moira Street fire hall is a credit to the department and to the city. It is situated well back from the street, giving ample turning space for fire fighting apparatus when it is taken on calls and nothing has been spared to make it both efficient and comfortable.

Three spacious recruit dorms provide ample room for storing the largest fire fighting equipment, while other appointments of the building make it one of the finest fire halls in the province. The building was planned by the late Arnold Thomson, architect, and constructed by S. R. McCrory of Stirling.

To the east of the main fire hall building and built as an annex is a hose drying room running the entire length of the building. Here hose will be dried on specially constructed racks following fire calls. On the west is an entrance annex to give the building a finished appearance while directly adjoining this is the kitchen where the atmosphere equipment for receiving alarms is placed.

Hot Water Heating

Also on the ground floor is the coal burning furnace in a special furnace room. The furnace ultimately will be fired with an automatic stoker. Heating is the hot water system with radiators upstairs and blower units to heat the ground floor.

Upstairs is the living quarters for the members of the department. In the centre of the building is a rotunda off which bedrooms, lounge room the fire chief's office, shower, and kitchen facilities are situated.

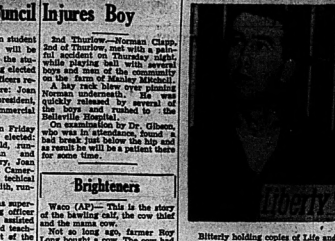
Patterned after flooring covers the entire upstairs while all walls are finished in plaster. Wood trim is painted with the exception of the chief's office which is panelled in hardwood. Locker rooms for firemen have also been provided.

Many city housewives' kitchens are no more complete than is the kitchen of the new fire hall. Units are built-in cupboards, built in sink and electric range for the convenience of firemen preparing their meals. A special eating room is provided.

Sleeping Accommodation

Unlike the Front Street fire hall where all firemen sleep on cots in the one dormitory, in the new fire hall there will be but two men to each bedroom—more than to have a private cot.

Ample window space has been provided in the lounge room and in the rotunda for reading purposes, while the latter is splendidly lighted with fluorescent artificial lighting. A section of the central portion of the upstairs provides window space and ventillation.



The completed building is filled and graded to some distance to the rear; of the fire hall, while the space at the front will be gravelled to provide an approach to the building.

Minor finishing touches still remain to be put on the building constructed under the chairmanship of Alderman Orliff "Bollie" Lloyd, chairman of city property, but ultimately it is intended by Fire Chief Vance to stage "open house" thus providing citizens the opportunity of inspecting the new fireball.

The date for "open house" has not yet been set, but is expected to be some time during June.

Change in Time of Baseball Game Causes Alteration in Trip Schedule

Due to a change in plans the doubleheader originally scheduled for this afternoon between the Toronto Maple Leafs and the Montreal Royals was postponed until tonight but this did not affect the trip to Toronto that the carrier boys of the Ontario Intelligencer are making today.

The boys left this morning as originally planned and the first stop that they will make is the back of the insurance building where they will view the City of Montreal from the observation tower. From there they will proceed to Childs' restaurant where they will eat as they can on the Intelligencer and all expenses are paid for them. One half of the afternoon will be taken up by the trip to Canada Packers plant where they will be shown through the plant.

Supper will be served at the Childs' restaurant for the second time and then they will go to the Toronto baseball park where they will watch the players in action for the whole of the first game but will leave during the second game and make the return trip. In this way the boys will be home at the same time.

The carrier boys are making the trip as guests of the Ontario Intelligencer and all expenses are paid for them. One half of the expenses of taking the trip today and the remaining group will make the same trip again next Saturday.

Value of Friendship in Life Stressed In Address to Kinsmen Convention

Taking time out from more serious convention sessions, delegates of 28 Kinsmen clubs throughout Eastern Canada had a social get-together at the Hotel Quinte Friday evening when they enjoyed a banquet, heard one of the most popular after-dinner speakers and saw a floor show par-excellence.

Kinsmen delegates from Trenton and Campbellford on the west to club representatives from the east coast are convened in the city for annual convention for Kinsmen District No. 8.

The convention commenced Friday morning and will continue through Sunday during which time club matters will be discussed and new officers elected.

Norman Rawson Speaks

Guest speaker for the banquet was Rev. Norman Rawson, Centenary United Church minister of Hamilton, who in his customary style entertained and regaled the politician with a message of more serious tone. He talked on the subject "You Can't Go Home Again."

Following the guest speaker's address, Kinsmen delegates and their wives, fiancees and friends enjoyed a floor show by Norman Harris Artists Limited of Toronto under the management of W. O. Sister.

Belleville club members and Kinettes in smart new blue blazers with "Kin" crest were on hand among banquet crowd which saw the main dining room of the hotel taxed to capacity.

Frank Lang Presides

Kinsmen President Frank Lang presided over the banquet, while officials of the Kinsmen national organization were also present. These included E.D. Freeland of Fort Erie, national president; Kenneth Perce and his wife Irene, district governor from Montreal; Paul Dube and wife Gisele, deputy governor from St. Jean, and Bob Clarke, deputy governor of Kingston.

As guest speaker of the evening Mr. Rawson stressed the importance of the spiritual factor in life, stating that when individuals and nations neglected this factor they did so at their peril.

He spoke of the value of friendships which he said were of much more importance than success in business. "If I had my life to live again I would spend less time in making contacts and more in seeking friendships," he said.

"If you want your next service club for business reasons, don't get out," he urged. "If you have joined your church or political party for business reason, then also get out."

Rids Over Friendships

Mr. Rawson said he had seen many people plow under friendships to seek material or financial advantages, only to be the most miserable creatures on earth.

He also mentioned that business was exacting but he urged fathers to spend more time at their homes and with their families.

Contrary to the popular impression that there is room at the top for all, Mr. Rawson declared this is not so. Hopeless could be found at any level as long as people adapted themselves to what was available at their own level.

"Where your treasure is there your heart is also," quoted the speaker in conclusion.

Mr. Rawson was introduced by Kin Harry Rolling with club appreciation being given by Kin Cec Colling.

During the meeting President Lang announced that photostat copies of the signatures of original charter members to the first Kinsmen Club at Hamilton would be made available to all clubs in the district. The signatures were made available by B. C. Sisler, Kinsmen Public Relations manager here, who was a member of the first Kinsmen club formed in Hamilton by Hjl Rogers back in 1920.

Varied Program Enjoyed

A varied and delightful program of entertainment was provided by the Norman Harris artists. These included master of ceremonies and impersonator Joe Murphy; pianist, Lloyd Cooper; ventriloquist Ted Rust and a very capable acrobatic dancer Miss Zena Chevrier.

Miss Mildred Morey, well known Canadian comedienne, literally brought down the house with her several numbers and repeatedly was brought back for encores.

"WHAT'S THIS PRESCRIPTION FOR?"
When you ask your pharmacist to tell you, on the basis of your prescription, what illness is, you ask him a question to which you should not expect an answer.

Many important drugs prove useful in a variety of diseases. The use of a certain drug in your prescription may not serve, therefore, as an exact clue to the nature of your illness. Quinine, for example—long known for its qualities in combatting dreaded malaria—has frequently been prescribed in treating other conditions. Then, too, some drugs are known to counteract specific symptoms only, while the same symptoms may be observed in more than one type of illness. The doctor who examined you and diagnosed your condition will have given you all the necessary information. It is not within the pharmacist's province to diagnose illness. His is the task of preparing the prescribed medication in a manner that will be the most effective. His scientific training enables him to recognize chemical or physical incompatibilities that may present themselves in a mixture of various ingredients.

Your pharmacist's skill makes sure that each dose of the finished product will contain the exact amount of the drugs your doctor intends you to have.—Reprinted from a copyrighted advertisement published by Parke, Davis & Company.

Life Never Dull as Army Hospital Takes All Comers

By Senator Redpath Mayfair
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Churchill, Man. (CP)— They call it the "Hospital of the Unexpected," and nobody connected with the medical unit in this northern military base will deny that the name is an apt one.

It's a hospital organized primarily to look after military personnel, but many babies have been seen the light of day within its walls; it's a centre of healing to which patients have been conveyed by aircraft, dog team, canoe and train in this institution which sends men out to bring in patients who lack means of transportation.

A short time ago the medical officer in charge, Maj. R. L. P. Brossard of Montreal, would have said the hospital served an area "from as far north as Chesterfield Inlet and as far south as half way down the line to Fort Nelson" on the Hudson Bay railway, with half way down being 1,000 miles north. Arctic Bay is 1,000 miles north, well within the Arctic circle. Now the area serviced by the hospital extends southeast into Ontario to Port Severn near James Bay.

Patients at the "Hospital of the Unexpected" are Eskimos, Indians and whites — men, women and children. Among them are traders, trappers, missionaries, construction workers and sailors from ships that dock at Churchill in the summer.

Sometimes the hospital's work is done hundreds of miles away from the camp. When the R.C.A.F. Search Flights Unit on Resolute Bay found this port a doctor usually goes along. On one such flight Maj. Brossard and the Mounties stranded on an ice floe in Hudson Bay when his aircraft crashed. Mrs. L. Lavallee of Quebec City, the station's only doctor, on another occasion was lost in the barrens for days. But both survived, as did their patients.

The hospital itself, officially, is a 30-bed institution, but on occasion it has stretched that 25 in an almost alarming manner. Its staff is of equivalent size, which has yet to be used, however, is an incubator for the nursery.

Community Service

Matron Beth Andreas, a sprightly sister from Calgary, who first dubbed the hospital the "Hospital of the Unexpected," said that anything can happen during a working day.

"Perhaps for that reason the hospital is like a family. Everyone accepts without question the problems that come along and all are ready and interested in helping each other," she says.

This family feeling extends to those surrounding the military base. The port of Churchill is seen on miles away, is given special service by Nursing Sister Muriel Clift of Melfort, Sask., a graduate social worker as well as nurse.

Among her many more colorful patients at the hospital was the Chief of the Duck Lake Indians, who arrived wearing a suit that made history. Last summer the chief had been persuaded by some of the lonely sailors from ships that dock at Churchill to receive their annual treaty money. They talked him into it and the chief had not received his goldbraid and brass-trimmed suit. Once he arrived the Indians called off their strike.

Another Indian chief in hospital was Jeremiah Albany of the Fort Severn band, who accidentally shot himself in the hand. One finger had to be amputated.

Cree and Chipewyan, once active enemies, are now the friendly have forgotten their animosities while in the Churchill military hospital.

TWEED

ST. JAMES' W.A.

Tweed, — The regular monthly W.A. meeting of St. James' Anglican Church was held on Thursday at the home of Mrs. John S. Elliott. The opening service was taken by the vice president, Mrs. Elliott and Miss Laura Thompson read the Scripture.

After various business matters were discussed, the report of the annual diocesan W.A. Deanery meeting held in St. George's Cathedral, Kingston, was presented by the delegate, Mrs. Herbert Baker. There were 90 delegates and 50 life members present and during the day's meeting, to hear the glowing reports given by Deanery officers.

The Thank-offering alone was splendid, increasing considerably to $1,822. Guest speakers included Archbishop Lewis, Rev. A. C. Watts, Rev. H. Tookey, also Watts and Miss Hamilton. There were a total of 4,029 W.A. members in the Diocese last year with 12 new branches formed. Mrs. Mitchell and Mrs. Geo. Clark mixed a hearty meal to thanks to Mrs. Baker for her splendid report.

Also during the evening a solo was sung by Mrs. F. Cousins, accompanied by a reading by Mrs. Mitchell and a piano solo by Miss Harry Young. Arrangements were served by the hostess.

Mr. and Mrs. John Sager called on Mrs. Beatrice Varty, of Madoc, on Wednesday evening.

Miss Margaret Sherry and Miss Betty McCullough, spent last week in Toronto, and attended The Ice Revue at Varsity Arena, while Miss Barbara Ann Scott,

The infant son of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Lee, died in Hotel Dieu Hospital, Kingston.

GUILD WANTS HOME

Winnipeg (CP)— Members of the Canadian Press Guild (Manitoba Branch) are going to decide the coming year to securing a permanent home for the onorganization. A motion that Winnipeg be asked for the purpose was passed unanimously at a recent meeting.

BULLETINS FROM BIRDLAND

By WINIFRED E. WILSON

The next week or two constitutes the peak of the grand opera season in the back woods. Most of us get out into the country at the stupidest time of year when, in the dead of winter, nature prefers to sleep in the warmth of her feather beds, ignoring day-making humans.

The birds by summer, have nearly all ceased singing. But right now the enormous sky across Canada, from Newfoundland to the Queen Charlotte Islands, rings with their up-pointed music. It takes a little imagination to try to conceive the numbers of the birds that are making at this moment. The National Audubon Society submits that there are 15,000 million birds in North America at this present time. But this number we may have half or better, in Canada. All the males are whooping it up right now.

Robins are yelling, owls are hooting, while over their nesting rocks are yodelling and screaming Poor-Will's. In the deeps of the Arctic and sub-Arctic tundra at the millions of water fowl and shore birds nesting there give voice to their feelings, that nobody can tell me the night is enough to drive you bushed. In northern forests, on the prairies and to the mountains, not a single acre of Canada but has forty tons to the acre of twenty nests of various birds; and over them all a twenty gentleman uses the vocal instrument God gave him with all his force.

Most of them are worth hearing. A Thibetan monk with his fifteen foot horn can't make a proportion, as terrific a sound as a loon, but it is all its careless throat. And after you have listened close to a hermit thrush in the cool of the tree for half an hour, you will have to confess that human language at its best has failed to produce any instrument say violin, flute, to equal for sheer beauty of sound the tiniest little mesh of muscles in this small bird's neck.

CARROTS WITHOUT TOPS

Ottawa, May 20 (CP)—The revenue department said today that it was relaxing its carrots without tops—not with tops—in an immediate effect. Importation of on their import would be lifted May 21.

Import of carrots without tops, banned under emergency import regulations because while carrots were in good supply, will be permitted after that date in the Maritimes and central Canada.

The Canada Press announcement reported earlier this week that the announcement concerned carrots with tops.

GIRL ASKS YOUTH TO SURRENDER

Picton, Ont., May 20 — (CP)— Leslie Pringle is back in county jail today after his girl friend persuaded him to give himself up. He escaped Wednesday night and made his way to nearby Mt. Pleasant where the friend lives. He was awaiting transfer to the Guelph Reformatory to serve a one-year sentence for perjury.

St. Andrew's W.M.S.

The May meeting of St. Andrew's W.M.S. was held on Tuesday afternoon at the home of Mrs. James Sprouls with a good attendance of members and three visitors.

The President, Mrs. H. C. Barlow presided. Mrs. Young conducted the Worship Service as outlined in the Missionary Monthly, on the book "Newcomers to Canada", and was assisted by Mrs. Barlow and Mrs. Peck. Mrs. Bateman took the record of books and missionary monthlies used, and 117 calls were reported. Two ladies joined the local auxiliary at the last meeting.

The new book "Prayer" to be read by W.M.S. members this year, was the topic for Mrs. Wilkinson. Gifts were received for the sale to be sent north and Christmas cards for several members and others were asked to bring their contributions to the June meeting. Mrs. Prentice offered her home for this meeting.

Mrs. Gordon Jarvis gave an interesting report of the branch meeting held in Smith Falls in April. The Thank-offering was received and dedicated.

Marmora W.I.

The monthly meeting of Marmora Women's Institute was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. Ethel Nobes. The President, Mrs. Agnes Brady, was in the chair, and there was a good attendance of members. The meeting opened in the customary manner. The roll call was "Joy and Don't for the Sick Room."

The financial reports of the branch and the hall decoration fund, as well as the auditor's report, were furnished by the secretary-treasurer, Mrs. Ruth Chrysler. Monies collected on the town canvas for contributions to the memorial were handed in by the canvassers. The secretary was instructed to write a letter of thanks to Marmora, and Lake Township Council for their valued subscription to this fund.

The meeting decided to accede to the request of the Marmora Village Council to undertake the work of putting in the curtains at the Town Hall. Mrs. R. C. Peaslee reported on the Congress of the "Kitchen Cabinet Cookbook", which was put on for entertainment in the Town Hall on June 2 and 3.

The Institute accepted the invitation of Mrs. M. Thompson to attend the June meeting in her home. After the meeting closed a rehearsal for the forthcoming entertainment was held and refreshments served.

Abandon Search For 20 Seamen In Lifeboats

Halifax, May 20 (CP)—Search was abandoned today for 20 Danish seamen who took to lifeboats when the freighter Elbea sank off Greenland Monday.

The R.C.A.F. said here that search planes reported strong gales in the area today and were ordered back to base and the hunt abandoned for good.

It was presumed that the small boats left crowded in the naval North Atlantic or that the men had perished from freezing temperatures in an area where icebergs still drift south in June.

NINE YEARS AGO

Time draws near the anniversary of one of the great moments of the ages. On May 1940 Hitler's power looked to the Axis to be invincible. He had thrown the devastating might of metal and his soldiery against the western world. The shock which Europe felt when the German force struck Denmark and then Norway in the month of April was followed by the terrific blows which the German armies used to try and conquer the west. On May 10th the Germans invaded the Netherlands, Belgium and Luxembourg. Soon the enemy was at the Channel ports and gloated in the "invincibility" of German power. That was a time requiring strength of arm and hardiness of soul.

The people of Britain had both of instinct which will hold its place in the world's records of great deeds, the greatest mass evacuation of troops in history, when in the last days of May and first few days of June more than a third of a million troops were ferried from Dunkirk by innumerable craft, large ships and small boats to England. The glory of that achievement was not only the glory of physical might and strategy but the glory of the spirit of a great people. Dunkirk was a blow at the prestige of Hitler's assumed "invincibility." It fired the soul of Britain and of the free world and of the nations which had been stricken and overcome by guile and treachery.

It inspired faith, hope and courage throughout the democratic world.

In the midst of the millions of the brave men and women of this time stood Winston Churchill, leader and emblem of dauntless Britain. At that memorable time he spoke words that reached the souls of men and women, the uncounted millions who had been stricken down by the enemy. These classic words were a prophecy of the doom of aggression and of the triumph of the free and brave. The words he used at that time lived with great power and they yet live as the battle cry of the true and the free the world until the end of the world. They became instantly famous and are assured a place in the world's treasury: "We shall fight on the beaches. We shall fight on the landing grounds. We shall fight in the fields and in the streets. We shall fight in the hills, we shall never surrender." They did not have to fight in the streets of Albion, but they fought in the skies over Britain and there again fell blows which ruled out the possibility of a German victory and brought down ruin upon the aggressors.

Nine years ago events filled the hearts of many millions, gripped in the most titanic struggle of all time. It was the age which showed the mettle and the soul of a dauntless race. Their deeds in the days of battle and on and beneath the surface of the sea inspired mankind to triumph over inhuman tyranny. In the course of time the enemy fell.

In the days of peace even in the presence of present day lack of humility and humanity it seems naturally difficult to catch the full spirit of May 1940 which guided safely the world's treasure of liberty. More than five years of suffering and anxiety had yet to come and pass before German and Japanese aggression was crushed.

Years have come and gone since that memorable May, which seem peculiarly made for such stalwart defenders of the right as Britain and her Allies who were called upon to suffer such heavy sorrows and pains through the inhumanity of the aggressor's arms. Dunkirk and like events were prophetic of the rising power of the free.

The world looks forward, but with a sure faith that peace will last and that nothing shall halt the steps forward which are being taken along the way to prevent any future conflict.

COLD SHOULDER TO FRANCO

The United Nations, which was asked to extend the warm right hand of fellowship to Franco, has again turned the cold left shoulder of non-recognition. At the same time, the Export-Import Bank has turned down a Franco request for loans adding up to $1,275,000,000, says Christian Science Monitor.

Non-recognition, of itself, is a dubious diplomatic weapon. As a matter of abstract logic, there is little reason for recognising one antidemocratic regime but not another. It can also be argued that the Spanish people themselves suffer from not being admitted to the nonpolitical activities of the UN.

But these arguments are outweighed by the effect a reversal of policy would have both within and without Spain at this time. It would give Franco the moral and material support he so badly needs to maintain his uneasy dictatorship. It would inflict a sharp psychological defeat on all the liberal anti-Communist elements of western Europe. There is need to understand exactly what forces have been at work pushing the issue at this time, when no compelling events force a change of policy.

There is no such way to attain to greater measure of grace as for a man to live up to the little grace he has.—Brooks.

YOUTH

When the doubters sneer,
Head not the jibes you hear.
Scoffers will fawn on you
Always for newer truths true.

Deaf to what old men speak,
Dare for the goal you seek.
Always for newer truths true,
Progress depends on youth.

Age is a stubborn thing
Bound to the past to cling.
One saying and fearless mind
The letter may must find.

Scoffers have always sneered.
Doubters have failure feared.
Into the vast unknown,
Youth must set out alone.

TODAY'S TALK

BY GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

THE DEPENDABLES

Some years ago the late Elbert Hubbard wrote an essay about a man named Rowan, whom president McKinley selected to carry a message to Garcia, the Cuban General, during the Spanish-American war. Hubbard made a little magazine "The Philistine" famous later called a "Message to Garcia." It was distributed all over the world into millions of copies.

The gist of the story was that the President had a message that he wanted delivered and immediately upon one said: "There is a fellow by the name of Rowan who will do the job." And so he was called in, he received, took the message, sealed it in an oilskin pouch, kept his head and was off. No questions asked, no excuses. Through the jungles he went alone, and delivered the letter. He was one of those dependables so rare in this world. No wonder his fame spread like wildfire.

As never before in offices, factories, in government positions—everywhere — there is a continual call for dependable persons—people who will do their work in a dependable fashion, and without complaint. People who will listen, grasp the situation, and then do the job happily and efficiently. In every organization there are dependables, and they are the ones who get ahead.

Once one of these dependable gizes his word, it is a bond. You can dismiss all worry about such a one. If you select only his word to carry out your work you can know no failure. The dependables will do that.

It's the same with one's friendships. You tie to the dependable friend for life. In every experience in life you will know just where to find the dependable, look the message, sealed it in an oilskin pouch, kept his head and was off. No questions asked, no excuses. Through the jungles he went alone, and delivered the letter. He was one of those dependables so rare in this world. No wonder his fame spread like wildfire.

You can venture afar with people who are dependable. They will go the route, for respect, honor, and love that one who is dependable under all circumstances. It's all in his eyes, his walk, his words —and his acts.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

On Slaying One's Enemies

If you have an enemy you want to rid yourself of, try killing him off with Christian kindness. Run him through with good wishes; bludgeon him with praise. Return not evil for evil, but try to overcome the evil with good. If he compels you to go with him one mile, show him with what spirit you can go with him twain.

There is nothing in the world so devastating as good will. As regards our relations to others the message of Christianity is simply this; that we are for them, the whole world with such a spirit of well wishing and earnest endeavor to do good, that even those who dislike us most will find their animosity toward us relaxing and the fires of their bitterness dying down.

It is only a confirmed and twisted hater who withstands goodwill, and such men are as rare as white blackbirds. Out of every 500 people, 499 will find it impossible to maintain a spirit of animosity against anyone who sets out with a steady spirit of good will to meet evil and vindquish it with the overwhelming power of goodness.

Mackenzie's Column: Chiang Kai-Shek Is Below Par With United States

By DeWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

There is a tendency in some Chinese hearts at this decision to find encouragement in State Secretary Dean Acheson's statement that the Senate realizes that the United States won't recognize a communist regime in China so long as a Nationalist government exists.

However, it strikes me the Nationalists are grasping at straws in a try to extract much satisfaction from such a general remark. For the statement seems to indicate that Washington has no intention of recognizing a communist regime in China now.

But it should be noted that Acheson didn't quite himself that very far in any direction. He appears to be pursuing a course of watchful waiting.

Chiang in Bad Books

This much seems clear from recent developments: Washington has no present intention of rushing to the defense of Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek's refugee nationalist government. The generalissimo, whose personal stock is below par in Washington, will have to produce a far more liberal and progressive form of government than he has now to touch further support.

The present lesson that Uncle Sam is going to put the stamp of approval on any communist government which may be established. We are not recognizing numerous communist governments. Thus there's no reason for anyone to assume that we will be in a hurry to push not recognize a Chinese communist government if and when an established and going concern.

By the same token there's no reason why we should be in a hurry to see it — that the United States will withdraw its support to some new government.

Generalissimo Chiang gets much help from the Chinese Communist warlords. Those warlords might regroup and form a new regime. Chiang might be smart if he encouraged just such a move in order to avoid the bankruptcy of his own government.

Bitter Pieces

However, the generalissimo long ago demonstrated that he is a fighter. He gives no indication that he intends to withdraw from the picture, but appears to be exceedingly active in directing the defense against the communists in the northwest of China.

I hear from a good source that the nationalist party plandns the project of establishing the government on the big island of Formosa, which it took to him and included that while Formosa would not take an independent position, yet it would be too far removed from the heart of activities to be a factor in the general purposes.

Therefore, the Nationalist high command is said to have decided to move the government back to the mainland of China, to Canton, it's said, if the communists are able to capture their former capital ward. Chunking would make a better rallying point, especially since it is reported to be full with victory against the Japanese and their puppets.

STANDARDIZATION OF FIRE HOSE COUPLINGS

London, Ont., May 20 (CP) — Standardization of equipment among district fire departments in the province of Ontario, London Fire Chief H. C. McRonald at the opening of the annual two-day fireman's training school at the University of Western.

Often, he said, fire apparatus is useless in an emergency in a neighboring municipality because of different size couplings.

More than 85 chiefs and members of municipal fire departments are registered at the school.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

By July 16, all those of us who are in the habit of listening to the radio will know how to pronounce Goethe properly.

This year marks the hundredth anniversary of the birth of the great German poet, novelist and philosopher. But due to the fact that his native country is a bit unsettled and not in a position to hold festivals in honor of its great intellectuals, there is being held at Aspen, Colorado, between June 27 and July 16, a festival commemorating the creation and musical festival in honor of Goethe.

Aspen, Colorado, is one of those new, sudden, dream-holiday places America has endured us. Even Goethe would not have believed that the Rocky Mountains in the summer-time would be the setting for a festival appearing in American magazines, but all the famous men who will be there to lecture and to perform musically — Dr. Albert Schweitzer, the saintly character who has spent the past 36 years in a jungle medical mission in Africa; Jose Ortega y Gasset, Spain's greatest living philosopher; President Hutchins of University of Chicago; Thornton Wilder; Halvdan Kohl, Norway's famous historian, Arthur Rubinstein will be there, Nathan Milstein, Dimitri Mitropoulos and his Minneapolis symphony. Not to forget, says the ad, you can see the June 30 ski races, in the longest chair lift in the world, enjoy square dance, mountain climbing and trout fishing.

But for me, clutching my radio button, the big thing about the festival will be how to pronounce Goethe. Aspen, Colorado, will demand a little uniformity amongst all those great men assembled. For forty years, I have been listening to school teachers, professors, savants, intellectuals.

They call him Gertie, Goaty, Getty, Gayta Goeth, as pride gosh Gooie, Geeta, Geetie and—what is worse—Gurty and Burty, rhyming up their mouths—Geelou-teh!

Soon we will know.

Slemon Succeeds Middleton as Head Central Command

Ottawa, May 21 (CP)—A shift in top-level R.C.A.F. appointments was announced today following the retirement of Air Vice-Marshal W. A. Middleton, head of the R.C.A.F. Central Command for the last four years.

He retires Sept. 1 to be succeeded by Air-Vice Marshal C. H. Slemon, one of the five original officers of the Royal Air Force serving in the force. He moved up to the job from his headquarters post of air member for operations and training.

Air Vice-Marshal Slemon will be replaced at Ottawa by 40-year-old Air Commodore F. R. Miller, now on the Canadian Joint staff at Washington, who is promoted to Air Vice-Marshal.

Air Vice-Marshal Middleton, 50 years old, has been in charge of the R.C.A.F. since 1925. He was a flight lieut. in the Royal Naval Service during the First World War and director of personnel for the R.C.A.F. overseas during the Second World War. A native of Bowmanville, Ont., he was awarded the C.B.E. in 1945.

Air Vice-Marshal Slemon was the first R.C.A.F. pilot to receive his Wings in peace time, at Camp Borden. He served, after an engineering course at the University of Manitoba, from '24 to '26 as an outstanding pilot during the early days of the R.C.A.F. Then he went on forest-fire patrols and photographic operations.

He had been with the command since the projected R.C.A.F. Pacific force came to nothing and previously was deputy air officer commanding the Pacific area before going to Washington last August.

TULIP BIRTH - RATE UP

Ottawa, May 20 — (CP)—Maybe it's the weather, or maybe it's just nature acting contrary. At any rate the tulip birth - rate is soaring in the gardens at suburban Woodroffe. Twin flowers, triplets and even multiplets abound among the usual single blooms. Mrs. J. D. Hazlett, wife of the Experimental farm commented that triplet tulips are seen only "very occasionally."

THE RABIPHOBIA IS ENDEMIC

Here comes the illuminating touch you have been waiting for: "I am afraid of rabies." Then comes a husky cry, it suggests to me, from the back of a dog. Edgar, well call the boy here." Then comes the first symptom.

If the reporter, editor or write man who turned out the piece will send me a stamped self-addressed envelope I'll tell him about a lot of other symptoms which physicians have associated with human rabies — but which, likely as not, Edgar didn't have. Fils 'em in the mad dog department and use 'em. Next time you need a good "story" about rabies.

Every word of the newspaper description of the boy's case suffering from rabies (hodkjev) and nothing else.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Caffeine

Is it true that there is more caffein in cocoa than in coffee? (C. B.)

Answer—Cocoa contains a theobromine, which acts like caffeine but is more diuretic (increases the secretion of urine) and less stimulating to the brain and nerves than caffeine (caffeine). Cup for cup cocoa or chocolate is less stimulating than coffee, more nourishing than tea. Both cocoa (theobromine) and coffee (caffeine) are generally good for persons with angina pectoris, heart failure, hypertension, kidney diseases, and following coronary thrombosis, because they tend to open up the coronary arteries.

Popcorn

You stated recently that popcorn is not harmful. The article by Dr. F. H. Dorst explains on page 10, sec. 4 of the Health Sciencies in the South, where people who eat much corn, suffer pellagra. (Mrs. J. P. Dill)

Answer—I'd say "on if my memory serves me right," and tell I M. Told to go lay an egg.

Scandinavian Lamb Stew

By KAY REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, (CP)—Next time she visits the butcher shop, the housewife would be wise to buy a piece of lamb instead of the usual cut of beef or pork. It is the meat for Spring.

Home economists of the consumer section, nutrition department of agriculture, say the best lamb comes from well-rounded carcasses. The meat should be moist but firm and fine-grained. The thin flank—like covering should be left on roasts, but removed from chops. Good lamb has a smooth even covering of firm creamy fat with a slight pinkish tinge. The bones also have a pinky color which whitens with age.

Tender cuts of lamb are leg, loin and shoulder, although being young, none of the meat actually is tough. Lamb should be roasted at 325 to 350 degrees Fahrenheit; for 20 to 25 minutes to the pound if it is preferred well done. Medium done—25 to 30 minutes to the pound. Chops can be thick cook nicely in 12 minutes.

Scandinavian Lamb Stew (Fasrihasal)—ingredients: two pounds lean stewing lamb two tablespoons fat; 1-2 teaspoon pepper; one teaspoon whole pepper corns or one-eighth teaspoon pepper; two cups water; one medium cabbage.

Cut lamb in two-inch cubes and brown in fat; add seasoning and water, cover and simmer 45 minutes or until lamb is almost done, adding more water if necessary. Cut cabbage in eighths and remove core; add to lamb and covered, until cabbage is tender (about 20 minutes). Serve piping hot. Six servings.

Shepherd's Pie

Leftover meats always are a problem to serve, but if converted into an appetizing dish as Shepherd's Pie, chances are the family will consume it with delight.

Ingredients: one-quarter cup tapioca; one cup hot gravy or stock; one teaspoon salt; one-eighth teaspoon pepper; one teaspoon each paprika; 1 1-2 cups hot water; one onion chopped; one tablespoon parsley chopped; one tablespoon catsup; two cups cooked meat cut in cubes; two cups mashed potatoes, seasoned.

Add tapioca, pepper, salt and paprika, to hot water and gravy. Cook in double boiler 15 minutes. Add onion, catsup and meat. Mix well and put in a greased baking dish, spread mashed potatoes on top, and bake in a moderate oven.

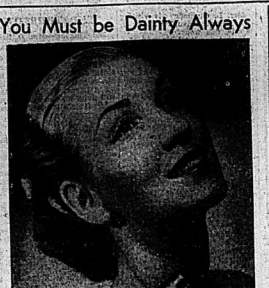
Household Hints: Heat lemons well before using and there will be twice the quantity of juice.

When a recipe calls for melted butter, always measure the butter after it has been melted, not before.

To prevent cakes from sticking to pans, sprinkle the tins with equal parts of flour and fine sugar.

When taking a cake from the oven place it for a few minutes on a cloth wrung out in cold water and it will be turned out easily without sticking to the pan.

Fair to Feature Scottish Styles



Glasgow, Scotland, — (CP)—Ten Scottish girls will show Scottish fashions to the world at Scottish Industries Exhibition in the Kelvin Hall Sept. 1-17.

There will be shoes from Carnoustie, nylons from Stewarton, knitwear from Dalry and the Borders, and Border and Island tweeds.

Betty Lloyd, a Glasgow man, is producing the show. One of the girls he chose was Anna M'Laughlin, who gave up nursing recently to become a professional mannequin. Lloyd's best known manufacturers and the best known mannequins, Alice Spencer.

Margaret Fleming of Plains, Airdrie, was on the stage for years before becoming a mannequin. She says her dearest ambition is to be a full-time comedienne.

You Must be Dainty Always

After your bath, dust on fragrant power with a little brush that has powder right in handle. It sifts through as you use it.

By HELEN FOLLETT

SAY that a woman is dainty and you have paid her a pretty compliment. To be dainty, a woman must not stint on the time spent in personal grooming. Scrupulous cleanliness is the first law of beautifying, so she must have her daily bath and not rush it, be fussy about the garments, be sure every little detail. It is the woman who has a crisp, freshly-washed look who is a pleasure to the eye.

Her hair is soft and shining; the shampoo date is never postponed.

Of the daily bath she makes a ritual. No hopping in and out of the tub for her with a few wishes of the wash cloth. First she washes her face in the bowl, rinses and dries it, applies a thin cream that remains on during the tubbing. Oil and moist heat make a grand combination for creating softness of the facial covering. It imparts a pleasing coloring to the complexion.

One of her pet grooming items is a bath brush of firm, heavy bristles that do not mat when she uses it. She fluffs up a lather, rich with energy. She knows that the skin all over the body is constantly shedding new scales taking the place of the old ones. Unless this debris is removed, the skin does not function normally as an organ of elimination.

She goes the limit with bath salts, throwing fragrant salts into the water to soften it. After the scrubbing in the tub she has an invigorating shower, gradually cooling the water. One of her constant pleasures consists of large turkish towels that take hold with a sting, bring a quick reaction of the blood streams.

The final finish is a friction with a scented tonic, compounded especially for the purpose. It keeps the skin surface soft and smooth, is death on those little red polists that we call goose flesh. They often appear on the arms and legs and are no beauty bargains.

War-Maimed Child Given New Start by Adoption Plan

New York (CP)— How would you like to be a foster-mother to 60,000 children.

Of course, on one can really be foster mother in that many children but Mrs. Edna Blue, international chairman of the Foster Parents' Plan for War Children, takes a personal interest in each child. Through her hands pass the files on each one "foster adopted" by kind Americans and she personally sees as many of them as possible on her trips abroad.

Mrs. Blue first became interested in international social work when she saw pictures of maimed children during the Spanish Civil War.

"Most women — especially mothers — feel their heart contract when they see pictures of crippled children. But not many do anything about it. I decided our own country was all right and we should try to help others," she says.

The Foster Parents' Plan for War Children was first founded in London in 1937 to aid children victims of the terrible times of the strife in Spain. However, it soon went out of existence there. It came to life in the United States the following year and now is an entirely American organization.

Mrs. Blue was executive chairman of the organization shortly after its establishment in the United States and then, after 1941 international chairman. She has received one of Belgium's highest decorations — the Golden Palms of the Order of the Crown for her 11 years' social work. Five thousand Belgian children have been aided by the Foster Parents' organization since the outbreak of war.

Direct Personal Interest

Foster Parents does not do relief work but arranges for the "adoption" of children by American foster parents. They contribute $15 monthly towards the support of the child and correspond regularly with them through the Plan office. The foster parent receives a picture and case history of the child selected for him. Each child is treated as an individual with the idea that he or she will live as nearly as a home like life as possible.

On the trip from abroad Mrs. Blue wrote:

"There are times I feel I cannot finish the trip but must return home right away to raise money for these kids. Soon they will have to support themselves —and if they have two arms and legs, even though they are not their own, they feel they can get along."

Through the Plan, a young Italian boy was recently refitted with artificial arms in the United States, Mrs. Blue flew back with the lad and he will demonstrate his ability to use his new arms for others who hope soon to be similarly equipped.

All the Blue family help in welfare work.

Mrs. Blue's son, 24, was with the Office of Strategic Service in China during the war. He helps her with the welfare work in China. Her 22-year-old daughter besides working with her mother teaches veterans to dance. Her husband who is in the textile business finds the organization samples from which patch quilts and children's clothing can be made. He is also a member of the board of directors of Foster Parents.

GIRL GUIDE ACTIVITIES

The Girl Guides look forward to their annual church service and this year was very satisfactory as this event was one of the nicest ever held. The Guides and Brownies had as their guests, the Scouts and Cubs of the city, and attended in a body, the Victoria Avenue Baptist Church, where Rev. H. O. Eastman held a very impressive young people's service. Thanks go to Mr. Eastman for his kind welcome, and timely messages to the choir for their appropriate music, and to Miss M. Johson, who sang as her solo, the "Guide Creed", and to the Scouts and their leaders for their grand cooperation.

1st Belleville Brownies

A very happy and informal presentation was held at the Quinte Tweans Centre on Tuesday afternoon, when the 1st Belleville Brownies were presented with the awards for their year's work. Mrs. A. Tooth, Brown Owl, explained briefly to the interested parents there, the requirements for which the Brownies had really worked very hard, were very carefully tested to cover all activities and represented good all-round work. She said how pleased she and Tawny Owl were with the progress made by the Brownies, especially several who had made special efforts to overcome specific and personal difficulties. This stetwing of the golden goal, and along with their difficulties, till they were overcome, was developing the spirit of Brownie who would prove a credit to the movement. Brown Owl expressed how pleased she and Tawny Owl were to see that the girls were really working along these lines.

Everyone had achieved the required 75 per cent attendance to earn her silver Owl, and the following five had attended without a single absence—Jean Wright-bridge, Marion Clark, Margaret Ann Clark, Josephine Dalton, Carol Osborne. These were also presented with special pins by Brown Owl, and Tawny Owl.

Service Stars were awarded to Josephine Fulton, Margaret Ann Clark, Joyce Blackburn, Carol Osborne, Sharon Thompson, Anne Tooth, Sydra Vermilyea, Marilyn Erickson, Margaret Potts, Barbara Robb, Margaret Bridge, Barbara Martin, Margaret Rose, Jacky Murphy, Margaret Follwell, Sandra Fry, Jacky Watson, Gail Hendricks, Nancy Walters, Roberta Furney, Janet's Green.

Golden Bars were awarded to Margaret Ann Clark, Joyce Blackburn, Carol Osborne, Sharon Thompson, Anne Tooth, Sydra Vermilyea, Marilyn Erickson, Nancy Slipp, Kathleen O'Sullivan, Heather Lewis, Josephine Fulton, Gwen Ferguson.

The Knitters Proficiency Badge was awarded to Josephine Fulton.

Company 7 Guides

Baseball has been the big item in the Company 7 program this month. Instead of their weekly games and campfire, The Guides went up to Queen Mary School grounds where they enjoyed a ball game. The Guides are planning on choosing their best players to form a Company team. Test work has not been neglected though as the girls are working on the telephone code. So if you see any Guides waving their arms around excitedly, don't be alarmed, it's just semaphore.

Catholic Women's League Holds Delightful Tea

A lovely and successful afternoon tea, convened by Mrs. R. J. Flynn, assisted by Mrs. Eddie Logan, was held on Thursday afternoon at the home of Mrs. J. V. Boyle, under the auspices of the Catholic Women's League.

Little Joanne Bunton opened the door for the guests who were received by the hostess, Mrs. J. V. Boyle, and the president of the league, Mrs. K. M. Doyle. Mrs. R. E. Burley acted as treasurer.

The tea room presented a charming spring-like appearance with its several bouquets of lovely flowers tastefully arranged throughout the room, and the tea table with its dainty cloth, centred with yellow tulips, and baby's breath in a silver bowl, flanked with silver candelabra with tall, yellow candles, and silver services, was a picture in itself.

Those who presided during the first portion of the afternoon were: Mrs. J. Hunter and Mrs. J. R. Kelly, while Mrs. Carefully and Mrs. W. J. Laporte assumed the honors for the latter part.

Those who served were: Mrs. J. Murdock, Mrs. W. J. Laporte, Mrs. W. R. Doyle and Miss M. McLellan. Mrs. J. Logan presided the tea table and Mrs. L. Howe and Miss B. Dolan, the dainty dishes with delicacies and tiny cakes.

One of the major attractions was a beautiful angel cake, thick with delicious frosting, in charge of Mrs. P. J. Lynch, and which was cut later by Mrs. Dave Callaghan, while the dainty cup and saucer, in charge of Mrs. F. Coahing, was won by Mrs. Gordon Miller, of Ann Street, and the delicious candy in charge of Mrs. C. Funnell, was won by Miss Stella Ford.

Presiding over the home-cooking table with its array of delightful confectoits of many varieties, were Mrs. W. Fleury and Mrs. J. Cowan, who were kept busy attending to the numerous customers.

A charming tea, tastefully arranged and delightfully conveyed.

11-Year-Old Boy Is Recommended

Oakville, May 20 — (CP) — Eleven-year-old Bobby Huestis, member of a Wolf Cubs Pack in this town, 20 miles west of Toronto, will be recommended for a Scout bravery award.

Mrs. Clare Smith, Cub pack leader, said today that Bobby's rescue of David Hossack, 4, from drowning a few days ago, merited the recommendation.

David tumbled into 25 feet of water while watching the older boy fish. Bobby dived, told the youngster to hold on to his hair then swam to safety.

WEDDINGS

HUBBS—SINE

Brockville. — Trinity church rectory was the scene of a pretty wedding on Saturday afternoon, May 24, at two o'clock, when Rev. Canon H. C. Coleman united in marriage Neva Pearl Sine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. B. F. Sine, 21 Bennett Street, and Gerald Colin Hubbs, son of Mr. A. Hubbs, and the late Mrs. Hubbs, of Bloomfield, Ont.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a street length dress of blue tissue faille with hat to match and corsage of yellow roses.

Mrs. George McNamara, of Hartley Street, sister of the bride, was matron-of-honor and wore a street-length dress of grey crepe with black accessories and corsage of pink roses.

Charles G. Hubbs, R.C.A.F., Centralia, Ont., was groomsman.

After the ceremony a reception was held at the bride's home, 41 Bennett Street, where refreshments were served, the bride's mother wearing a navy dress with corsage of pink roses and the sister of the groom, Mrs. William Yandt, wearing a pale blue dress with corsage of pink carnations, receiving the guests.

Travelling by motor, the bride and groom left on a wedding trip to the United States, the bride wearing a grey tailored suit with navy accessories.

Among the guests present from a distance were: Miss Dorothy Moorman and Miss Lois Moorman, of Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Stevenson and Wilson, of Bath; Mr. and Mrs. Fred Bush and Charles G. Hubbs, of Bloomfield. Mr. and Mrs. Wilson Hubbs, Yandt, and Mrs. Harry Hubbs of Wellington, Ont.

Mrs. W. L. Langlois Heads Q. V. Home And School Assoc.

The annual meeting of the Queen Victoria Home and School Association was held in the school auditorium on Thursday evening.

Reports were read by the retiring committee convenors, Mrs. R. C. Chalmers, Mrs. Ross Mott, membership; Mr. R. H. Greenwood, Montreal, and Mrs. L. Reid, finance, Mrs. W. Langlois, vice-president and Mrs. C. Wilkin for his many years of untiring service to Queen Victoria Home and School and for his kind and happy retirement to which he is now entitled.

The report on nominations for the executive was presented and the following officers were elected for the ensuing year, Mrs. J. Layton:

President, Mrs. W. L. Langlois; Vice President, Mrs. J. Layton, Mrs. K. L. Reid, Mr. R. H. Greenwood, Montreal; Secretary, Mrs. K. Hogg; Cor. Sec., Mr. J. Mallandine; Treasurer, Mr. W. Oliver; Executive, Mrs. R. M. Wilson, Mrs. W. Folwell, Mrs. W. Judge, Mr. P. W. Dewberry.

The guest speaker for the evening, Mr. Ivan Doug, Eaton of the Y.M.C.A. staff, was introduced by Mrs. R. M. Wilson and in an interesting and informal way talked about "The Function of a Recreational Committee".

Mrs. Greenwood stated that a recreational director alone could not function without the co-operation and direction in Belleville but would need to have the support of the whole recreational committee representative of every organization and church in the city.

This meeting brought to a conclusion the first year of activity for the association which has met with increasing enthusiasm on the part of both parents and teachers.

The president Mrs. Chas. Smith was in charge of the program which had been prepared by Mrs. Wm. Bush and Mrs. Ross Bush and Mrs. Finlay Scrimshaw and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey.

The Worship services and Bible Study was conducted by Mrs. Wm. Bush, and was based on the 2nd chapter of the study book, "Our Living Faith" an interpretation of the faith of the United Church of Canada by the Rev. R. C. Chalmers.

The theme of this chapter is that Jesus of Nazareth was God incarnate; that He devoted His life to mans' salvation: that He was crucified, was raised from the dead and exalted to reign with God. Thus He is acknowledged to be our Saviour and Lord. By the doctrine of the Holy Spirit the dwelling love of Christ is made available to us.

Mrs. S. Marshall, Mrs. Cyril McMullen, Mrs. M. Jeffrey, Cyril McMullen, Mrs. Ross Bush and Mrs. E. Hubbs assisted on this program. The meeting was closed with a solo by Mrs. Jeffrey and the benediction pronounced by Mrs. Bush.

During the business period, plans were made for the church cleaning on June 7th. Committees were appointed to investigating the cost of carpet for the church and the cost of the necessary needs on the church cleaning.

A letter was read from Mrs. Ross Bush asking that everyone attend the W.A. convention, held at Cannifton, which is to be held in Grace Church, Trenton, on May 27th.

A motion was put through to try and raise money for medical co-operation with Mrs. Spafford to look after the business for the Ekari district.

The second chapter of the book "For the Healing of the Nations" by Aikens' W.A. have chosen for study in their meeting was presented by Mrs. Ken Bush, assisted by Mrs. Ross Bush, Mrs. Hamilton, Mrs. Ken Jones, Mrs. S. Westover and Mrs. M. Jeffrey.

A reading was given by Mrs. Finlay Scrimshaw and the meeting was closed by Mrs. E. Hubbs.

During the social hour which followed, Mrs. S. Westover W.M.S. president, announced the sale of home cooking on the market on Saturday, May 28th.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Jones and the committee in charge.

CANNIPTON W. A.

The May meeting was held in the Sunday school room. Dinner was in charge of Mrs. Alton Boyd and Mrs. Clarence Peacock. The long white table looked loved with baskets of lilacs. After a delicious meal, the President, Mrs. H. Farnham, opened the meeting. The treasurer's report was read, and it was decided that Mrs. T. Howard be the delegate to the W.A. convention in Trenton.

The president gave a reading on "How Shall We Escape God".

After reports and other discussions, Mrs. Howard and Mrs. Furmidge sang a duet, "I Would Be True" accompanied at the piano by Mrs. H. Empson.

The ladies sewing group made several aprons while quilting was done by others. Two were finished. The W.A. have had Mr. Ken Bradshaw and his assistants clean the rooms and they look much nicer with new curtains.

KINGSTON RD. CHURCH W.A.

The regular meeting of the Kingston Rd. W.A. was held on Wednesday evening at the home of Mrs. C. MacDonald, Bridge Street West. There were 17 members and four visitors present.

The president, Mrs. Walkom, conducted the devotional period. Mrs. Gasley read the minutes of the last meeting. The roll call was answered by giving a "Good Health Hint".

Mrs. M. Ryan and Mrs. J. Parrott in their usual splendid manner entertained with two piano duets during the evening.

The topic "Health" was capably taken charge of by Mrs. M. Ryan who introduced the guest speaker, Miss Connor, V.O.N. nurse, who gave an interesting account of the V.O.N. work, its founding, and history. There are 108 branches throughout Canada, with their headquarters at Ottawa.

Mrs. Fred Parrott graciously thanked Miss Connor on behalf of the members for her splendid address. Mrs. Jack Haig then favored with a lovely solo. Mrs. Walkom read a poem "The Two Mothers". Mrs. Ryan conducted a geography contest the winners being, Mrs. J. Haig, Mrs. J. Parrott and Mrs. Melville Reid. Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. MacDonald, and her conveners.

DANCED WITH CZAR, NOW AMONG D.P.'s.

Saying she "danced twice with Czar and slept with pigs," a 79-year-old former Russian princess arrived in New York, one of 864 D.P.'s the Nazi government has sentenced to death in Moscow in 1941 but avoided execution when friends hid her until she could escape the country. The former princess refused to give her name, fearing the Russians might harm relatives, but said she plans to enter Russian orthdox convent. —Central Press Canadian.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Cosmetic hints to house guests

"It would seem," remarked a gracious lady who loves to give week-end parties," that when a girl or woman packs up for a visit she leaves about half of her beauty props home. In my guest rooms I have small jars of cream and small boxes of powder but really—I can't very well have a complete assortment of beauty aids. When I was going steady once, my boy friend would take me to dances and skating, but I didn't get to skate or dance very much with him because the other boys would ask me in advance. If I told them I had a date and I didn't think I should, they would say that I was stuck up.

Do you think the reason I have a hard time keeping a boy friend is because I don't stick close to my date when we go out or because I don't go in for heavy petting?

"Jane"

Dear "Jane":

It is possible that when you have accepted an invitation to go out with a boy for a date and have left him frequently to dance with other boys that you weren't very much interested in him. Personally I think that it is much better for a girl to be friendly with all the boys instead of sticking to just one, and for a boy to be the same considerate guide, so that your escort should not be too possessive and expect you to spend the entire evening in his exclusive company. But on the other hand you should be careful to be with him enough to be courteous, and to give you the invitation, and perhaps you have not always been careful about that.

As far the "heavy petting", if the boy you know can only be kept interested by that sort of thing, you are better off without them. I can assure you that not every boy is like that, and if you keep your own self-respect, and do not lower your standards, sooner or later you are going to find someone with ideals like your own, and you will be far happier!

A Problem of Love and Education

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am a girl of 20. About two years ago I met a boy whom I like very much. We went out a few times after that and had a lot of fun, but after awhile this fellow stopped seeing me. I do not know the reason why. I know I love this boy, as I have gone out with others and I still think of him.

I would like to join some organization, as I have very little education. I would like any word of help from you.

"Mixed Up"

Dear "Mixed Up":

Does your letter mean that you are afraid the boy lost interest in you because of your lack of education, and that you think you might have better chance if you were to become a little more cultured?

First, let me say that I think you are foolish to keep telling yourself that you are in love with this boy. What you really mean, whether you realize it or not, is simply that you are greatly attracted by him and would like to see more of him. If you look at it in this way, instead of making yourself unhappy by assuming that you are really in love, it will be much better.

As for your education problem, I suggest that you go to your local Y.W.C.A. and find out there what classes you might attend to learn the sort of thing of which you feel particularly in need. There are people at the Y.W.C.A. who will be able to advise you very wisely.

Turquoise and green frock

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

BRILLIANT TURQUOISE and green is the color scheme of this pretty little silk frock that shows a strong Chinese influence in the simple neckband collar and natural shoulder line. But with new and occidental is the curved and draped hip line. The allover pattern is achieved through diagonal tucks from the waist which form the slip pocket. The skirt is otherwise quite straight.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She Can't Keep a Boy Friend.

Dear Miss Farfax:

I am a girl of 18, and would like some advice on how to keep a steady boy friend.

When I go dancing or skating, I am very popular and have lots of fun, but when it comes to having a steady boy friend, I am very unsuccessful. When I was going steady once, my boy friend would take me to dances and skating, but I didn't get to skate or dance very much with him because the other boys would ask me in advance. GOOD MANNERS

By Mrs. Cornelius Beeckman

Memo re. Introductions: It is not good form to make an introduction that "gives orders." For example, you should never say: "meet" . . . "meet my friend" or "meet my wife" or "meet my husband with;" or "Let me make you acquainted with—"; or "make the acquaintance of" or "let me introduce," or "let me present."

Tipping A'oard an Ocean Liner

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Quite soon I am sailing on a large English ship for France. I am travelling alone, and will be sharing a stateroom with another woman in the tourist class. My fare is $170 for way tourist, and although my means are modest I am most anxious to do the right thing as to tipping. Will you please give me some guidance as to whom to tip and how much? (a) And when are these tips given?

B.J.

Of course it is very difficult ever to give very definite suggestions about suitable amounts in tipping, for during this depends entirely on the individual's convenience and inclination. However, there is a more or less general custom that a passenger in tourist class on an ocean liner might allot for tipping an amount equal to approximately 6 to 8 per cent of the cost of the passage. The principal persons to be tipped are: the dining room steward, the cabin steward (or stewardess), the bath steward, deck steward .The dining room steward might be given about 30 per cent of the amount allotted for tipping. The cabin steward, about 30 per cent (if there is a cabin stewardess also, give the cabin steward 20 per cent, and the stewardess 10 per cent, or this may be arranged according to the service given). The bath steward 10 per cent. The deck steward, 20 percent. The rest of the amount is designed to give, for example, to the library or lounge steward (if he gives you any service), the purser who serves mid morning bouillon and afternoon tea on deck, or for any other special service. (Tips given to stewards are given in round sums ,even if this means a little more or less to bring the per cent to the round amount.) On the ocean crossing the tips are given at the end of the voyage.

Taking a Gift Would be Inappropriate

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

My husband and I have just received an invitation to a cocktail party to be given for "Dorothy and George," to be held at the house of George's parents. We have met his parents once or twice at the home of mutual friends, but we have never met Dorothy or George (the bride). We have learned that the reason for the party is to announce the engagement of Dorothy and George. There has been much controversy about whether or not a gift is necessary or even appropriate. Both my husband and I feel that it would be in bad taste to present a gift. (As a matter of fact, I do not like to present a gift to whom would we present it, since we don't know either Dorothy or George?).

M.D.M.

I agree with you and your husband. It is not only unnecessary for you to take a gift to this cocktail party, but I think it would be thoroughly inappropriate. The invitation to you was certainly quite casual, since yours is merely an acquaintance with the parents, and you dont even know the young people for whom the party is being given. Also I am even wondering if it can be true that the party is to announce the engagement . . . since a most definite and traditional rule that the announcement of the engagement is made by the girl's parents.

New Drug Helpful In Morning Sickness

Baltimore, May 20 (AP)—Dramamine, the drug that conquered seasickness, may be useful against morning sickness.

First results in administering it to pregnant women suffering from nausea and vomiting, known as morning sickness, have been "encouraging, sometimes dramatic," one of the findings are highly tentative, Johns Hopkins Hospital physicians cautioned and must await large-scale studies under way at the institution.

Dr. Melvin Radman, Baltimore gynecologist and obstetrician, made the first tests during the last eighteen months. He said that the drug alleviated or eliminated symptoms of upset in thirty-three of forty-five pregnancies chosen for treatment from his private practice. Dramamine's use for sea, air and car sickness has been effective in almost 100 per cent of the cases.

Dr. Leslie N. Gay and Dr. Paul Carliner of the Johns Hopkins allergy clinic have led in tests establishing dramamine as motion sickness cure and are engaged in tests for other uses now.

Sees Great Future For Social Workers

Vancouver (CP)— British Columbia's social work graduates will never become a glut on the market.

"There just never seem to be enough of them" according to Miss Elizabeth Grubb, retiring assistant director of the family Welfare Bureau in Vancouver.

Miss Grubb, who has been in the social service field for the past 13 years, describes her various jobs as "great" "important" and "never monotonous."

The English teacher who "grew into" social work because her parents were service conscious quakers have been this month for England and the continent. The plans to spend part of her tour mountain climbing in the Tyrol.

Miss Grubb's social service career began in the London School of Economics but it was when she came to Canada that she was able to get the necessary scientific training.

Women's Institute

CATHOLIC W.I.

Marmora — The May meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in Sacred Heart School on Tuesday evening last with a good attendance. The President, Mrs. Charles Cook, occupied the chair. The meeting opened in the usual manner, after which the correspondence was dealt with.

Mrs. Charles Crawford was appointed special delegate to the Diocesan Convention to be held in Trenton on the sixth of June and plans were discussed for other members to attend. Mrs. Ed. Donaldson, and Mrs. Charles Crawford, convenors of Social Service and Mrs. Carl Heath gave the treasurer's report. It was decided to hold the June meeting at Crowe Lake, at the summer cottage, of Mrs. Teresa Warren, who had kindly offered it for the meeting.

Mrs. Joseph Doyle and Mrs. William Forestell volunteered to visit the sick and shutins for this month. It was decided to hold a strawberry social on the school grounds at the end of June. The president appointed the ladies of Group 3 and 4 to provide the lunch for the June meeting.

Rev. Father Farrell then addressed the meeting. He spoke of the Diocesan Convention, and hoped as many members as possible would attend this year when it was being held so close to home. He spoke of the Mission which will open here on May 29 by the Ascension Fathers. He urged the parents to have the family rosary in the home, and concluded his remarks with words of congratulation for Mrs. Black and Mrs. Forestell on the success of the play presented on Monday evening by the Sodality, and on behalf of the League. Mrs. Bernard Hughes then offered a vote of thanks.

The program consisted of a piano selection by Mrs. Ernest Shannon, a reading "The Miracle of the Rose", by Mrs. Sandham, and a reading by Mrs. Rose Flanders, entitled "Ladder to Heaven". A few games were enjoyed after which delicious refreshments were served by the executive and the meeting came to a close.

Fertile Period Days Outlined

Los Angeles, May 20 (AP) — A research scientist's advice to couples who want children but can't seem to have them:

On the broad average, women are most fertile on the 11th, 12th and 13th days of the menstrual cycle, counting forward from the day the menstrual period starts. They are in the most likely state after five days of abstinence.

The scientist is Raymond J. Farris, executive director of the Wistar Institute, Philadelphia.

Dr. Farris said the male is more frequently sterile than the female.

Extensive tests conducted by Farris and his staff indicate only 40 per cent of males in the United States are likely fertile.

Among women with cycles of 24 to 35 days, only 25 per cent should be fertile from days nine to 19, and 50 per cent from days 11 to 13 inclusive. The average cycle is 28 days. Farris said these fertile periods have been confirmed by surgery, direct examination and artificial insemination.

Fertility, apparently, does not decline with age in men, but women encounter difficulties with the approach of the menopause.

Farris estimated that 10 to 15 per cent of couples in the United States are involuntarily childless, "a major factor in divorce and other domestic problems."

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

Colonel Bolovitch bowed low over my hand, kissed it.

"I'm happy to have you here in Russia," I said.

"Izzato," he said, smiling pleasantly. His mask began to slip—pretty, dark-eyed little woman.

"His wife," the interpreter said.

She looked eagerly around, eyes on me, and to the lifting room. "Oooooh!" she exclaimed, seeing the piano. She rushed over to it and began playing haughtily, like one who had been denied the opportunity for a long while. That took care of her.

"Colonel Kolovitch and Mrs. Kolovitch," the interpreter said, separating a middle-aged man and a heavier, chunky woman from the group at the door. I bowed. They bowed. Nothing ironic. Everything sincere. Mrs. Bolovitch.

"Colonel Dolovitch and Mrs. Dolovitch," the interpreter said next. Someway, it reminded me of calling out stops on a suburban train. We bowed. Colonel Dolovitch had Mrs. Dolovitch stood their ground.

"Miss de Luce," the interpreter said, pulling a young girl forward by her hand. She smiled.

"So glad to meet you," she said in the sibilants of a French woman. I nodded.

The interpreter, his work begun, ushered her and the Dolovitches into the living room where Robbie was loading up the record changer with Shostakovitch against the time when Mrs. Bolovitch ran down.

Roger arrived with his girl, a secretary in Colonel Cartwright's office. Colonel and Mrs. Cartwright didn't appear until after we had time to digest—or at least swallow—the Russians.

I thinking my best chance to make myself understood lay in talking to Colonel Bolovitch who, according to Roger, spoke some English, moved over next to him. He greeted me with a warm smile his dark-brown eyes about as though he were filled with inner fire and longed for the words to express it.

"We had planned to have this party in our garden," I said.

"Izzato."

"Yes. But the rain changed our plans."

"Izzato."

"Roger thought our barbecue would interest you."

At the word Roger Colonel Bolovitch glanced in his direction. He said, "Izzato."

"We don't have rain in August very often," I said.

"Izzato."

"I imagine Russia and Montana have much the same climate."

"Izzato."

"Yes . . . Though I've never been to Russia."

"Izzato."

"I'd like to go," I added brightly. Roger kept telling me that if I were polite enough to the Russians, they might invite me to come to see them after the war.

"Izzato."

A statistic may be able to play an entire concert on one string, but I'd like to meet the woman who can maintain a conversation interminably on Izzato.

Perhaps it was the cocktail, perhaps it was hostessly duty. I began again, "English is hard to learn," I said.

"Izzato."

"Yes, everyone says so."

"Izzato."

"Roger—" here Colonel Bolovitch looked again in Roger's direction "—tells me you are making great progress in learning our language."

I looked around for help. Colonel Bolovitch and I were holding a scintillating conversation, no doubt about that, but any minute I might resort to asking questions. Then what? Colonel Cartwright moved away from the piano by the piano and over toward us.

I didn't clutch Colonel Cartwright's arm like a drowning sailor clutches a life raft, but I did take hold of him. "I think it's wonderful how Colonel Bolovitch understands English," I said.

"Is that so?" Colonel Cartwright said.

We were half through dinner, those of us we weren't interpreting, when . . . Colonel Kolovitch proposed a toast to Russo-American friendship.

Colonel Bolovitch proposed a toast to his host and hostess, according to the word-weary interpreter.

Colonel Dolovitch toasted the American Army.

Miss de Luce toasted the American home.

Robbie toasted our guests.

Roger toasted the Russian Army.

Colonel Cartwright toasted Lend-Lease.

Mrs. Cartwright toasted Great Falls.

Roger poured wine. The interpreter took another gulp. Colonel Dolovitch what a pity it was we hadn't simply got down to business the first thing and then ordered unadorned barbecue, because as soon as we left the table the guests asked themselves on the floor and, in the Esperonto of dice and craps.

Robbie said to Colonel Bolovitch, throwing down a silver dollar, "I'll fade you."

"Izzato," replied the Colonel.

"That's a no," said Robbie. Only he didn't.

At 11 o'clock Roger turned on the radio. The announcer's voice blared forth: "Ambassador William H. Standley, in reply to Stalin's statement that the Red Army alone is bearing the whole weight of the war, said tonight, and I quote: 'I have carefully looked for admission in the Russian press that the Russians receive material aid from America, yet I have failed to find any real acknowledgment of it.' "

At the word Stalin, the Russians transferred their attention from the dice to the radio. At the recurring word Russian, they looked more and more interested.

Though heretofore the interpreter had translated any and all conversation glibly, this time he struggled for words. Colonel Bolovitch spoke peremptorily. The interpreter, a far from happy-looking man, did his duty.

Colonel Bolovitch rose from the floor. So did Colonel Kolovitch and Colonel Dolovitch. They lent their arms to their ladies. Gravely, all straightening the fire in Colonel Bolovitch's eyes cut and the ashes cold, they shook hands with Robbie and me and went home. The interpreters and Miss de Luce accounted them, mumbling gracious thanks as they sidled out the door, over on the Russians and one on us. Colonel Cartwright and Mrs. Cartwright and Roger and his guest left directly after.

I was still in the kitchen when Roger returned. "Well, anyway," he said lamely, "Roger had a good time until the radio was turned on."

"Izzato," I said bitterly.

The party was not a total loss, possibly Colonel Cartwright felt he had to make some concrete return for the evening, for, like an amoeba, Roger's silver bar split in half and made two.

With his captain's bars, Roger also got leave to go home. "Mary would be a good deal of help to you in this big house," he said, solicitous as always of my welfare. "I think I should bring her back with me." (Bill's and the guest room were at the moment unoccupied.) Then, as usual, Roger tipped his hand. "My bitter half and two public enemies have visited my mother about long enough. Both of them are getting quite restless. I've got to do something about it." He considered this for a moment, then, with a sudden saddening it, for he knit his black brows and stated flatly to the room window, "We could manage here very nicely with you and The Little Man. You'd like Mary," he concluded, temptingly.

Whether I'd like Mary or I wouldn't like Mary was entirely beside the point. What I wouldn't like would be shooting sides and having Robbie and me lodging and at the mercy of Roger's inventor, bald on the round side, with a spare chin, and he said Ike was 56 years old—was only child, a boy of 14, was in boarding school in Massachusetts and Molly had rented her house furnished in order to gypsy around the country with Ike and Junior. Gypsy was the word she used, and its use marked her as a woman of perspicacity.

Saturday night, Robbie and I were guests of the Cappers at the Officers' Club dance, and it was while tripping the light fantastic with Major that he asked, whether I'd ever been up in a B-17.

"I'm taking Molly up tomorrow. Would you like to go?"

Would I like to go!

Major said he could sign in a wife, or mother, or both, and since Molly would be gone, he meant I'd have to be Mrs. Capper, Sr., for the flight. Gallantly, he regretted it was not possible to sign in a sister. I agreed to be Momma—in fact, thinking of myself smugly, thinking of the loud guffaw which would greet my introduction as the mother of this balding middle-aged man.

It was a clear, fair day in February; the sky was as blue as bluebells and the snow had melted off the road. Major introduced Molly as his wife, Mrs. John Capper, Jr. The attending staff said, "Howdedo" and showed her the dotted line. I got ready to grin in acknowledgment of the game we were playing. Fortunately I didn't grin, for never have I seen more polite and formal good-byes than those young officers when Major Capper said, "And this is my mother, Mrs. John Capper." I was prepared to quip that I had been a child bride of India, but I had no preparation for their deadpan acceptance of me as the mother of this very mature matron.

When the tower signaled for us to take off, Molly and I were standing, one behind each pilot, wearing earphones, listening to instructions from the tower, studying the instrument panel as though it weren't Sanskrit.

Safely up, we raised the trap door, dropped to the level below, crawled into the blister at the nose of the ship, picked up the earphones there and tuned in on a Sunday broadcast while we watched the earth slide by beneath.

I learned that Montana is pocked with small lakes and water holes; that strip farming in winter looks like giant zebra skins staked out to dry, with stripes running parallel for a distance, then shooting off at crazy angles as though for leg or neck.

The wings tipped, one side and then the other. That was our signal to report. We scrambled up through the hatch and took our places, like lackeys, behind the pilots.

"Where do you want to go?" the Major shouted above the roar of the motors.

"Glacier Park," I shouted, pointing ahead to the shining mountains. He tipped the wings slightly to say "Roger" and, to my consternation, let go his controls, took the earphones from his head, hacked out of his place, and motioned me to sit down.

"NO!" I shouted. "Not me, NO!"

Molly prodded from behind, the co-pilot nodded encouragingly, and Major pushed me into his vacant chair. He held the earphones while he pointed to the instrument panel. "See that line?" he shouted. "Just keep the level true to it." He pointed to a simple gauge which had a stationary line running across it. A few dots indicated the angle of the ship's position in relation to the horizon. When the ship was on absolutely even keel, it fell into position with the stationary line.

He pointed to the pedals on which he now placed my feet, pressing down first with the left a little, which dipped the port wing slightly, and then with the right, which dipped the starboard wing. "See how easy?" he shouted. Before I could draw breath to shout "NO," he grabbed the wheel and, pushing it down, pitched the plane straight for the earth. Raising it, he righted the ship. "Easy, isn't it?" he shouted. "All you have to know. Now, let's see you fly 'er." He placed the earphones over my head and to my ears. Then he backed away.

My feet were glued to the pedals, my hands to the wheel, my eyes to the level, and my tongue to the roof of my mouth. I held that frozen position for what seemed an eternity.

Gradually I realized I was not falling out of the sky, that the ship was behaving beautifully, that I was not dead. I relaxed a little, then a little more. Finally I was able to look around.

Molly was sitting on the floor, her back against the bulkhead, her feet braced against the opposite wall, her hands clasped around her knees. She looked as though she were sitting in a rocking chair. Her face was serene.

"Why, it is easy!" I thought. So easy that I leaned to the port window and looked down. Simultaneously the ship veered to that side. I screamed and pressed hard on the right pedal. We tilted to starboard. Frantic, I screamed again, sure Major had not heard me the first time. I pulled up the wheel to gain altitude, for we were flying right by left like a kite gone crazy. I couldn't balance the pedals and the level at the same time. Anyway, my eyes were bulging out so far that I couldn't have read it had the mark been true. Terrified, I gripped the wheel and screamed again. We did a nose dive. Earth rose to meet us. I closed my eyes and waited for the end.

Hands lifted the phones from my ears. I heard laughter.

"I don't see why it had not occurred to me that the co-pilot was in control, but it hadn't, I was certain the fate of the ship and of all of us was in my inexperienced and terror-stricken hands. And I was furious at Major. When I could work paralyzed cords, I shouted to ask why we hadn't been warned me so. "You looked too complacent," he shouted, "sitting there gazing out of the side window."

As soon as the cones solidified my legs, I was ready to descend again to the plastic nose of the plane from which vantage point the view is unobstructed.

Major was flying over Glacier Park. Below us, mountain peaks skimmed past our vision; one second we were over a low flat valley bisected by a silver string of water; the next, a sheer peak nudged us. Lakes, hidden in the fastness of secluded crevices, passed beneath us. Even eagles' nests were visible.

The Cappers were getting their first look at it, and I was trying to make this bird's-eye sight conform to my usual bug's-eye view. It wouldn't conform. Viewed from the air, all height was gone, all sense of towering peaks lost. They were smoothed out, as in the occasional flash of Land Ho drawn beneath us, too near for comfort, and the next minute a valley fix thousands of feet below.

It was thrilling to fly in a vertebrate plane, and I was also thrilled when we approached the base again. We had covered five hundred miles as the crow flies in two hours.

After lunch the insatiable Cappers invited Rob and me to go for a drive with them in their car. I accepted, but Rob preferred to stay home. Then the Major asked again, "Where to?"

The day had remained sunny and warm; the shiny mountains still beckon me. "How about Glacier Park? You'll get a different aspect from the ground."

I had missed that sense of grandeur and wanted to have the Cappers think that what they'd seen was IT.

Major stepped o nthe throttle. The speedometer indicated ninety miles an hour. I reminded Major of the new limit that had been imposed because of gas and tire shortages. He winked. "A uniform is a great fixer."

"Evidently you haven't heard of this police magistrate. He doesn't fine speeders; he puts them in jail."

Major looked at me understandingly, appreciating that civilian couldn't know about the Judge Advocate Department.

We sped along the highway, the great saw teeth of snow mountains growing larger by the mile. The needle registered 100. We didn't seem to be going fast, not much faster than in the plane earlier that day. The road was smooth and clear of traffic. In spite of many miles of winding road, we clicked off 150 miles to the Entrance Hotel in two and a half hours flat. For the first time since I'd lived in Montana I'd done what I had expected we'd do quite often on pleasant Sundays: drive to the Park for dinner. There were hundreds of people in Great Falls who had never been there at all.

Pitcher Kennedy, Giant Hurler, Rated Best Since Carl Hubbell 'Southpawed' Team to Fame

By RALPH RODEN
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

New York Giants are beginning to reap some dividends from the $25,000 they shelled out for pitcher Monita Kennedy in 1940.

After years of frustration Kennedy is making that price tag look cheap with some of the slickest pitching by a Giant lefthander since the days of King Carl Hubbell.

So far this season, Kennedy has turned in four victories, one more than he recorded for the Giants last year.

Kennedy pitched the Giants to undisputed possession of first place in the National League Friday with the finest performance of his career, a 5-0, two-hit triumph over the ambitious Cincinnati Reds.

The 27-year-old southpaw faced only 29 batters, walked none, fanned two and retired the last 14 Reds in order.

Ted Kluszewski beat out a roller in the third inning and Ahmad Rhodes singled to left in the fifth for the lone Cincinnati blows.

The Giants decided the game in the first inning, scoring three runs after Howell Fox disposed of the first two hitters. Two walks and a single did the damage.

Pittsburgh helped the Giants attain the lead by nosing out Brooklyn 2-1 in the only game that both clubs shared the top rung with the Giants at the day's start, 3-1, under the lights at Pittsburgh.

Rookie Bill Werle, outpitched another recruit, Bob Hall, to post his third victory for the Pirates.

St. Louis Cardinals turned back Brooklyn Dodgers 6-3 behind the steady nine - hit pitching of Red Munger to halt their three game losing streak.

The Red Birds clinched it in the seventh when Enos Slaughter knocked a three - run double off big Don Newcombe who was making his major - league bow after being brought up from the Ist (ers).

Philadelphia crept to within a half - game of the American League's second place Detroit Tigers as Joe Coleman bested the Tigers' Hal Newhouser, 2-1, in a 10-inning duel.

A sparkling catch by Elmer Valo of a George Kell drive with the bases loaded and two down in the 10th saved Coleman's bide.

Coleman, after striking out the half of them to Newhouser, and fanned nine.

Al Papai's knuckle ball was no puzzle to the Washington Senators who pounded his offerings for six hits and five runs in three innings in beating the St. Louis Browns 5-3 at Washington.

The scheduled games between the Chicago White Sox and New York Yankees, the Cleveland Indians and the Boston Red Sox and the Philadelphia Phillies and the Chicago Cubs were postponed because of rain.

Adverse Conditions, Solunar Tables Spoil Fishing Trip

By JOHN ALDEN KNIGHT
Model Spoonhunter Author and Creator of Solunar Tables

Any fisherman will tell you that fish don't bite every day. If conditions aren't right, there is little that a man can do about convincing them that they should disregard Nature's warnings and feed anyway.

Simply because your Solunar Tables list a major feeding period at eight o'clock in the morning, it does not necessarily follow that you will have good fishing at that time. There are many things that can and do upset the schedule.

We know that a fish's appetite will usually spoil the fishing. Just let the glass become a little unsteady and drop a few points, and the fish are quite apt to go on a hunger strike. A falling barometer is Nature's warning that there is rough weather ahead, and the fish arrange their lives according to Nature's rules.

Temperature Inversion

Worse is our set of conditions that really wrecks the fishing now and then. Why it should do so is still anybody's guess, but the fact remains that it is so. The Weather Bureau boys call it a temperature inversion. That's another way of saying that the air temperature is higher than the water temperature. It is a rare thing to find good fishing during a temperature inversion.

The ideal temperature arrangement is for the air temperature to be about fifteen degrees higher than the water temperature. Then the fish will go about business as usual unless something else is radically wrong. But just let that ratio be upset or reversed and fish will refuse to be cooperate.

Only last week I encountered an excellent example of this condition in central Pennsylvania. The day itself was beautiful and blue sky, sparkling water under bright sunshine—but the wind came down from the north and the air was chilly.

My thermometer showed me that the water was fifty-two degrees and the air temperature to be forty-one. A few trout rose to the drifting hatch of flies during the late morning Solunar Period, but the activity was short-lived and soon the placid surfaces of the people were unruffled anything save an occasional breeze.

My two companions stood around and shivered for a while, then called it a day. They wanted me to come home with them, but I was positive I wanted to see what would happen during the afternoon Solunar Period if temperature conditions remained as they were.

In the sunny lee of a building on top of a high bank I could take my ease in the soft grass and keep reasonably warm. For four hours I sat there and watched the stream. There was a good hatch of flies over the water, but they drifted safely on the surface, undisturbed by feeding fish.

When the major feeding period came in just as the sun came close to the top of the mountain across the valley. Before me, up near the foot of the riffle, a trout rose and took a drifting insect. Then another and another, until there were five feeding fish, rising and taking flies systematically.

This continued for perhaps twenty minutes, then the symptoms of feeding fish gradually diminished until there was not one disturbed putting in his periodic appearance. This fish fed for perhaps five minutes after the others had stopped. Then he, too, stayed down and the pool was quiet once more.

A glance at my thermometer, which was standing in the shade around the corner of the building, showed an unchanged 52 and thirty-one. Satisfied, I packed my gear in the car and started home.

Handy Address

I drove along the road which winds down through the valley, the realization was brought home to me once more that the Solunar Tables are a mighty handy adjunct in any sportsman's equipment.

The conditions that day had been definitely adverse and the fishing had been almost non-existent. But I had fish in one pool about a dozen feeding fish, seven during the major Solunar Period and five during the late afternoon Solunar Period. At no other time had I seen a fish rise in the vicinity.

Had I wished to subject my aging shanks to the refrigeration of air and water, no doubt I could have caught some fish. As it was, I caught one, this merely to make sure I had not spoiled the hatch of flies correctly. Without the Solunar Tables I might have had to find my fishing through guesswork. With them, I could be sure that I would find the best pool which that day had to offer.

Believe me, it pays to keep by track of the daily Solunar Periods.

Redwing Hurler Appears Headed For Majors

Ery Dusak, who gained quite a reputation as a minor league pitcher in 1941, is trying a comeback start with Rochester Red Wings in his bid to crack the majors again—this time as a pitcher.

Dusak, who acquired the nickname of "Four Sack" because of his home-run feats at Mobile in 1941, played the infield and outfield for St. Louis Cardinals the last three seasons but did not live up to minor league batting reputation.

Towards the end of last season Dusak tried his hand at pitching and continued to work at the trade in spring training.

The Cards sent Dusak to their Rochester International League farm for polishing and the former slugger has come up with two victories in his first two tries.

Friday night he came up with a four-hit 5-0 shutout over Clem Hausmann and Buffalo Bisons. He was a little wild, walking six. But he also fanned six.

Russ Derry hit his ninth homer of the season for Rochester in the seventh inning.

The victory enabled the Wings to maintain their virtual second-place berth, being three points behind the league pace of the leading Jersey City Giants.

Monday's 20 - percentage points ahead of the Wings, trounced Toronto Maple Leafs 11-1. The Royals broke the game wide open with seven runs in the ninth. Kermit Wahl, Chuck Connors, George Schmees and Lamar Bridges homered for the Royals. Dan Bankhead went the distance for Montreal and posted his third victory. Johnny Welaj homered in the ninth for Toronto's run.

Towering Hi Lee Wins Over Ponderous Pole Talum With Two Straight Decisions

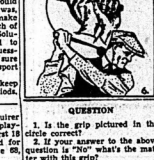
By NORMAN LYNCH

A rather short, sharp and snappy wrestling bout was staged last night when 320 pound Hi Lee took a decision over Wladyslaw Talun in two straight falls.

It took the big hunk of muscle from the Ozark Mountains only 12 minutes to down the Iron Pole. Things started to get a little hot though when Talun tried to do his fighting outside of the ring but referee Ernie Powers of Hamilton decided that he had had enough of these shenanigans and disqualified Talun.

Lee came back again after the first onslaught and like a short order cook made short order of Talun when he whipped up a Boston crab hold.

The semi-final bout was more in par with a spectators idea of good wrestling when Dan O'Connor took a decision over Bulldog Drummond with a body slam in 32 minutes.



Bulldog Drummond was substituted for Art Brady, put all he had into the grappling effort but the husky handsome Friday showed a little more class and he took a clean cut decision over Drummond.

In the opener Frank Slack had to be good, which he was in every respect, to defeat the hostile Frank Valois in a rough and tumble bout.

Slack staged a good battle with Valois who resorted to the meanest type of tactics in an attempt to overthrow "Frankie Boy." After a roaring rip snorting 25 minute struggle Slack won referee Fox's decision with a series of monkey flips.

QUESTION

1. Is the grip pictured in the circle correct?

2. If your answer to the above question is "No" what's the matter with this grip?

3. In what two ways do you weld the hands together so that they act as one?

4. How many knuckles of the left hand should you be able to see when the club is gripped in the address position?

5. Should the left hand be opened or closed at the top of the backswing?

Now that you've written your answers, check them with these.

ANSWERS

1. No.

2. The thumb of the left hand instead of being exposed as shown, should be concealed by the right hand. The left thumb should be pressing against the shaft.

3. (a) By overlapping the little fingers of the right hand on the forefinger of the left hand. (b) By pressing the thumb of the left hand against the shaft with the palm of the right hand.

4. Three knuckles.

5. Closed and it is extremely important that this detail be observed at all times.

6. Let's have an examination covering the previous articles discussing the grip.

Maple Leafs May Sponsor Juvenile Team

Toronto, May 21 (CP)— Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League have offered to sponsor a juvenile league in Timmins, managing director Conn Smythe announced Friday night.

"We are interested in sponsoring an organization similar to Boston Bruins' set-up in St Catharines," he said.

(The Bruins sponsor both junior and juvenile teams in the Lincoln County City).

Bob Crowley, manager of Maple Leaf arena at Schumacher, said in Timmins that the four teams in the league would be forced to pay $600 each for playing, and practice time next season if the league plan is not accepted.

It was reported the four teams would meet in Timmins Monday to consider the Leafs' offer.

Bobby Locke Determined to "Show Them"

By CHARLES WELSH

Philadelphia, May 21 (AP) — Bobby Locke set out today to prove he is the best professional golfer not invited to the P.G.A. tournament, and probably superior to any who will compete in the big event.

The big, soft-spoken South African wasn't saying much about what his hands under a ruling by the United States Professional Golf Association in banning him from playing in the P.G.A. next week at Richmond, Va.

But the signs are apparent he is burned to a dark brown crisp. He went so far as to say, for publication, that he considered the decision "very discourteous."

With the "I'll show them" possibility as an added incentive, Locke reckoned he was a rugged competitor for the remainder of the sixth annual $15,000 Inquirer invitational golf tournament ended here. At the end of the first 18 holes Thursday he was tied for the lead with a comfortable four-under par.

Rain washed out Friday's scheduled second round and forced a program change to 18 holes of play today and two rounds tomorrow.

With a single exception the rest of the field which includes most of the top United States golf stars will have to catch Bobby to best him.

The exception is Joe Kirkwood, Jr., Hollywood movie actor and manufacturer of the only other first-round 68.

Locke, whose home is in Johannesburg, is a member of the British P.G.A. And he says the failure of the United States organization to invite him to the tourney ignores the "understanding" between the two associations.

"American pros playing in British are made honorary members of the British P.G.A.," Locke said. "This is the first time I have competed in the United States and I have not been given that advantage of honorary membership in the United States P.G.A."

Locke did compete in the 1947 P.G.A. championship at Detroit his first season in this country. He failed to survive a first-round match with Henry Ransome, Chicago, in the P.G.A. tourney.

Last year he was not invited to the P.G.A. event at St. Louis, and one association member confirmed here today that the association executive board voted 8 to 3 this year to ban Locke at Richmond.

New Boxing Combine Lists Three Fights

By MURRAY ROSE

New York, May 31. (AP)—Hockey's supremacy will be decided by the power of its muscles today as it indefinitely listed three championship fights for June and September in as many cities.

Two of the Yankee Stadium, and the Polo Grounds here, will present Joseph Louis, the New York-Chicago-Detroit kid virtually tied up world middleweight and welterweight title fights to go with his heavyweight championship show between Round Charley and Jersey Joe Walcott in Chicago June 22.

The two world-title scraps will send the middleweight champion Marcel Cerdan of France against Jake La Motta of Detroit, June 18 and welterweight King Ray Robinson against Kid Gavilan of Cuba in the polo grounds, either June 11 or 25.

Thus the pattern of boxing's new golden shower itself as the most powerful 20th Century Sporting Club and the two-year old syndicate of champions folded their tents.

Allied for close working agreements are the Madison Square Garden Corporation which brought out Mike Jacobs' 20th Century B.C. and the "21" Club of Tex and Joe Louis' International Sporting Club which will promote the Charles-Walcott contest. The I.B.C. also controls the Detroit Olympia and various other arenas around the country.

Mitch Loukas, who stages fights in the Olympia, will be the match promoter of the Cerdan-La Motta tilt.

Only a slim crowd of 6,814 (gross $16,338) was present Friday night at Mike Jacobs' debut staged in final show in the Garden. Robert Villemain of Montreal outfought his way to a 10-round decision over Pete Mead of Grand Rapids, Mich., in the main event.

Amateur Hockey Players Treated Fairly—McFadyen

Alex Hughes of Ottawa, who three years ago contacted poliomyelitis which affected his left leg, Friday won his second championship at the annual Trinity College School track and field meet at Port Hope, Ont.

The six-foot track star piled up 21 points, three more than second-place Bruce Little at Quebec city. Hughes, who won the junior cup in 1946, broke his own record in winning the javelin throw and also took the discus and shot-put events.

Tied for second place in the individual standings were R. P. Munks of Hamilton and R. B. McDermont of Port Hope. McDermont established new records in the broad jump and discus throws. J. A. Dolph of Galt, beat the old mark in the 800-yard junior run.

J. J. (Tiny) McFadyen, of Galt, President of the Ontario Hockey Association, maintains that amateur hockey players are also treated unjustly.

Speaking at a hockey banquet in Peterborough, at which the O.H.A. Senior B trophy was presented to Peterborough Legionnaires he said:

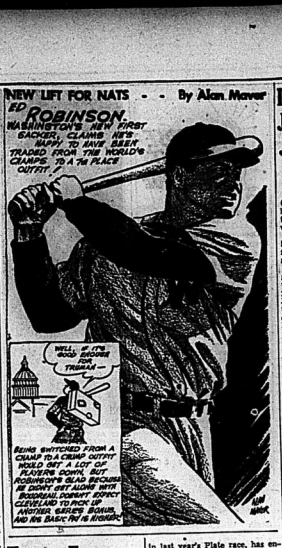
"If a boy gets up to play professional hockey and then wishes to return to amateur, his application is sent to Clarence Campbell, National Hockey League President. Campbell then checks around to see if he can't be fitted into some pro spot. Failing this, he is reinstated in amateur.

"But a signed contract must be observed as long as the association protects its players but naturally we cannot void a signed professional contract."

Fred W. Hooper's Olympia, leader at one mile in the Kentucky Derby, and crippin Ogleby's Noble Impulse, who towed the field past the wire first in the Preakness, will hook up at Belmont Park Saturday afternoon in a race covering exactly that distance. The two speed boys are among the top thoroughbreds selected by their owners today to start in the 74th running of the Withers Stakes, a Belmont fixture for three-year-olds carrying $25,000 in added money.

Although nominated, neither Calumet's Ponder, the derby surprise, nor Greentree's Cahot, the Preakness victor, will try the Withers. Their owners obviously prefer to point them for the $75,000 Belmont Stakes June 11 at 1½ miles.

From Boston comes word that pitcher Bob Feller was taken off the starting staff of Cleveland Indians Friday and assigned—at least temporarily, to bullpen duty. In his place on the world champion's big four, Manager Lou Boudreau put rookie Mike Garcia, a promising rookie with a record of two wins and one loss.



Feller has been complaining of an ailing shoulder all season. He lost his first game, then won one, and dropped his last two.

Jimmy Outlaw, Detroit Tiger utility infielder-outfielder who was given his unconditional release, has been sold to Sacramento of the Pacific Coast League the baseball management announced Friday.

Twenty-Four Horses Start In Plate Trial

Toronto, May 31 (CP)—Barring rain, picturesque Woodbine track will be lightning-fast today when 24 Canadian-bred three-year-olders run up for next Saturday's classic $10,000-added King's Plate.

The Plate trial, which serves as an elimination race for the blue-ribbon event, will be run as usual in two divisions with 12 starters in each. Purse for each section is $2,500-added.

Two fast three-year-olds, E. P. Taylor's Epic and W. J. Fewster's Sun Bomber, will be making their first appearance under silks. Epic, a colt by Jimmy Lawless out of Fairy Imp, will probably rule as public favorite in the first division, while George McCullagh's speedy Irish is the winter-book favorite in the second.

Another top contender is the first-starting trial sprint is John Stuart's Bunty Lou, which picked up jockey Jacking when the colt turned in a 1:35 workout over the mile-and-a-furlong King's Plate distance.

The highly-rated brown filly Bolaris will probably make the first-division race a close contest.

F. P. Law's Elmbrook Joe was withdrawn from the trial late Friday night, and Grandebem, a second-division entry, was scratched.

Speedy Irish faces stern opposition from two other top Canadian-bred fillies—Willie Morrey's Gem Thief and H. R. Bain's good filly Graydon Tina.

All entries run under the same weight conditions as in the King's plate—119 pounds with a five-pound allowance for fillies.

Big Jim Fair of Cainsville, Ont., whose hard-running colt Last Mark picked up the $11,000 purse and the King's 50 guineas in last year's Plate race, has entered Set Field and Regan Lad in this year's 90th running of the historic event.

The Plate trial is the only race the thoroughbreds may run on three-year-olds before the running of the classic.

Derby Offers Jinx-Ridden Jock Another Try

By MICHAEL O'MARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Epsom, Surrey, England, May 31 (CP)—Will this—after a heartbreaking quarter-century—be the year Gordon Richards finally wins the Derby?

That's the question that's keeping race fans awake as they wait for Derby Day, June 4, to roll round.

Once again the 45-year-old gamecock with the hands of iron will be up on the favorite. This year it's Lt.-Col. R. MacDonald Buchanan's Royal Forest, pride of the potent Beckampton, Wiltshire stable of trainer Noel Murless. Royal Forest rules a 9-3 choice to take Britain's premier racing prize over the twisting, tying 1½-mile course of Epsom's historic Downs.

But Gordon—pursued relentlessly by an Epsom jinx—has had Derby favorites falter and fail him on four occasions confident this time.

Cruellest ill-luck came in 1941. Gordon was to ride the 25-50-1 shot Owen Tudor but a broken leg sidelined him shortly before the classic. Over the radio he heard Owen Tudor come home by 1 1-2 lengths.

Richards' fans, also, will never forget the bitterness of Derby Day, 1947, when Gordon, up on "The horse of the century" Tudor Minstrel, hottest public choice in many years at 4 to 7, turned in the unluckiest performance in the book to wind up a well-whipped fourth when the big colt finished to stay.

There can't be many more Derbys left for the bushy-browed, tight-lipped veteran who has won more races than any other jocker in history—he started this season with 3,705 and already has added more than 50 to his lifetime total —and is shooting for his 22nd British Jockeys' championship in 25 years.

Perhaps the best chance he'll have before he quits will come next month aboard the sturdy-bred son of Bois Roussel, 1938 Epsom victor. Barring one hiccup in his juvenile year, Royal Forest has won unbroken every time he's seen a race course to date, and won't appear in public again before the Derby.

But Gordon's mount takes the track fresh, say the experts, will win in a canter. If not, the finger points to Lord Derby's strongly-built two-year-old, Chanteur, second choice at 5-1.

Anything can happen in a horse race over the rolling, rugged Downs. But just about every sportsman in Britain has a sentimental hope that 1949 will enter the record books as "the year that Gordon won the Derby."

Sport Shorts From Britain

By SHAUN McQUILLAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 31 — (CP)—The Marquess of Queensberry aimed a slap at British boxing and impressario Jack Solomons doesn't like the feel of it.

The man whose grandfather framed the Queensberry rules of boxing, was pessimistic about "the game" when he reached Fremantle, Australia, on a visit recently.

He said:

"My grandfather would be disgusted with present - day boxing if he were alive. Rank commercialism has ruined the professional sport.

"English boxing is not reviving. We have not a decent boxer, even including Freddie Mills and Bruce Woodcock. Boxers appear today to be interested only in money."

Mills is world light heavyweight champion and Woodcock British heavyweight kingpin.

Promoter Solomons retorted:

"Ridiculous. We have three world champions in Europe, two of them in the British Isles. Boxing is certainly reviving and there is no evidence that commercialism is ruining the sport. Boxers must be paid, and the big ones demand big money."

Here is the quality of Britain's boxers Solomons said:

"Mills is world champion, and best Gus Lesnevich for the title. Lesnevich is regarded in America as one of the cleverest boxers for many years, and both Mills and Woodcock has beaten him."

British athletic x

British athletic fans will be seeing E. (Black Bullet) McDonald Bailey back on the track this June.

The Negro sprinter from Trinidad, who finished last in the '48 Olympic Games 100-metres final, now is in Iceland combining business with athletic coaching.

He plans to return to England to resume his running and polytechnic Harriers. Writing to friends he said the Icelandic winter treated him kindly compared with English weather.

"My chilblains all disappeared the moment we arrived," he said. Chilblains were always Mac's major grouse against the British climate.

Fred Daly, British 1947 Open Golf Champion, has just finished an instructional book on the game.

"It should be out just before the Open," he said, "so as to give some of the other boys an idea of how to win it."

The Movie Column

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 21 (AP)—Let's see if I can tell you something you don't know about Hollywood.

I am going to give you some odd and who knows interesting facts about Hollywood... Don't stop me if you've heard them before; to me this is a living.

Did you know that Zasu Pitts pronounces it Zay-Zee, not Zazoo. (And watch your spelling of Joel McCrea and Gordon Macrae) ... that Greer Garson, though famed as Mrs. Miniver, is Irish, not English ... that Sam Goldwyn was never connected with the operation of Metro-Goldwyn Mayer...

Bible Student!

That one Russell is an avid student of the Bible—honest!... that Clifton Webb was famed as a dancer long before he started baby-sitting ... that John Laird was a successful radio writer before he switched to ham (yes, an actor who can write!)....

That Betty Hutton's real name is Betty Jane Thornburg ... that Lizabeth Scott's is Emma Moitzas ... that Clark Gable's first name is William ... that my friend O'Harra's last handle is really Flinnimons ... that my real name is Bob Thomas...

That United Artists is the only film company that doesn't take movies (it releases 'em) ... that Lucille Ball was once a Goldwyn girl ... that James Stewart is the only top male star who has never married (too shy to ask?) No Studio 13

That Danny Kaye got early training as a vaudevillian in Passaic... that only three stars have died of the 40 who have won Academy awards — George Arliss, Marie Dressler and Wallace Beery...

That there is no stage 13 at the studios (its called 12A).... that Bing Crosby and Bob Hope aren't buddies in private life.... that the population of Hollywood (actually a part of Los Angeles) is 250,000 ... okay, so you've known these things all along.

The Kibitzer

Opponents in a bridge game are buzzards. Even if you are married to them. They are trying to defeat you. They have the privilege of making bids that are not true. They may do so to fool you.

This does not mean you should consider all their bids untrue. Or even a majority of them. Times are when their bids will give you valuable information. Times are when their bids are a warning.

Such a case is shown in the first play example found in "How's Your Bridge?" by Florence Osburn. It is the deal shown here:

Opening lead from west was the diamond king. A study of the hand reveals that the five heart contract look easy. If declarer can cash his three aces he can afford to lose two spades.

But did you hear the bidding? Indications are that each opponent has a lengthy suit. So, each may also be void in some suit. This, at least, is something that must be considered.

Safer is it to duck the first diamond and permit west to keep the first trick. His second diamond lead can also be ducked by the dummy. This can be safely ruffed by south.

Then the opponent trumps can be pulled and a south spade can be stuffed on the saved diamond ace. Instead of two spades, all the opposition gets is the first diamond and only one spade.

Its author points out that this strategy would fail if opponents were alert. East could ruff his partner's diamond king and return a spade. West could ruff this and sink the contract.

Your partner is not what would have thought of this. Probably too late.

NEXT AT THE RELLE — Jane Wyman and Lew Ayres star in Warner Bros.' Academy-Award winning drama, "Johnny Belinda," opening Tuesday at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL — Sneak attack. Robert Mitchum is unaware of impending danger as Indian "Iron-Eyes" Cody stalks him in RKO Radio's "Blood on the Moon." Mitchum shares stellar honors with Barbara Bel Geddes and Robert Preston in the fury-filled western adventure, starting Monday at the Capitol Theatre for its first Belleville showing. On the same program "Variety Time," with galaxy of stars brings Vaudeville to the screen. Matinee daily at 2.00 p.m.

AT THE McCARTHY — Sonja Henie and her new leading man, Michael Kirby, "discovered" by Sonja for Universal - International, in the new musical romance, now playing at Colonel McCarthy Theatre. The gay romantic comedy co-stars Leif Erikson, Dorothy Hart and Arthur Treacher.

Little Benny's Note Book

Ma was sitting at her desk writing a letter and stopping to bite the end of her fountain pen like somebody not knowing what they want to say or else not knowing how to say it, and I said, Hay ma?

Now if you dont mind, I'd like to con-centrate on this letter, ma said, and I said, But heck, ma, I can jimm-nies, was only going to ask you something.

Ask me later, ma said. Oh dear, this is the hardest letter I ever had to write, ma said, and I said, Why is it, ma? Are you trying to write it in some forrin language? I said.

If I could only get it started, I think I could finish it, ma said, and I said, I was only going to ask you for a stamp, ma.

Ask me for it later, ma said. And she rubbed one side of her face to help her to think, and I said, Heck ma, it mite be too late later. They mite be all gone, I said.

What mite?-ma said. What's all the frantic rush and hussle and hurry for and naked need said, and I said, I want to send for something. I've got the coupons all cut out of the magazine with my name and address on it, so-reddy, so where's the stamp ma? I said.

What is all this you're sending for! ma said, and I said, A free sample of Bubbling Dawn rouge.

Of all the ideas, do you want to go around looking like a silly little girl? ma said, and I said, No mam, I want to go around looking like a wounded pirate or a Indian on the war path, depending on what the fellows are playing. So where is it, ma? I said.

Meaning the stamp, and ma said, It's where it's going to remain.

Being the sad temporary end of the subject.

May as Usual Rings Knell For Some Broadway Plays

By PAT USHER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

New York May 31 (CP)— May is living up to its reputation as a month which rings the death knell for a number of plays on Broadway.

Three plays wound up on May 7 and four the following week-end. One more is scheduled to bow out this Saturday and two finish their runs May 28.

To offset these departures there is one newcomer, "Mr. Adam," based on Pat Frank's breezy novel about atomic radiation, comes to the Royale Theatre next Wednesday.

Departing this weekend is "Light Up the Sky" a comedy by Moss Hart about theatre folk. Leaving May 28 are "The Big Knife," Clifford Odets' play about Hollywood, and "The Silver Whistle" starring Joss Ackland.

The final curtain fell earlier this month on "All Summer Long," "Mrs. Gibson's Boys"; "Private Lives"; "Edward My Son;" "Love Life," "Gaytime," and "Medea."

The last named was booked for a run of only two weeks.

The multiple closings will leave only 19 plays on the boards when June rolls around.

Witty and Bright

George Bernard Shaw's wordy and witty dissertation on women, "Man and Superman," returned to Broadway for a two week engagement at the Cort Theatre and proved to be wickedly bright.

Maurice Evans, of course, is perfect—as always it is. Sharing the spotlight with him is Frances Rowe, whose memory of years long like rola of Ann Whitfield is a source of much enjoyable entertainment.

Also made for a perfect evening's entertainment are Malcolm Keen as Roebuck Ramsden, the stiff and staid Briton who shouts G.B.S. ideas in the best of sadistic cracks; and Josephine Brown as Mrs. Whitfield.

Looking Ahead

A stage adaptation of "Finnegan's Wake" by James Joyce is being planned, it became known this week. Edwin Armstrong, theatre publicist and radio column, "well known, Irish poet, will prepare the stage version of this monumental novel about a day in the lives of a group of Dubliners. The plan is to turn Finnegan's Wake" into a series of dramatic dialogues supported by music, dancing and pantomime. Orson Welles and John Houseman has been assigned the task of staging the production.

Sir Cedric Hardwicke and Lilli Palmer are anxious to appear together next season in a revival of Bernard Shaw's "Ceasar and Cleopatra." The play was last performed on Broadway in 1935 with Lionel Atwill and Helen Hayes in the leading roles.

Late Opening and Closing Of London Theatres Past, Suburbs Set New Fashion

By NORMAN CURRENS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 21. (CP)—The habits of London's theatre-going public, have undergone a complete change since the war. Result is that the hour of late opening and closing in London's West End have gone—perhaps for good.

One reason is that most West End audiences today are suburban dwellers who like to get home early after a show.

"Theatres can no longer depend on the West End for their profits", said Lionel Falck, manager of the Strand Theatre.

Suburban theatre-goers have a routine of their own. The husband leaves his office and meets his wife. Then they have a drink and a meal and then they go direct to a theatre for a seven o'clock performance. The show usually ends at 10 and they are back home by 11.

"These are hard-working times," another theatre manager said, "and people have to be home early. They cannot afford to let the theatre hours of their sleep."

The large restaurant in the Strand keeps open till midnight, but according to the manager there is only a limited trade in after-theatre meals.

"The restaurant is usually half-empty by that time," the manager said. "Our rush hour is between 8 and 7 when people come here for a meal before the theatre. I doubt if we shall ever get back to late habits."

Most theatre performers and theatre staffs say they prefer the post-war routine, as it enables them to lead more or less normal lives. On matinee days there is less "hanging about" between afternoon and evening shows.

Jimmy MacKinnon Never Flinches When Call for Workers Sounds

By HAROLD MORRISON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, May 21 (CP) — He laughs at this, but some friends on Parliament Hill are comparing Jimmy Angus MacKinnon with an old fire-engine horse that's always answering the bell.

The burly, white-haired Senator admits he was a little "surprised" when Prime Minister St. Laurent relieved him of his strenuous stretch as cabinet minister, elevated him to the Upper Chamber and then turned about-face and sounded the alarm.

Now he's saddle sot with one, but three calling posts—Minister Without Portfolio, Trade and Commerce and Mines and Resources. He's held the Trade and Resources portfolios before.

The appointments are only temporary.

Familiar Ground

In the meantime, while Trade Minister Howe and Resources Minister Gibson are on the briefing, Senator MacKinnon will be in his familiar suite on the main floor of the Commons, signing the orders of the departments.

"Actually," says confides Senator MacKibbon, "I'm glad to be back at work in the cabinet, although I've been advised by my doctors to take things easy.

"It was my understandable ambition to become a member of the Upper House. I've had a most interesting and most strenuous term of office as member of the cabinet for the last 10 years."

He was a member of the Commons for 14.

Strain Increasing

"The strain was increasing, when the Senate appointment came. I was relieved and happy. But when I was told that I would continue on as member of the cabinet and take on the additional tasks I was quite satisfied."

Senator MacKinnon says appointing a Senator to take up several jobs in the cabinet is a rare occurrence.

In fact he can't recall "any Senators under the Liberal government who have had the same thing happen to them," except in the case of Senator Wishart Robertson, who's Minister Without Portfolio in the cabinet and at the same time leader of the Liberals in the Upper House.

RUSH STARTED

New Westminster, B.C. (CP)— K. W. Morton, federal district engineer, on his return from Whitehorse and Dawson, says traffic is heavy over the Alaska Highway and that tourists are already arriving at Dawson and other centres along the route.

Shun Poison Ivy— Enjoy the Picnic

It's time for a reminder about poison ivy. Many a day's outing has been spoiled by coming in contact with this plant.

The best preventative measure is to learn to recognize poison ivy and not to picnic on it near it. Although it generally grows as a trailing vine, or as a number of separate plants from small patches of varying thickness and size, it may climb a tree or telegraph pole to a considerable height.

Its leaves are arranged alternately on the woody stem with each leaf bearing three leaflets, which may vary in size, shape, colour or outline, but will always be in threes. Clusters of greenish-yellow fruits about the size of peas develop on poison ivy in some locations and these fruits generally turn white. Poison ivy is the only common plant in Canada having trifoliate leaves and white fruit.

The rash which can prove so distressing to many people is caused by coming into contact with the non-volatile, sticky substance which is on the leaves, stems, roots and remain active on gloves, tools, shoes and picnic baskets for months. Dogs, cats, or even smoke from burning ivy can transmit the substance.

Slugs Can Soon Spoil the Garden

Slugs are the grey, snail-like creatures which eat the leaves of tender vegetables, leaving a slimy trail on the foliage and on the soil beneath the plants. They do not restrict their activities to vegetables, as anyone with a rockery in the garden will know.

They shun daylight and thrive only where there is plenty of moisture. They are most troublesome in rainy seasons, and in lowlying areas of heavy land or where there is a mass of foliage growing close to the ground.

Plants in infested soil may be protected by a thin film of hydrated lime dusted over the foliage and on the ground after the sun has gone down and dewfall has commenced. Hydrated lime is effective only when dry, and for this reason a few applications every three or four days is more effective than one heavy dose. Bordeaux mixture is also repellent to slugs and plants kept covered with the spray will be protected in some measure from attack.

For small gardens, where cost is not as important as under field conditions, baits of metaldyde and bran are satisfactory. They can be bought ready mixed in most seed stores and should be used according to the manufacturers' directions.

200 SEEK TO SHARE IN $4,638,618 ESTATE

New York, May 21 — (AP)— Mary Bullock Powers, who lived a 19th Century life behind the locked doors of a New York hotel before she died last July 20, has been named by two men as their mother. Surrogate Court records identified the men as W. Clay Powers, of Surrey, Hampshire, England, and Raymond Joseph Powers of New York. They are among 200 persons seeking to share in the $4,638,618 estate left by the eccentric 72-year-old woman.

Illustrated Books From Holland Gift Of Gratitude to Canadian Children

By REX KAY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, May 21 (CP) — A giant "Thank You" gift has arrived from The Netherlands for the children of Canada.

Approximately 5,000 copies of a brightly illustrated book entitled "Behind The Dunes and Dykes" now are at The Netherlands Embassy and soon will be in the hands of boys and girls in schools across the Dominion.

The books are from the children of Holland, their way of saying thank you for the pencils, writing paper and other materials sent them by Canadian youngsters.

Money for supplies was raised a year ago in a campaign conducted by the Canadian Council for Reconstruction through the United Nations Educational, Scientific and Cultural organization.

Names of contributing schools were enclosed in the packages sent overseas and once then letters of appreciation have poured into the Dominion from schools throughout the country.

Crayon pictures the children drew themselves inside the covers of "Behind the Dunes and Dykes" have made the copies even more personal.

The book itself was compiled by J. W. Rengelink and translated by R. S.Sotingsett. It contains what The Netherland children want Canadian children to know about themselves.

It tells about wind-mills and how they operate, gives a bit of history of The Netherlands and dispels the idea that the country is solely a land of bulbs and cheese.

"Certainly, we excel in flower-bulbs . . . and we are indeed the land of Dutch cheese . . . but we are more, much more than that," it says.

The book is liberally illustrated with pictures, depicting all sides of Netherlands life. There is one of Canada's former prime minister, Mackenzie King, taken at Amsterdam with Queen Juliana and the royal family of The Netherlands.

Two paragraphs in this 36-page book sum up the havoc which the Germans created when they overran the country in 1940. They end with these words:

"There were Canadian soldiers amongst the first troops who entered Holland as liberators and now again it is the Canadians who are coming to the assistance of our youth."

ISOLATED NORTH GIVEN 17 HOURS OF RADIO DAILY

(By The Canadian Press)

The people who live in Canada's vast northland today are keeping in touch with the outside world better than ever before thanks to the Canadian Army and the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation, who are "beaming" radio entertainment to the shores of the Arctic.

All broadcast schedules now heard in Western Canada are sent over the army's Northwest Territories and Yukon radio system under a recent agreement; between the two services. When you mean red-blooded, that's right.' Wherever there were Socialist governments—Norway, Britain, Sweden, Denmark, New Zealand and Australia—Communists were weak.

Mr. Coldwell said his party deserved credit for social security measures now on the Canadian statutes.

He believed the basic rights of individuals in Canada must be protected by a national labor code along the lines of the Provincial Labor Act now in force in Saskatchewan.

The C.C.F. was not a class movement but unites all those who wish to improve their conditions in life and social security.

It stood only for nationalization of those businesses or institutions which are monopolies or striving to become such. Any company that treated its employees and community in a fair manner should not be socialized.

APPOINTED AS DEACONESS

Miss Marion Daniels, one the city's well known young women, and a recent graduate from the United Church Training School at Toronto, has received the appointment as deaconess to St. Paul's United Church, Orillia, and as assistant to the minister. She will be at home, in Foxboro, to her many friends and acquaintances, until taking up her duties on July 1st, 1949.

Coldwell Says CCF Antidote To Communism

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. John's, Nfld., May 21 (CP)—C.C.F. leader M. J. Coldwell declared Friday night his party "as government or as opposition" would continue to fight "political and democratic means" to prevent expansion of the communists.

Making his first political appearance in this island province he told Newfoundlanders at a public meeting that the C.C.F. in either of these categories and by such means, would "assist our fellowmen to organize co-operatively for their common interest."

He proposed his party as an antidote to Communism and told reporters when asked if there was "Red" influence in the C.C.F.: "If

Canada Desires Christian Peace

Mr. Drew told the rally that Canada above all desired peace, a Christian peace which, he said, would be guaranteed through collective security.

He said that as Premier of Ontario he had occasion to collaborate closely with French-speaking Canadians of Quebec and that, in his opinion, they had come to know them better and truly appreciate them.

Earlier Mr. Drew, who planned to spend today in his own riding of Carleton, spoke in Ottawa, also on a CBC national network. He said Canada's 1948 budget would never go into effect. If the government were returned to power it would introduce an entirely different budget.

He said the budget was offered as a pre-election bribe which the government even refused to honor.

Liberal Policy Criticized

He criticized the government's trade policy. Men with "no practical experience" had been "interfering with trade without authority from parliament."

Mr. Drew said his party is opposed to centralization. He said the present Liberal government, with support of the Socialists, had done everything to concentrate legislative and administrative powers in the hands of federal authorities in Ottawa.

He pledged his party to fight Communism, and promised that a Progressive Conservative government would reduce taxes substantially and immediately while at the same time reducing administrative costs.

Drew Says P-C Party Opposed To Centralization

Mont Joli, Que., May 21 (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, spoke in the language of French-speaking Quebec Friday night in his recent trip to the provinces from the Maritimes in his cross-country election campaign.

He told a party rally in this St. Lawrence River southshore town that the Progressive Conservatives believe "In Canada's sovereignty either of these categories and by such means, would "assist our fellowmen to organize co-operatively for their common interest."

He proposed his party as an antidote to Communism and told reporters when asked if there was "Red" influence in the C.C.F.: "If you mean red-blooded, that's right.' Wherever there were Socialist governments—Norway, Britain, Sweden, Denmark, New Zealand and Australia—Communists were weak.

St. Laurent Seeks Allegiance of French Canadians

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Mont Joli, Que., May 21 (CP)—His campaign rolling on high gear, Prime Minister St. Laurent was back today in the province of Quebec to seek a reward of the allegiance that has made it the key and buttress of 24 years of federal Liberal rule.

He moved out of the Maritimes Friday night after a 5-day campaign for their 27 seats, and promptly told his fellow French-speaking Canadians in Quebec his position is a demonstration that "there is no obstacle because of race in our country."

Heavy Program

He made the statement at Canapeal in Gaspe, when hundreds met his train. It was one of 11 stops he made on the road trek over the 300 miles between Moncton, N.B., and Mont Joli. He spoke 12 times.

Today he is visiting Matane, Mont Joli, and Rimouski. Yesterday he visited the Acadian County of Kent, N.B., and dove on up the coast to Newcastle where he spoke twice. here were train stops at Salhurst and Campbellton.

His talks were informal with neighborly approach. A night he stopped at Causapscal, Amqui, and Cabano and made no long major speeches. He spoke of the mutual responsibilities of Canadians; of the value of their system of government, and of their citizenship.

At Newcastle he spoke 30 minutes of the Liberal record, of his desire for "the widest possible distribution of the good things of life" and of the peace that should stem from the Atlantic pact.

Places Wreath

At Little Rexton, N.B., he placed a wreath on the monument to a native son, former Prime Minister Bonar Law of Britain, and said the fact that both Law and he came out of small villages to achieve fame was a tribute to confestation of democracy in itself, proof that it meant government

Senseless Slaying In Los Angeles

Los Angeles, May 21 (AP)—A 45-year-old unemployed machinist was held on suspicion of murder today in the fatal and apparently pointless shooting of a father of four. Police said the victim was just a stranger passing by.

He killed was William G. Whatley, 37, a musician.

Whatley—who wears a goatee —was on route to a grocery store, police said. He passed a rooming house and dropped a bullet through the stomach.

Police rushed into the rooming house and found Sylvester E. Eaton there, his head in his hands and a gun on the dresser. Police quoted him as saying:

"Yes, I shot him. . . . don't know why. I never saw that man before. I don't know why I shot him except I didn't like his chin whiskers."

Prayers for Rain To Save Forests Answered in Sask.

Winnipeg, May 21 —(CP)— Prayers for rain over the northern Saskatchewan forest fire front were answered Friday night Heavyweight showers of more than went on with the task of battling big surface blazes and smouldering ground fires which have cut huge swaths through timber and bush.

The fire situation across the northern prairies today generally looked brighter than it has been for days. No new outbreaks have been reported in Manitoba, where all fires are under control. Despite the high fire hazards in both Saskatchewan and Alberta, few blazes are cropping up and all are being held in check.

Intermittent rain, which started yesterday evening, has continued through the night fell in the heat of this serious danger area north of Prince Albert, Sask.

While the Saskatchewan Forestry Department considered sending smoke jumpers into the region by air yesterday, aircraft hired by with men and equipment ready for use against four fires near Buffalo Narrows, 210 miles northwest of Prince Albert.

Nine fires, all dangerous, are burning in the remote Saskatchewan northland.

Two more fires broke out yesterday at Lac La Biche, the focal point of the Alberta danger area, but one was soon brought under control.

Highest precipitation across the northern prairies yesterday was recorded at Broshet, Man., about 600 miles northwest of Winnipeg near the Saskatchewan border. But fires in the area have been under control for several days. Fire fighters now are concerned mainly with digging out ground blazes.

Halt Execution of All War Criminals Condemned at Dachau

Washington, May 21 (AP)—The army has halted the execution of all war criminals condemned by American war crimes courts at Dachau, Germany, pending the outcome of the Senate investigation of the mainedge trials. A Senate armed services subcommittee is looking into charges that United States army interrogators used brutal methods in obtaining confessions from Nazi soldiers involved in the massacre of American prisoners of war during the battle of the Bulge.

PAYING THROUGH NOSE

In ancient Egypt tax collectors had their noses cut off and were exiled for extorting from the

"by, for and of the people."

His train reached Mont Joli about 5 p.m. after George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, addressed a Quebec audience for the first time in this campaign. It was like that several times in

Shanghai Isolated As Fires Rage On Waterfront

Shanghai, May 21. (CP) — Shanghai today was cut off by air, her sea lane was menaced, and great fires blazed across the river to the east and north where Red besiegers are on the attack.

One of the fires burned at the Standard Vacuum depot on Gough Island, eight miles north of downtown Shanghai. At least one tank on the blaze at this biggest oil installation in East Asia.

Lungwha air port, five miles to the southwest, suspended operations. Officials said, however, flights might be resumed later in the day.

Three Chinese civilian planes at the airport were commandeered by the military. They were standing by to take out high Chinese officials still in Shanghai.

The Shanghai commander ordered all but military traffic off the Whangpoo — Shanghai's sea lane — during afternoon hours.

Fighting Ebbs and Flows

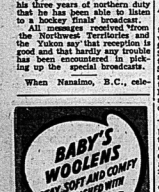
The fighting ebbed and flowed around Pootung, the industrial district across the Whangpoo from Shanghai. It raged through the night and continued under soggy skies early today.

At one time Friday night, 27 fires could be counted in and beyond the Pootung district.

Communist troops were reported to have infiltrated Gough Island and were engaged by Nationalist troops, the fires resulted.

It is becoming increasingly difficult to obtain dependable information. However, it was learned that the fourteen of Woosung, 10 miles to the north still is being defended doggedly against attack from the west.

Ships moving between Shanghai and Woosung were in grave risk of small arms fire at several points. There have been no reports of anyone on ships being wounded.



(The guarded dispatch, written under censorship, indicates the Communists are on or near the river in greater numbers than the garrison has conceded.) Troops Shifted Nationalist troops were being shifted from one point on Shanghai's defence perimeter to another. One rumor said reinforcements were on the way.

A news blackout obscured the remainder of the broad southChina front. Both sides were silent on the report of three Red prongs jabbing deep into the south.

U.S. Requisition Sent to London To Return Eisler

Question Asked in Commons Concerning Poland's Protest

SLIGHT DEBIT ON FOREIGN TRADE IN THREE MONTHS

Canada Imports $16,900,000 More Than It Sold Abroad During Month

Ottawa, May 23. (CP) — Increased Canadian imports during March gave Canada an unfavorable trade balance for the first time since April, 1948. The month's deficit left the Dominion with a slight debit of foreign trade for the first three months of the year.

The Dominion imported $18,900,000 more than it sold abroad during the month. Up to the end of the month had a trade deficit for the year of $600,000, the Bureau of Statistics reported Saturday.

The Bureau attributed the March debit to the rise in the value of imports and the decline in the value of exports "of reported."

Imports were $335,900,000. Exports were $216,800,000 in Canadian goods and $2,200,000 in foreign-manufactured foreign goods, in three months this year. Comparable imports were $655,700,000. Exports were $458,800,000 in Canadian products and $6,300,000 in re-exports of foreign goods.

SLIGHT DEBIT ON—Page 3

London, May 23 (AP) — The United States Embassy today sent to the Foreign Office the formal American requisition for the return of Communist Gerhart Eisler to the United States as a fugitive.

An Embassy spokesman said the requisition set forth that Eisler was wanted in the United States for making false statements under oath.

The spokesman said the United States contends the charge is the same as perjury, which would make Eisler extraditable under British law. Eisler, 52, claims he is a political refugee and thus entitled to asylum.

Will Reject Poland's Contention

In the House of Commons, meanwhile, Foreign Undersecretary Christopher Mayhew said Britain rejects the contention of Poland that the arrest of Eisler was a violation of international law.

Mayhew was asked in the House by Communist member Philip Piratin whether reply would be made to the Polish protest that Eisler's arrest violated the Polish ship Batory was such a violation. The under-secretary said a reply to the Polish protest was under consideration, but added: "I can say in advance that the action in respect of Eisler was not contrary to international law."

Eisler fled the United States aboard the Batory while waiting appeal from a prison sentence. He had been convicted of contempt of Congress and falsifying demands for passport. He will come up for a new hearing tomorrow in the Bow Street magistrate's court.

Nine Zoot-Suited Teen-Agers Held For Trespassing

Toronto, May 23 (CP)— Nine zoot-suited Toronto teen-agers were arrested at Musselman's Lake, summer resort, Sunday as families north-east of Toronto Sunday and charged with trespassing.

Police said the arrests followed a weekend charged with potential trouble. They said more than 500 zoot-suiters came into the area centre and rented cabins.

Police patrols searched all cars and examined all visitors. Late Saturday night, trunks of two police squad cars were jammed with bottles of confiscated beer and liquor taken from the youths.

The nine, six boys and three girls, were sleeping in a barn when police arrested them. Each had been summoned after a slight disturbance.

Szendrey Remanded On Murder Charge

Welland, May 23 —(CP)— George E. Szendrey, 45, of nearby Humberstone Village, was remanded one week May 30 on a murder charge in connection with the Pleasant Beach slaying May 15 of Harold Searing, 16-year-old high school student of Buffalo.

The preliminary hearing would not take place until June 6 when it is hoped Richard Joseph Ng, of Buffalo who was wounded in the chest in the shooting affray, will be sufficiently recovered to give testimony. Joseph is still in hospital here.

Police said the two youths were shot during a wiener roast by school girl companions from Standard beach resort handyman from nearby Humberstone who accosted the group at a wiener-roast.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto—Synopsis: The cold air which covers the prairie provinces and which is pushing steadily southeastward has reached northern Lake Superior and will cover the entire province by sundown Tuesday giving cool but mostly sunny weather for holidayers. Associated with the leading edge of this cold air is a band of cloud and rain which will cause showers but most of this weather will escape unsettled in Southern Ontario as it will move to Georgian Bay tonight and late evening.

Sisters Suffer Shot Wounds

Tracadie, N.B., May 22 (CP) — Two sisters were in hospital today with gunshot wounds and police said they were victims of murder. Dugay, 58, for questioning in connection with the shooting here Saturday night. Miss Alden Laughlin, 19, suffered chest wounds and her condition was reported serious. Her sister, Therese, was shot in the leg. Police said the shooting followed an argument in the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest McLaughlin, the girls' parents.

Charge Husband With Stabbing

Hamilton, May 23 (CP)—Police charged William Mitchell with wounding in connection with the wedding anniversary stabbing Sunday of his wife, Mary, from whom he is estranged. Investigators, to whom Sopperan gave himself up a few hours after the incident, said the wife was hid that Sopperan went to the house at Mitchell's wife is living, wished his "happy anniversary" and then attacked her.

Experiments on Brain Tissue May Solve Mystery of Nerve Impulses

By ALTON L. BLAKESLEE

Chicago, May23 (AP)—A piece of living brain here sometimes works like an automatic clock with a slipping clutch.

The piece of brain is the spinal cord of a cat, kept alive after being taken out of the animal. The spinal cord is essentially part of the brain of mammals. This piece is helping to show how the human brain works.

The rat spinal cord it was found will take a pattern of nerve electrical fuels, and is able to transmit that pattern along to carry the nerve impulses or messages. The pattern is there but nothing happens.

Keeping the spinal cord alive outside the rat's body was accomplished by a team of physiologists headed by Dr. Ralph W. Gerard and aided by Dr. Robert L. Tschirgi, of the University of Chicago.

The cord, about the size and shape of a toothpick, was put in a special apparatus with warm, moist air inside. Electronic devices show when the cord carries nerve impulses or messages, causing a reflex action in the cord.

The cord was taken out when it was with an artery that normally supplies it with blood and nutrients. Instead of blood, the scientists pump into the artery any kind of fluid whose effect on the brain they want to test.

At the outset, they learned that lack of oxygen or sugar will prevent the cord from working, that it can carry messages but it is able to transmit messages again if the oxygen or sugar is restored within half an hour.

The next step was to learn what kind of chemicals or nutrients the brain needed in order to work.

So far, Dr. Gerard said, some 25 chemicals have been tried in this way. Only about a half dozen worked. Among them were a sugar, glucose, citric acid, glutamic acid and pyruvic acid.

Then came the puzzler. Certain other fuels would be burned and would give off energy inside the cord, but the cord couldn't carry messages.

This was the first half of the carrier boys of the Ontario Intelligencer who made the trip to Toronto on Saturday as guests of the Ontario Intelligencer with all expenses paid. The remainder of the boys will duplicate the same trip again this Saturday. Back row, left to right they are: D. Rowbotham, D. Starling, R. L. THUNDER MASKS SHOTGUN BLAST FATAL TO WORKER

Fired Thru Screen Of Kitchen Window

Windsor, Ont., May 23 (CP) — A shotgun assassin who fired between thunderclaps of a Sunday morning storm killed William Allen, 37-year-old automotive worker.

Police still are seeking the woman used by the person who fired through the screen of a kitchen window at the rear of Allen's west-end home. Investigators said they found footprints which might have been made by the slayer.

Allen died in hospital four hours after shotgun pellets ripped into the left side of his head and face while he was sitting in his kitchen to have a bedtime lunch with his wife. The Edmonton native, who came here about nine years ago and rose to be an inspector in the plant of Ford Motor Company of Canada, slumped to the floor and lay with blood coursing from his wounds.

His wife said she stepped out of the kitchen and into a 19-year-old daughter's bedroom a few minutes before the shooting. The shotgun's report, louder than the thunderclaps which were pocking the house, attracted her to the kitchen. Her screams drew Mr. and Mrs. J. E. McCawley, who live upstairs in the Allen home.

39 Ontario Intelligencer Carrier Boys Enjoy Thrilling Experiences in Toronto Visit

It was a thrilling and wonderful experience for 39 carrier boys of the Ontario Intelligencer on Saturday.

They visited Toronto in a palatial Hawson Bus, saw Toronto from the air atop the Canadian Bank of Commerce Building, visited the Riverside Zoo and Royal Ontario Museum and topped it off by seeing two ball games at Maple Leaf Stadium and between visits enjoyed two delightful dinners, not counting the hot dogs, ice cream and sundry other bits of food.

The party was in charge of Richard Cowan, circulation manager of the Ontario Intelligencer, Norman Lynch of the Editorial Department and Claude D. Tice, News Editor. It was a happy day for these youngsters, many of whom had never seen city lights and they were well behaved and a credit to themselves and the paper they represented. They were announced over the public address system at the ball park by Bald Price, who formerly lived in this city, and now in charge of the address system at the stadium and this was one of the great thrills of the day.

A Tired Lot

It was a tired but happy gang that arrived in Belleville shortly after one o'clock on Sunday morning and it is probably a safe bet that many of them missed Sunday services at the churches due to their enjoyable stay after such a wonderful trip. There were many thrills for these youngsters, who worked so hard to enjoy the trip but probably their greatest was the meeting of some of their idols on the Toronto ball team. Unfortunately all of the boys could not meet the players as they were night games and the players were busy getting ready to play but they took time out to pose with some of the boys and these pictures will be shown in Wednesday's edition.

Problem it would be just as well to start from the beginning and follow these boys on their day in the city. The bus left Belleville before eight o'clock with mothers giving last instructions to their charges and officials hurrying the boys into the bus for a final checkoff.

On Hand Early

Many of the young fellows were on hand at 7.15 in the morning well stocked with comic books, chocolate bars, field glasses and anything else that they considered might be useful to them. Wm. E. Riley was on hand to take pictures before the bus left, and a few parents were there to see their sons off.

It was not long before the bus was really rolling along the open highway and not a thing was missed by any of the boys from three on all sides. It was not too long, though, before a familiar cry that was to be heard for the rest of the day began to ring through the bus: "When do we eat?"

A short stop was made at a small coffee shop that was outside Brighton and the boys loaded up with hot dogs, cokes, jelly rolls and chocolate bars. From three on in it was an easy drive right through into Toronto on the new dual highway.

JAMES FORRESTAL PLUNGES TO DEATH, WORN BY SERVICE

U.S. Naval Inquiry Will Probe Suicide

By ELTON C. FAY

Washington, May 23 (AP)— A United States Naval Board of Inquiry was ordered today to inquire into the suicide of James Forrestal, but his friends wrote their own verdict: He died because he worked so hard for his country.

Forrestal, 57-year-old cabinet member under Presidents Roosevelt and Truman, ended his own life Sunday morning by leaping from the 16th floor of the navy's towering hospital in Bethesda, Md. He left as his farewell only an ancient Greek poem of despair and death.

He was the first Secretary of Defense—a wearing job that he gave up as a sick man in March. Before that, he had been Secretary of the Navy. And before that he had served as an assistant to Franklin D. Roosevelt in the White House.

This spring, his health broken by more than nine years of nerve-wracking service, he decided to seek release from the strain. A few days in Florida after his resignation, and then he entered the hospital April 2.

His death and the manner of it shocked the capital.

President Truman said "this able and devoted public servant was as truly a casualty of the war as if he had died on the firing line." He issued a proclamation ordering flags flown at half-staff from all public buildings, forts and warships.

More Research and Improved Treatment Asked in Mental Cases

By HAROLD W. BLAKESLEE
Associated Press Science Writer

Montreal, May 23 (AP)—Mental illness is the most expensive disease you can have and the medical care is not adequate.

That is the statement today of Dr. William C. Menninger, Topeka, Kans., in his presidential address before the annual meeting of the American Psychiatric Association's annual meeting.

He proposed several remedies. One is preventive and social psychiatry, more like the public health physician makes the public understand the improvements in health that can come to them from psychiatric theories and practices.

This, he said, would be done by psychiatrists taking time to counsel with families, state authorities, educators, industrialists, religious leaders, and others in programs for setting up guidance clinics in mental illness, marriage counseling and education of parents. The radio, he said, is asking for psychiatric programs.

"Our low and no-cost psychiatric clinics," he declared, "are totally inadequate. This is a cause for mental illness becoming one of the greatest breeding fields for quackery.

Dr. Menninger asked for more research and improved forms of treatment. He said probably the greatest single need is more trained psychiatric personnel.

Last night the association issued a statement that former Secretary Forrestal's suicide was the result of an acute attack of depression, a kind that is common to middle life. The statement said this kind of illness has just as good a chance for recovery as any of the other diseases from which people can recover completely.

Big-Four Council Attempts to Settle German Problem

Sixth Meeting of Foreign Ministers Since End of War

Paris, May 23 — (AP) — The Big Four Council of Foreign Ministers met today to begin an attempt to settle the problem of Germany.

Foreign Secretary Bevin of Britain, State Secretary Acheson of the United States, Foreign Minister Schuman of France and Foreign Minister Vishinsky of Russia assembled in the flag-festooned pink marble palace at 3.37 p. m. (10:37 a.m., EDT).

This was the sixth meeting of the Council of Foreign Ministers since the war and fourth on the German question. It was their first session since the council was deadlocked in London in December, 1947, on a German peace treaty.

The three western powers were expected to press Russia for immediate and urgent consideration at Berlin. The lifting of the Soviet blockade of Berlin and the allied counter-blockade of Soviet-occupied eastern Germany opened the way for these new talks.

Germany alone was on the agenda, although there has been speculation the ministers might range informally over the entire field of problems of Austria and other questions farther afield.

American and French sources said the west would argue that continued division of Germany is a menace to any future settlement for Germany as a whole.

Problem of Currencies

One source pointed out that the problem of two currencies in the city — basis of a Berlin railway workers' strike that broke into rioting last night — also was directly related to the blockade itself.

Once there is an "ironclad" agreement on Berlin, the western source said, the conference can proceed to other questions.

Biggest of these is establishment of a united government for Germany. This is complicated by the fact that a west German government is soon to take shape in the western zones and that Russia is expected to sponsor a separate German government in Soviet zone.

Other major items involve withdrawal of occupation forces and the question of Germany's final frontiers.

Western sources said the west had great strength to bring about achieving political and economic unity of Germany, but only on the basis of the Bonn Constitution recently adopted by the states of the western zones.

In Moscow, meanwhile, Pravda forecast that the western powers would try to obtain a formula at the conference and that such efforts would fail.

Pravda, organ of the Russian communist party, declared in a dispatch by its correspondent:

"More than once already it has been proven in practice that such methods are useless in relation to the Soviet Union."

CARRY AWAY ONE SAFE

Toronto, May 23 — (CP)—One safe was stolen and another moved to the back door of a shop during a Sunday afternoon.

Thieves broke in a basement window of a clothing store in the western part of the city and carried out the small safe containing $1,100.

RICHARD H. GREER, NOTED DEFENCE LAWYER, DIES

Undertook Defence of Many Persons Who Could Pay No Fee

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Richard Haliburton Greer, 70, who took part in hundreds of famous Canadian trials as prosecutor or defence lawyer, died Sunday in his sleep.

Known to bench and bar as Dick Greer, he undertook the defence of many persons who could pay no fee but of whose innocence he was convinced.

During his boyhood in East Toronto, he sold newspapers. Later to help put himself through university, he played semi — professional baseball in Toronto and around London, Ont.

For several years after graduation, he was in private practice. Then for about seven years he was Crown Attorney for York County.

He returned to private practice and built a reputation in the field of criminal law, although his service often were sought in important civil cases.

In 1915 he organized the 180th Battalion, the Sportsmen's Battalion, and assisted in its recruiting. He served overseas with it as Lieutenant - Colonel.

After he returned from the war, many of the cases in which he took part carried the headlines of the day, some of the appeals he conducted set precedents in Canadian law.

Biggest of these is establishment of a united government for Germany. This is complicated by the fact that a west German government is soon to take shape in the western zones and that Russia is expected to sponsor a separate German government in Soviet zone.

Other major items involve withdrawal of occupation forces and the question of Germany's final frontiers.

Says Russ Sent 'Kidnappers' Into U.S. Part of Berlin

Berlin, May 23 (AP)— Brig-Gen. Frank Howley said Saturday the Russians have admitted sending "kidnappers" into the United States sector of Berlin. In a blistering letter to Russian commander Alexander Kotikov, Howley said he "appreciated the frankness" of the admission but added: "I assure you that I will not tolerate kidnapping in the United States sector of Berlin. I will not countenance your sending police or other agents into the United States sector for the purpose of arresting Germans or any other nationals under our jurisdiction."

16 Lambs Killed, 4 Sheep are Injured By Marauding Dogs

Paisley, Ont., May 23 (CP) — Marauding dogs Saturday night killed 16 lambs and injured four sheep on the farm of Andrew McArthur near this Bruce County village. Four dogs were reported missing. Many farmers in the district reported raids on sheep flocks during the last few weeks. Council has ordered all dogs kept under leash and June and owners are liable to a fine of $50 if the bylaw is broken.

MISS VERA FLINDALL WINS PASTEL PAINTING

Miss Vera M. Flindall, 84 Gordon Street, was judged winner of the pastel painting by Kinette Mrs. Alpha Myers, which was drawn at the Governor's Ball held at the Country Club on Friday night. The painting was donated by Mrs. Myers and the winning ticket was drawn by Kei Pierce, Governor of Kinamen, who held their convention in the city last weekend.

SHEEP AND CATTLE TROPHY SECURED FOR JUNIOR FARMERS

The Hastings County Junior Farmer Association will purchase a sheep and cattle trophy for the high boy in judging these classes. A horse judging trophy will also be purchased.

In all there will be six special trophies and awarded for the annual livestock judging competition and one $50 trip to the United States. This trip is awarded on the judging ability and leadership given by the Junior.

The livestock judging competition will be held in the Belleville district at Maple Dr. The annual field day will be held by the Junior Farmers at Malone. Players on ball teams must be active junior farmers and not pick-up teams from local leagues.

DOG WITHOUT COLLAR AND TAG

City dog catcher Thomas Thorne reports he has picked up a black and white springer spaniel which was wearing neither collar nor tag. The dog, picked up on Saturday, will be kept awaiting his owner or some other interested party.

LIBERALS OPEN NEW CLUBROOMS

The Liberals of South Hastings have opened their new clubrooms in the Bridge Block and will continue the rooms after the campaign has been closed. These rooms will be used for social purposes and other functions of the party. The rooms were officially opened by Frank Follwell, candidate in South Hastings for the Liberal party, and he hoped that the sociability would prevail in all dealings within the organization.

VOTING LISTS TORN FROM POLES

Returning officer for Hastings South, M.C. Burgess, Charles St., has reported several instances of voting lists having been torn from poles and buildings in the city. Boys are believed to have been responsible for the damage.

Severe penalties are provided for personal destroying such voting lists, it was stated by Mr. Burgess who asked that any persons seeing the lists being damaged to report the matter to police.

FARMERS URGED TO GET APPLICATIONS IN IMMEDIATELY

Belleville district farmers wishing farm laborers from western Canada to work in the haying and grain harvest this year were urged today to get their applications in soon before labor needs cannot be filled.

In 1940 about 800 farm workers from Western Canada and 225 from the Maritimes were brought to Ontario to assist in the hay and grain crops. Wages to be paid this type of help this year is $75 per month.

Applications from farmers for western help should be made to the Belleville National Employment service office or to agricultural representative, A. O. Dalrymple at Stirling.

OBITUARY

LATE MRS. SARAH LITTLE

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Little was held Monday morning from the Grangier and O'Brien Funeral Home, Moira Street West to St. Michael's R. C. Church at 10 a.m. Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father J. A. Carley, who also said the committal service at the St. James' cemetery.

The bearers were James Lynch, Joseph Marsh, Stephen Gervin, James Molloy, Golding Hall, Mr. Laughlin and Joseph Brandon.

MRS. NANCY ELLEN NOBLES

The funeral of Mrs. Nancy Ellen Nobles, wife of Mr. Manley Nobles, Canniton Road, was held Wednesday afternoon from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at Elmwood Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. D. O. Parkman, pastor of Victoria Avenue Baptist Church.

The bearers were Fred Hay, E. E. Miller, Albert Hall, William Bellis, Walter Vanderwater and Frank Bellis.

DAVID SHERWOOD MALLORY (Frankford)

Frankford, May 23 (Special) — The funeral of David Sherwood Mallory was held from the late residence here on Friday afternoon last to Mount Evergreen, where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. Mr. Hamilton. Interment took place at Mount Evergreen Cemetery, Trenton. The pallbearers were Dr. Powell, Arrow Gunion, Grant Broach, Gerhan Brundge, Golden Hall, Harold Charlesworth and W. Partridge.

GEORGE BENJAMIN HEAGLE

Stirling, May 23 (Special) — George Benjamin Heagle died suddenly at his home here on Tuesday last. He was in the 7th concession of Rawdon township 83 years ago and was a son of the late William Heagle and his wife the late Jane Higgins. He has passed eleven years of his life in Stirling and prior to that time he was in the United Church and faithfully he was a member of Wilman's Loyal Orange Lodge No. 172.

Surviving him is one son John or Stirling, however, advises that there is not a sufficient military force to police the world, military preparation is necessary.

Speaking to the younger members of the assembled regiments, Archdeacon Smith referring to his text "Ye He ye must be born" restated that Peace is not a negative thing. Our Saviour meant it is an inward quality. He is an inward knowledge of Jesus Christ you will find peace.

Told a Story

He told the story of a young Canadian soldier who on his deathbed murmured "Father, take me home" as he died. This meant that the way of Peace found in Christ is not something to be paid for the dying, but for the living as well. The whole world should know this."

Lieut.-Col. Cousins read the Scripture lesson during the service. The Belleville Pipe Band was in attendance for the parade which swung over a brief route of city streets before returning to the Armouries for dismissal.

Present at the regimental dinner were besides officers and other ranks of the unit, Lt.-Col. Jim Howard; Lieut.-Col. Abrahams, Major Max Hawkins, Major Hall and Prince Edward Regiment; Major Cunningham, Signals Officer commanding the 47th Battery, Nepanee; Major Harry Alford; Major Ed. Ketcheson, Capt. Jack Len Hyslop, regimental administrative and training staff; Major Owen Atkins, who acted as chairman for the dinner.

Prior to his presentation of the Efficiency Decoration to Major Smith, Lieut.-Col. Cousins pointed out that the recipient had served in the militia and reserve forces for a period of 20 years and during that time he had discharged his duties in soldierly and efficient manner. He had done an important job in connection with the regiment.

Given Fine Reception

The assembled regiment gave Major Smith a vociferous reception as the decoration was presented to him. "For he is a Jolly Good Fellow" rang out in the lecture room and there were cheers and a tiger.

In the absence of expressions of appreciation, Major Smith in lighter vein described his experiences and military symbolism. The evening, however, was kicked around more than a football. In the course of it, "I feel that I have earned this decoration."

He detailed the many units with which he served during the last war and the evening was fittingly climaxed with his appointment as acting senior chaplain of the Second Canadian Division.

Major Everett Fairman expressed the appreciation of the regiment through Major Atkins to Regent Mrs. Jack Cousins and members of the Argyll Chapter, I.O.D.E. for the splendid repast served the regiment. Mrs. Cousins made a gracious reply.

Lieut.-Col. Cousins also expressed his appreciation of the co-operation given him by officers during Army Week just concluded.

Price of Eggs Holds Steady On Local Mart

Price of eggs held steady on the local produce market here Saturday with little fetching 24 cents the dozen and mediums 45 cents.

Fowl sold at 60 cents for boilers with top grade chicken selling at 35 cents and mature fowl from 45 to 50 cents per lb.

There was a large attendance on the outside market as transplanting stocks and asparagus, rhubarb and other greens were offered. Asparagus sold at 20 cents per half lb. bunch or two bunches for 35 cents. Rhubarb and onions sold at a dime or three for a quarter.

Potatoes were 50 cents the peck and from $1.75 to $2 for bag lots.

Cabbage and tomato plants brought 25 cents the small flat; lettuce was 10 cents and onions 25 cents to $1 per flat according to size. Pansies were 30 cents the box.

Whitefish were available at 40 cents per lb. Yellow were 30 cents and mudcats 25 cents per pound.

Young pigs sold at $12 to $13 each with shoats selling at $16.

Indian Farmer Critically Hurt, Thrown off Wagon

Thomas Brant age 55, Mohawk Indian Reservation farmer, was critically injured Wednesday evening when he was knocked from a farm wagon as it was struck by an auto from behind.

Brant was driving home on Church Line with three horses hitched to the wagon after working in the fields, when a car believed to have been driven by Leonard Brant, Deseronto, topped a knoll and struck the wagon.

The injured man was rushed to Belleville Hospital where he is under the care of Dr. G. H. Stobie. Provincial Constable Al. Cockburn investigated.

THIRTY PAINTERS 'DO' HOUSE FOR WIDOW IN HOUR

Toronto, May 22 — (CP)— It took just one hour for Mrs. Mary Dungan, 84-year-old widow to have her house painted. Thirty painters painted the house as part of the "beautify Toronto" campaign sponsored by the city and the young men's section, Board of Trade.

Ven. Archdeacon Arthur Smith Presented Army Decoration At 9th Anti-Tank Regt. Dinner

Despite rainy weather upwards of three hundred officers of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment and the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment turned out on Saturday to attend a combined church parade and dinner parade in the city. The parade marched through a drizzling downpour to St. Thomas' Church where the regimental chaplain, Honorary Major the Ven. Archdeacon Arthur Smith conducted the service.

The parade was under the command of Lieut.-Col. Jack Cousins, commanding officer of the 9th Anti Tank Regiment. With Col. Cousins was Lieut. Col. Reg Abrahams, Kingston, commanding officer of the "Hasty Pees."

Batteries of the Regiment were represented by battery commanders while companies of the infantry regiment and the sappers commanding were here from all parts of the district.

Following the parade the 9th Regiment held its annual regimental dinner for all ranks in a lecture room of the Armouries, the venture of the hasty pees remaining on to Major the Ven. Archdeacon Smith of the Efficiency Decoration, a symbol of twenty years' service with the army.

A number of members of the First World War and other guests were present at the dinner following the parade.

Often Preluded

"Church parades in the days of Cromwell," Archdeacon Smith said in his address, "often were the preludes of bloodier things to come. In the modern day and especially last week, when 'Army Week' was observed it was not that way, more by token that the military preparedness of the country and of the empire is not inherently a military nation," he said, "but in these days when a feeling of semi-barbarism is abroad there is no other course open than to prepare. We have found in the bitter past that preparation for war is the best guarantee of peace."

"We must do our utmost to see that there will not be another war," the speaker said. "in present conditions, however, when there is not a sufficient military force to police the world, military preparation is necessary.

He told the story of a young Canadian soldier who on his deathbed murmured "Father, take me home" as he died. This meant that the way of Peace found in Christ is not something to be paid for the dying, but for the living as well. The whole world should know this."

Several Attempts Made to Break in

Half a dozen minor traffic accidents, as many drunks, and several attempted break-ins occupied the attention of the police department over the week-end.

No personal injuries were reported as result of any of the accidents although one aged woman was said to have been knocked down by a car at a downtown intersection.

Mr. Emmons, 211 Coleman St., reported an attempted break-in at that address and said a garage door had been broken and the locking handle of his car damaged. Also Col. Cousins, 61 Church at 217 Church, the front door was found open, it later being reported that the garage door appeared to have been forced open and a tool was on hand

Bob Clarke of Kingston Heads East Canada Kinsmen Colorful Parade at Convention

The three-day Kinsmen Club convention which saw delegates from 28 clubs throughout Eastern Canada convene in the city was concluded over the weekend with the election of new officials for District No. 8.

Bob Clarke of Kingston, former deputy governor for the district, was named the new governor, succeeding Ken Pierce of Brantford. Deputy governors elected were Frank McIntosh, Montreal, with Paul Bisaillon of St. Jean, Arthur Cruji, of Belleville, and Will Schofield of Kingston being appointed deputy governors.

From the standpoint of the general public the outstanding feature of the convention was the Saturday morning parade which saw thousands of shoppers line streets in the downtown section of the city.

Colorful Parade

Kinsmen Governor Kenneth Pierce and Deputy Governor Frank Lang, headed the colorful parade which started from the Armouries lawn and marched up Front Street and down Pinnacle.

Dressed in cowboy and western garb, a dozen or more Kinsmen and Kinsettes rode astride ponies, while the occasional "Kin" in Indian garb, complete with feather headdress and tomahawks, added color to the event.

The Kinsmen band in the new blue and gold capes, presented a colorful sight as they played the martial music for the parade. Wowsily turnouts added interest while many of the visiting Kinsmen delegates marched with their club banners. Members of the Belleville Fire Department with their new aerial ladder and pumper brought up the rear of the parade.

Saturday noon convention delegates held a stag luncheon at the Hotel Quinte at which Malcolm Rolph, public solicitor, was the guest speaker, Mr. Robb was introduced by Ernie Coleborne and was thanked by Jim Ward.

Representatives of other service clubs in the city attending the luncheon included Roy Mitchell, Rotary; Harry Hyde, Y's Mens; Norm Edwards, Kiwanis, and Ken Bowerman, Optimists. Don Forrest, past national president of Kinsmen, also was present.

Governor's Ball

The outstanding social event of the convention was the governor's ball held at the Quinte Country Club Saturday night at which corsages were presented to Mrs. Irene Pierce, wife of the district governor, and to Mrs. Mary Lang, wife of the local club president. A corsage was also presented to Mrs. Dawn Freeland, wife of Ed Freeland, national president.

Other awards were presented by Art Cruji on behalf of the local club.

President Frank Lang presented the national president, Ed Freeland with a silver cigarette case, while the deputy governor, Kenneth Pierce received gifts in his executive.

Prior to the governor's ball visiting Kinsmen and local club members and their wives enjoyed dinner at the Hotel Quinte.

Turn First Sod For New School On Yeomans St.

First sod for the excavation of the foundation of the new Yeomans Street public school was turned this morning as the St. Lawrence Contracting Company went to work in order to complete the structure in as short a time as possible.

Chairman of the Board of Education Sites and Accommodation committee, Mrs. Ruth Clifford, by turned the first sod in the presence of a small party of contracting firm officials and workers.

Immediately the first sod was turned bull-dozers went to work stripping sod from the site where the new one story school will be constructed.

Foundation footings for the new building will be poured on solid rock which on the site of the building is but one foot beneath the surface of the ground. Excavation required for the new building will be a small area which will be limited to provide for the furnace and coal bins.

Cost of construction of the new school as per the tender of the St. Lawrence Contracting Company is $143,864, with extras bringing the total to $147,000. Architect's fees will be $8,976.60.

The Board of Education will probably call for tenders to provide for an amount of $180,000 to cover construction and financing of the new school.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 23. (CP)—Golds held against a mild downward trend in today's quiet two-holiday session. Trading was the slowest since June 1944 as the market prepared for tomorrow's holiday.

Volume for the first three hours was 170,000 shares, about 176,000 shares less than Friday's similar period.

Industrials were down fractions in dull trading. Scattered issues turned quietly as floor traders sat about reading newspapers and discussing plans for tomorrow's holiday. Many brokers took an extra-long weekend from Friday night until Wednesday morning.

2 Peterborough Men Seriously Hurt in Crash

Bancroft, May 23. —Seriously injured in a traffic collision seven miles north of here, Friday afternoon, two Peterborough men, Charles Toplas and Ted Carew, were transferred from the Red Cross Hospital here to St. Joseph's Hospital, Peterborough. They were reported suffering concussion of the brain and lacerations of the- face and head.

Five persons were recovered from the accident to the local hospital. They were Charles and Leonard Toplas and Ted Carew of Peterborough and Mr. and Mrs. William George Cook of Oshawa.

Mr. Toplas and Leonard Toplas were given first aid treatment, and were able to leave the hospital. Mrs. Cook suffered broken ribs and cuts on the face.

The five persons in the two vehicles involved all injured in the crash which occurred on No. 62 Highway. It was reported that a truck owned by Clarence Dunlop, of Port Credit and driven by Charles Toplas, accompanied by Leonard Toplas and Mr. Carew, was in collision with a car driven by the driver by Mr. Cook, with his wife on the front seat beside him. It was owned by the Mill Valley Lumber Co. of Oshawa.

Dr. S. G. Lumb of Bancroft, attended the injured on the roadside, and assisted by Dr. Lloyd W. Anderson, also of Bancroft, at the hospital.

It was said that the extent of the injuries of Charles Toplas and Carew could not be immediately determined, and it was attended to remove them to Peterborough.

Dr. Herbert Young, of Peterborough, was also attending injured until 1 a.m. Saturday said they were badly cut about the head and he suspected Carew had a fractured neck and Toplas a broken jaw. He was not yet able to report fully on their conditions, which he did not think was critical.

Circumstances of the accident were investigated by Provincial Constable Wm. Simmons of Bancroft. It was said that tire marks indicated the truck skidded 165 feet before its broadside collision with the automobile.

It was intimated that a criminal charge was being considered by the authorities.

SLIGHT DEBIT

At the end of the same period last year, Canada had a favorable balance of $80,000,000.

March, 1948, the favorable trade balance was $33,800,000.

The debit balance on the monthly trade with the United States was $44,900,000 compared with $33,800,000 in March, 1948. It raised Canada's deficit on U.S. trade to $132,800,000 for the quarter compared with $102,000,000 at the end of the first quarter of 1948.

March sales of the United States were $122,500,000 and imports were $169,900,000.

Canada had a debit balance of $283,600,000 in trade with the United States last year.

Declined in March

The seasonally favorable balance of trade with the United Kingdom declined during March. It was $11,300,000 compared with $21,500,000 in February and $37,700,000 in March last year, credit balance on U.K. trading for the first three months of this year was $63,200,000.

The March surplus results from sales of $39,500,000 to the United Kingdom and imports of $28,300,000.

Iron and iron products were the biggest items in the import picture. Canada spent $85,700,000 on these commodities in March, compared with $60,900,000 in March last year. The increase resulted from bigger purchases of rilling-mill products, farm implements, boilers, engines, steel pipes, tubes and fittings and machinery.

Imports from Europe were $7,-541,000 compared with $4,651,000 in March 1948 and the three-month total was $20,105,000 compared with $10,814,000 for the same period last year.

Canadian purchases from Commonwealth countries were $43,-000,000 against $32,500,000 in March last year. The three-month total was $115,300,000 compared with $92,600,000 in the first quarter of 1949.

Imports from Newfoundland in March—the first month for which figures will be recorded — were $3,113,000, compared with $275,000 in March, 1948, and $918,000 in the quarter compared with $1,872,000.

Walter T. Gibson, Moose Governor, Visits Local Lodge

On Saturday evening, Belleville Lodge, No. 1004, Loyal Order of Moose, was host to members of Trenton, Port Hope, Lindsay, and Peterborough lodges, the occasion being a visit to Belleville of the Supreme Governor, Walter F. Gibson, of Oakland, California.

A large class of candidates was initiated into the order. The degree team, Belleville, did the ritualistic.

After the initiation the members adjourned to the banquet room, where a dinner had been prepared by the ladies of the Moose.

Following the toasts to The King and President Truman, toastmaster, Brother Frank Fullwell, called upon Past Governor Dr. J. Bateman of Belleville Lodge, to introduce Regional Director of Canada, Norman G. Heyd.

Praises Degree Team

Mr. Heyd in opening his address, congratulated the degree team on their excellent work, especially he was in which they had initiated the class. Impressive ceremonies and urged them to take part in the competitions contests to be held at the Ontario convention, to be held in Belleville in November of this year. Brother Heyd announced that the Moose in Canada had a total of 100,000 members in the last five years, which number now stands at 1,000 Moose in Ontario.

He spoke on the management of lodge funds and the wise supervision of funds by the management, even during the depression years, no claim had ever to be postponed.

He then introduced the speaker of the evening, Walter F. Gibson.

The Supreme Governor opened his address in humorous vein but soon settled down to the serious part of his speech.

Million In Order

The Loyal Order of Moose now numbers more than 1,000,000 men and women. Dwelling on Mooseheart, the child city of the Moose, he stated that of the 2,500 graduates from Mooseheart with a high school education and a trade, not a single one has been in a juvenile court.

700 Served in War

Of the 700 former graduates, who served in the armies during the last World War, not one was discharged from service for physical defect, which speaks well for the care that they had received.

This year building is on the way at Mooseheart for the erection of three-quarters of a million dollars, and Mooseheart, in Florida, the home for the aged, where 350 men and women reside, the building program is $1,000,000.

Mr. Gibson spoke interestingly in the contributions of the Moose to charity, amounting to $1,000 each three months, from each member.

In conclusion, he urged the members to take a full part in any municipal activities.

He presented Past Governor Herron with a gold governing ring, on behalf of the Belleville Lodge, No. 1004, as a token made a suitable reply.

Brother Fullwell then presented the Supreme Governor with a copy of W. C. Mikel's "History of Belleville".

Before the Supreme Governor, nor, assured the members that he would never forget his visit to Canada, and the welcome he had received.

PICTON

George J. Tustin For P.C. Candidate For P.E.-Lennox

Picton—Five hundred delegates hailed George J. Tustin, as Progressive Conservative candidate for Prince Edward-Lennox at a convention in Napanee Saturday. He was elected on the first ballot over Reeve Donald Thompson of South Marysburgh township and Clarence Milligan, of Ameliasburg. Mr. Tustin received ninety percent of the vote and was tendered an ovation when the result was announced. Mr. Thompson immediately pledged their support for the convention's choice.

Clarence Milligan, president, was in charge with all parts of the riding represented nearly 100 per cent. Secretary Woodrow Blakely and Phil Dodds were in charge of arrangements which made the convention the snappiest in many years.

Mr. Tustin expressed confidence that there will be a change of government following the next election. "The Progressive Conservatives have a real policy and a real leader in Mr. Drew," he said. In repeating Mr. Drew's announcement that the radio license would be abolished when he gained the same info power, Mr. Tustin evoked applause. He felt his experience would be of benefit in the riding.

Mr. Tustin cited several cases of extravagance on the part of the Liberal regime and felt it is time for a change.

Mr. Tustin was born and brought up on a farm near Napanee and later was a prominent business man in Napanee. He served as Mayor of that town. He was Deputy Whip in the last House of Commons.

Toronto Residents Remark On Fine Behavior, Good Manners of Carrier Boys

A great interest was shown by Toronto residents in the clean-cut boys of the Ontario Intelligencer when they made their trip to Toronto as guests of the Ontario Intelligencer. When the boys visited the observation tower of the Bank of Commerce many visitors were surprised and happy to see such a well behaved group of youngsters.

Richard F. Cowan, circulation manager of the Ontario Intelligencer who directed the trip, said that this one was the largest groups of boys he had ever taken on a trip and they were by far the best behaved. He also expressed his hope that he will have the same amount of Belleville boys who are to make the same trip on Saturday. The same schedule will be followed but will be changed around a little with the ball game being in the afternoon instead of the evening.

Mayor Disagrees With Statement Given by O.H. Scott of P.U.C

Mayor D. L. Storey, referring to the recent decision of Mr. Justice Wells in the case pending between the city and the public utilities disagreed with the statement made by Commissioner O. H. Scott that the ruling fulfilled the stand taken by the Utilities Commission.

In his decision Mr. Justice Wells refused to back the city which asked that the commission increase the rate of interest and interest on debentures issued for extensions to the water system.

The statement of the manager of the utilities commission following the decision of Mr. Justice Wells deciding that the city council has the sole authority to grant money to the commission, but the commission must purchase, in fact and in name, the water system, Mayor Storey declared.

"Had it not been for the firm stand taken by the city council which forced the matter into the courts, property owners in the city would have had to pay over $46,000 in real estate taxes," the mayor went on. "But the 1949 commission recognizing the errors of the 1948 commission made a settlement with the present city council so that the burden of supporting the utility will fall upon the real estate owners.

"The last year of the law suit for the city was less than $50 and was fully justified by the results. Powers Have Been Used

"Over the last several years the powers of the utilities commission have been considerably curbed by the legislature and at the present time the legislature the commission were -forbidden to extend service beyond the corporation boundaries without the consent of council.

"No new utility or new utility cannot be undertaken by a commission unless the same is paid for out of revenue and the method of increase the number of utilities considered may be changed.

These amendments to the legislature were the direct result of the actions of the utilities commission of the city council and it is anticipated that further legislature will be enacted as a result of the decision of Mr. Justice Wells.

Frankford High School Pupils Will Attend B.C.I. Starting Next September

Commencing in September at the opening of the 1949-1950 term, pupils of the Frankford High School will attend classes at Belleville collegiate, it has been decided.

Approval for some 65 to 70 high school students now attending continuation classes at Frankford, to attend Belleville collegiate starting in September was given by members of the Belleville Board of Education at their last meeting.

Bus transportation for the high school pupils would be provided by the Frankford High School Board, it was said at the regular meeting of the Frankford board held earlier in the month.

At their meeting last week the Belleville board also arranged for a general meeting of other school authorities and municipal councils in the bay of Quinte area to meet in Belleville early in June to discuss the possibility of forming a Bay of Quinte High School Area or Administrative Area. The date of the meeting will be determined by the convenience of the Department of Education officials who will be invited to attend.

Large Area Considered

The school area, such as outlined above, would be named "high school area" if controlled by high schools, or "administrative area" if entered also by public schools. The area to be taken in by the new school area would be the city of Belleville, townships of Sidney, Thurlow and Tyendinaga, and the village of Frankford.

No effort will be spared to make the new public school on Yeomans Street as modern as possible, Board members voted to ask for prices and other information for a public address system and inter-communication system for the school.

May Play Baseball

Public school principals will decide whether baseball may be permitted on school compounds in connection among the pupils, as is requested by the Y.M.C.A. If school principals are in accord, the action would be approved by the board.

The resignation of Mrs. H. Blakely as kindergarten teacher at Queen Victoria School was received with direction that she be replaced on the staff. It was also directed that the village public teacher of English be secured for the secondary school staff.

Parents of children residing on

In Child's restaurant Mrs. Varty hostess of the restaurant, said that they were the sweetest and most mannerly group of boys that she had ever had the pleasure of taking care of. The waitresses all fell for the boys' charwarts them and they are all looking forward to seeing most of them back again on Saturday.

Ushers at Maple Leaf Stadium were very pleased with the good behavior of the boys and one of them in particular said that he wished that all ball fans acted the same way.

Percy G'Lewington, bus driver for the trip, gave the boys a few pointers in the art of bus riding and as a result the boys enjoyed the trip a lot better than they would have if they had just crammed into the bus. Mr. Lewington is a very capable driver and it is hoped that he will again be the driver for the second trip later.

Coldwell Will Deliver Address In This City

First national party leader to visit the riding in the current election campaign, Mr. M. J. Coldwell, leader of the C.C.F. party, will address a public meeting at the Belleville Collegiate auditorium on Tuesday evening, May 24th, it has been announced by the party association.

One of the founders of the C.C.F. party in Canada, Mr. Coldwell will speak in the interest of Arthur Cole, C.C.F. candidate for Hastings South.

Born in Devon, England, Mr. Coldwell attended Exeter College and there developed his first interest in politics. He trained as a teacher and then came to Canada in 1910 and took his first school at Dowling, Alberta. In 1913 he returned to England where he married Nora Dunsford, daughter of a daily newspaper editor.

Returning to Canada for the second time, Mr. Coldwell became a school principal at Regina and in 1925 first entered politics as a candidate for the Progressive party.

Mr. Coldwell took a prominent part in the organizing activities which led to the formation of the C.C.F. in 1932, becoming Saskatchewan leader for the party and running as a candidate in the 1934 elections The following year he was elected to represent the constituency of Rosetown-Biggar in the Federal House of Commons at his first seat in parliament.

Upon the death of J. S. Woodsworth in 1942 he was elected national leader of the C.C.F. and has been re-elected at the conventions and other matters. The mothers are also advised to take their children to the clinic to have a general check-up and for vaccination against smallpox and diphtheria toxois, if not already given. Dental check-up is also recommended.

H.S. Principal Honored By Pupils, Friends

Tweed (Special) — A capacity wishing many more years of service at St. Carthage's School on Friday night when a presentation to Mr. T. E. Moffat of the Tweed either place.

appointed supervisor of the new school area.

Dr. J. B. Bateman of Belleville and a graduate of 1929 made the presentation. Mr. John Wilson of Thrasher of Belleville, on behalf of the staff and the members of the Board presented Mr. Moffat with a desk and chair.

In his remarks Mr. Bateman paid of the pleasure of working with Mr. Moffat and the co-operation he had received.

Mr. Moffat was taken completely by surprise but made a very suitable and feeling reply.

Letters had been sent out to all pupils of past years, by Mrs. T. N. Beatty, who had graduated from the school and is now teaching and as principal. Over 400 return letters were received from Canada and the United States and Ontario congratulating Mr. Moffat. Outstanding letters were received from the pupils and the ex-pupils to Mrs. Beatty.

The commencement program featured singing by the pupils and Arthur Violet which portrayed a restaurant scene. Those taking part in the scene showed a great understanding and knowledge of French conversation and helped to make the whole evening a huge success.

KIWANIS MEET THURSDAY EVENING

Members of the Kiwanis Club of Belleville and their regular luncheon meeting will not be held on Tuesday as is the usual custom due to Empire Day, a public holiday the meeting is to be held in the Bridge Hotel at 6.30 p.m. on Thursday of this week.

MAY ASK PERMISSION TO PRESENT PETITION

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—The Toronto Bar Association will apply to Labor Minister Daley for permission to prosecute the unions involved in the walkout of 6,000 building tradesmen here unless the strike deadlock is broken soon, Thomas Beatlie, chairman of the association's industrial relations committee, said Sunday night. The work stoppage has affected nearly 60 building projects in Toronto and tied up an estimated $80,000,000 in industrial and commercial construction.

Land-Slides Cause Trucker's Death, Damage to Roads

Val D'Or, Que., May 23 (CP) — A series of land-slides, which started two weeks ago causing the death of a truck driver, have caused many thousands of dollars damage to the main road linking Montreal with northwestern Quebec mining districts, Highways Department officials said today.

Two slides have occurred 60 miles south of here on the highway across the network of rivers at the headwaters of the Ottawa River along 2,000 feet of roadway.

The slides have buried the body of Lionel Gauthier, Ville Lemoniel truck driver, whose truck was carried into the Chocochouane River a fortnight ago.

Since then the riding waters, pent up by a dam opened last September, have weakened the black earth and sand embankments.

Traffic over the highway has had to be re-routed through Northern Ontario.

TICKET SCALPING PROBE

New York, May 23 — (AP)—A second Shubert theatre — this one handling the hit musical "Kiss Me Kate" — came into New York City's ticket - scalping investigation today. Investigation Commissioner John M. Murtagh subpoenaed the box - office treasurer, Irvin Engel, and records of the Century Theatre for appearance before a grand jury to report that show tickets are selling as high as $60 a seat.

COINCIDENCE

Coincidence, chance, fate or what one may call it, does happen. Out of the infinite number of possibilities of events happening, there happens just the one that surprises the reader. Such a story is related in the Hamilton Spectator, which comments as follows:

"It is hard to convince some people that fact is often stranger than fiction, or that circumstances can string themselves together in a way that defies explanation.

"Two New York policemen were riding leisurely in a cruiser car shortly after seven o'clock the other morning. It was raining. The night had been a quiet one. They would be off duty in something less than an hour.

"Suddenly a dark blob of oil hit the windshield. It came from the elevated railway overhead, and it had to land smack right on the windshield of all places! Had the weather been dry that blotch of oil might not have caused them any trouble. But it ran over every inch of the glass, and the mechanical wiper, already in operation, only made the mess worse.

"They stopped to get a rag from one of the seat pockets, but there was nary a rag in the vehicle, front or rear, which was most unusual. One officer suggested that the car go slowly while he scanned the curbs for a rag. There was almost sure to be one lying about in this neighborhood.

"A block further on a rag was seen lying just off the curb. It proved to be a soiled, knotted handkerchief. As the patrolman walked back to the cruiser he began to untie the knots. It was fresh; it contained almost twelve thousand dollars in bills, $11,958 to be exact. An Associated Press dispatch to the Spectator subsequently reported that a deaf mute laid claim to the small fortune.

"Had this sequence of events appeared in the manuscript of a short story, it is more than likely that most magazine editors would tell the author was trying to wrench the laws of form of coincidence from the socket. Pure corn, they might pronounce it, and reach for a rejection slip."

Such a coincidence is not a single instance. For the paths of sequences of different events may cross one another as in this case. Of course it was likely someone was to find that tied up handkerchief but it might have been that it would have been ground into the dust on the track or covered and so have fallen to rot and decay. No one knows all the facts and the queer instances of fate or coincidence.

THUNDER AND LIGHTNING

Thunderstorms are one of the most impressive of the demonstrations of the mysteries and powers of nature and its elements. Therefore to many persons they are proofs of the elemental powers of the material universe, and at the same time create fears. There is in lightning something to terrify man for to man it appears as nature in all its mystery and might.

Yet the causes of being struck by lightning have even been calculated and they are few, only one chance in 375,000, according to a statement of the New Jersey Medical Society in giving advice to people who to do in time of an electrical storm. It advises that where thunder is heard the danger of being hit by the bolt in past for sound travels much less rapidly than lightning.

Everyone has read of animals in the field being struck and killed in herds in the shade of a tree which has attracted them but also the bolt.

It has often been emphasized that the safest place is really in the open even if it is the wettest. Better far to get wet in an electrical storm than to take refuge under a tree. The air above the tree is the lightning's highway down to earth by way of the tree and the shelter of its branches and leaves.

When the lightning flashes and the thunder rolls, the safest place is said to be on a boat for the water is a conductor of electricity but the boat is not. While houses are struck at times, such instances are not as frequent as might be expected.

Shakespeare says, we are creatures that look before and after; the more surprising that we do not look round a little and see what is passing under our very eyes.—Carlyle.

JUST FOLKS

PENALTY OF RETIREMENT

He retired a year ago and he should be rested now,
But I noticed when we met there were furrows in his brow.
And his voice seemed rather weak, and I thought him thinner, too.
"I am all worn out," he said, "I have so much work to do!
She's begun to clean the house. I have beaten rugs outdoors
I've been in my knees all day putting wax upon the floors.
"I've hung blankets out to air. I've washed ceilings and the walls,
Taken clothes every room and I've stacked them in the halls.
The piano I have moved, and built a polished pantry shelves,
For she thought with me at home we could do the work ourselves
I have blisters on my knees and lumbago in my hips,
And I'm tired of counting sheets and embroidered pillow slips.
"I have eaten, standing up, bits of ham and beef and veal.
It has been a week or more since I've had a decent meal;
I've washed windows, in and out. I have dusted and swept,
Since the beds were taken down on an army cot I've slept.
I am sorry I retired; and although the wish is vain,
I'd give everything I own to go back to work again."

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

May 22rd, 1920

It is understood that MacKenzie and Company, feed merchants, are going to install an up-to-date crushing plant. There is need of a grist mill here to handle grain for the farmers.

Mr. W. S. Martin of Stirling was in town today.

Belleville has been chosen as a centre for an Entomological Laboratory by the Dominion Government and the Carman house at the corner of Dundas Street and Bleecker Avenue has been purchased for the accommodation necessary. The place will be remodelled and extended.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles Frost of this city are spending a few days in Toronto.

30 YEARS AGO

May 23rd, 1910

At the annual meeting of the Bay of Quinte Press Association which was held at Hotel Quinte the following officers were elected: President, G. C. Young, Trenton; Vice President, C. M. Aiken, Picton; Secretary-Treasurer, J. O. Herity, Belleville; Executive Committee, Charles Watson, Madoc; H. W. Sabine, Marmora, and A. E. Calnan, Picton.

The old horse stage which has served as the connecting link between L'Amable and Port Hope at for the past twenty years, has been replaced by an up-to-date motor bus.

The handsome new altar in memory of the service and sacrifice of soldier members of Christ Church here was installed in that church recently.

40 YEARS AGO

May 23rd, 1900

There will be a display of fireworks in the D. & D. Institute today.

Anglers in twelve boats competed in the competition yesterday. H. Bell and R. Hubbs won the Chown prize for the heaviest stock bass, also the prize for the heaviest lot of sun fish. R. Tuttle and W. Cryster won the Dr. Deacon's prize for 12 heaviest perch. No pike nor pickerel were caught.

Dr. Hudson and Mrs. Hudson of Hinchin were in town today.

Mr. D. W. Kain of Montreal, an old Belleville boy, is home on a short visit.

Mr. H. M. Tait of the Bank of Montreal here has been transferred to the bank's branch in Lindsay.

Mr. Hugh Walker is spending today with friends in Shannonville.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

My late father-in-law, the Rev. James Murray, D.D., never bought a golf ball in his life. He found them.

Being a clergyman, he could not afford to belong to a golf club, even in the more modest era of thirty years ago. But he got his golf during the summer, on one of those cow-pasture golf links that flourished around all summer resorts in the east. He was a thoughtful, thrifty man. Where ordinary golfers mark down the lie of their ball, after each stroke, and then walk diligently and scientifically to it, Dr. Murray would, after marking down his ball, proceed in a patient men might abandon a ball.

It was astonishing the number he found. As the years went by, his family could not determine whether he got more out of the golf or out of finding balls. In a sense, it befitted him, as a clergyman, to seek in the waste places for these small treasures. The simile was one that he reflected in the impatience, the impatience, the want of Christian economy responsible for the abandonment of these golf balls. He would spend the evening re-painting carefully his day's treasure trove, reduced to anonymity, they would be cheerfully given to the fellow clergymen at the summer colony. A bride, perhaps!—because of the sound of golf with Dr. Murray was a slow business.

He never went for a reflective walk along the beach without bearing home some pine knots from the driftwood. Whatever road or path he took, yielded up a few golf balls, some worth salvage.

He was of the last of many generations of thrifty Canadians.

Letters to the Editor

Says Ex-servicemen United on Question

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

In a recently published letter in your columns from Mr. Kenneth Smith of Smith's Shuffle re the Belleville School Boards appointment to the vacancy caused by one public schools in which he gives his personal opinion and states not feel that it represents the majority of veterans' opinion.

May I point out that the total membership of the organizations under whose direction the several letters of protest were published represents more than a majority of veterans and that they speak collectively. My organization alone speaks for nearly six hundred ex-service men who are united on this question. The Canadian Legion Branch 99 and the 34th Battery Association who have a large membership passed resolutions of protest re the appointment. They were ill-advised to give his personal opinion in face of the united stand of the local organizations and especially when he is not a tax payer.

The fair treatment of the veterans upon discharge in World War II was due to the efforts of the ex-service men and the Canadian Legion Branch 99 and the 34th Battery Association who with a large membership passed resolutions of protest re the appointments

PRIME MINISTER PREDICTS WIN FOR HIS PARTY

Intimates Member From Quebec If Elected Will be In Cabinet

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, May 23 (CP)—Prime Minister St. Laurent carried his message of national unity into Quebec during the weekend and thousands of his fellow French-speaking Canadians heard him speak in their language.

Today he is in Saguenay country, a hive of industrial growth in from the St. Lawrence River's northern bank. During the week-end he visited 13 cities, towns and hamlets on the river's south shore.

He told 2,500 people in Rimouski Saturday that his Liberal party will go back into office June 27 with an enlarged majority. He intimated he will take Rimouski's member in the last parliament, Gleason Belleau, into the cabinet.

Mr. St. Laurent never before in his campaign had gone so far as to say the government would be re-elected with an increased majority. Previously he indicated that if the Liberals did not receive a majority, no other party would obtain a majority.

At the village of St. Pascal, a Union Nationale supporter of Premier Duplessis in the Quebec legislature, Joseph Plourde, sat with those around Mr. St. Laurent and shook his hand when he finished.

Mr. St. Laurent saw in himself, the son of a Quebec village storekeeper, proof that race represents no obstacle to progress and he held out the possibility that Canada may some day have as her prime Minister a man who grew up in a Newfoundland village.

Of the Atlantic pact and the security it offers the world, he said the unity of its 12 member-nations should be paralleled by a Canadian unity permitting progress and giving all Canadians the benefits of the widest possible distribution of the country's bounty.

"Union means strength," he said, "in the national as well as the international field."

Mr. St. Laurent said his cabinet has never been surpassed in calibre in Canadian history and he maintained that the Progressive Conservatives have few leaders, a situation which opened the way to totalitarianism.

TRADE MINISTER CRITICIZED BY PC LEADER DREW

Says He Placed Many Civil Servants in Embarrassing Position

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Metcalfe, May 23 (CP)—George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, stopped off at this village 20 miles south of Ottawa Saturday night and charged that Trade Minister Howe was placing Canadian public servants in an "embarrassing and unsatisfactory position."

"Not better example could be offered of the embarrassing and satisfactory position in which many conscientious public servants now are placed by the present government," said Mr. Drew. "than Mr. Howe's action in connection with the North Star aircraft operated by Trans-Canada Air Lines."

"He made one of his typically irresponsible statements in which he had said about the difficulties being encountered in connection with the engine installed in those machines under some arrangement made by Mr. Howe.

Howe Charges Given

(Mr. Howe charged Thursday that Mr. Drew and George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail and the Toronto Telegram, made "phoney" statements in connection with the structure and performance of Canada's North Stars.)

Mr. Drew said that Mr. Howe has been joined by Gordon McGregor, President of T.C.A., "in an attempt to convey the impression that no difficulty was being encountered in connection with the engines in these machines."

Turning to the international trade picture, Mr. Drew said both Prime Minister St. Laurent and Mr. Howe have made statements on Canada's external trade "that have no relation to the facts."

In March this year, he said, Canada's balance of foreign trade slumped nearly $51,000,000 as compared with March, 1948. Marked declines were shown by Canada's exports of bacon and eggs to Britain, continued Mr. Drew. "So the story goes with lumber, fish, cheese, apples and most of our important exports."

"In the face of these facts," he said, "Mr. St. Laurent tells us that Canada's trade outlook is far brighter than it was at the end of the war."

U.K. Railways Face Possibilitiy of 'More General' Strike

London, May 23— (Reuters)—Britain's nationalized railroads face the possibility of a "more general" strike, a railroad union official said Sunday night after a token Sunday stoppage had reduced main - line services to five per cent of normal in the northeastern region. The regional stoppage, which also caused cancellation of 60 per cent of local services, was the first of a series of 24 - hour Sunday strikes planned by engineers and firemen in protest against introduction of a duties scheme requiring them to spend nights away from home.

LUMINOUS PAINT USED

Fort Erie, Ont., May 23 (CP)— All licensed bicycles here are having the rear mudguard painted with luminous paint — free. It's part of the Junior Chamber of Commerce safety campaign and Saturday saw a surprising number of cyclists lined up for their licenses.

Baptist Church, 123 Years Old, Destroyed by Fire

Clarence, Ont, May 21. (CP)—Fire which broke out shortly before dawn today razed the Baptist church in this village, 26 miles east of Ottawa and four nearby structures with a total loss of more than $100,000.

The blaze, believed to have broken out in an ice house near the church, left homeless the family of Arthur E. Wilson, 87-year-old storekeeper, destroying also a general store, stable and warehouse, all owned by Mr. Wilson.

The church, built 123 years ago, was one of the oldest in the Ottawa district and was a well-known landmark.

Provincial Constables C. B. Creaswell and Paul Laperriere of nearby Rockland were on the scene within a few minutes but the Rockland fire apparatus was not called since saving of the buildings was a hopeless task from the outset. Only two wells were available and these could not be reached because of the intense heat from the fire.

Members of the Wilson family managed to save a quantity of unused money orders and cash in the general store office at the rear of the general store and also most of the contents of the dwelling.

Mr. Wilson, two work horses and three calves lost their lives in the stable.

Members of the family left homeless by the fire included Mr. and Mrs. Wilson, three daughters, Lacey, Florence and Mary Wilson, and a son, Clyde. Mr. Wilson said he carried no insurance on the buildings.

Donald, and Miss Bella Lee, of Madoc, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Smith.

Mr. and Mrs. Harold Parr of Toronto, spent the weekend with relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. William Doyle, of Peterborough, spent the weekend with relatives here.

Mrs. Percy Gray and daughter, Jennie, spent Sunday with friends in Brownsville.

Major Percy Gray and Mr. J. W. Rickey attended a legion zone meeting in Oshawa on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Jack Barrett, of Belleville, spent the weekend with relatives here.

Miss Mary Foley, of Frankford, spent the weekend with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Foley.

Mrs. Roy Shepherd, of Toronto, is visiting her sister Mrs. T. Young.

Mrs. William Hughes and Mr. Ted Hughes of Belleville, spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Hughes.

Rogation Sunday was observed at St. Paul's with special prayers and hymns and an appropriate address by the rector Rural Dean J. M. Brownell, officiating. Flowers on the altar were the gift of Mrs. Boyd in memory of her husband, the late S. C. Boyd.

ST. PAUL'S G.A.

Marmora—St. Paul's Girls' Auxiliary with four leaders and nine members, was one of 15 branches to attend the Diocesan rally of the Girls' Auxiliary in the Lower Parish Hall, Kingston, on Saturday.

In the course of the program, the local girls enacted the Parable of the Prodigal Son and Ruth Tittsell took second honors in her recitation of the Beatitudes.

The Marmora girls also took with them their exhibit of the girls' work to be part of the Diocesan exhibition and enjoyed their outing after lunch, it being the first time for the majority to visit the city.

RABBITS AT MAGICIANS' BALL IN TORONTO

Toronto, May 22 (CP)—Rabbits popped out of hats and yards of silk cloth appeared from nowhere at the magicians' annual ball in Toronto on Saturday. But the most mystifying thing was the way magicians pulled at the similar tricks of their colleagues. Said one: "I'm not what you do, but the way that you do it."

C.C.F. LEADER STUMPS HUSTINGS CENTRAL CANADA

M. J. Coldwell Says He Was Surprised at Reception in Maritimes

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Sydney, N. S., May 23 (CP)— M. J. Coldwell, National C. F. leader, prepared to stump the hustings of central Canada today after winding up a six-day Maritime jaunt with the declaration that the C. C. F. would re-impose the excess profits tax, encourage expansion of the co-operative movement and socialize certain key industries.

Mr. Coldwell spoke here and in nearby Sydney Mines Saturday night to complete his meetings which took him thus far, particularly with a meeting in Charlottetown where he estimated attendance at 600, something of a surprise in a province that has never elected a C. C. F. member.

The 61-year-old C. C. F. leader, whose party is not represented federally in Quebec, will deliver one address in that province, speaking in Montreal tonight. He then heads into Ontario, with Belleville his first stop.

Outlining party policies which he said were aimed at one thing — the welfare of all the people in Canada — Mr. Coldwell said "Put us in power and we will re-impose the excess profits tax . . . we're in favor of a fair profit for business and industry, but we are opposed to the unreasonably high profits of some companies."

The C.C.F. believed the co-op movement would be the most important instrument in bringing democracy into Canadian life and would form an integral part of the economy under a C. C. F. government along with socialization of basic industries. Mr. Coldwell named these as the banks, transportation, basic steel, coal, farm machinery and meat packing.

Socialization of these key industries was vital to pave the way for economic planning to benefit all the people and eliminate exploitation by monopolistic interests.

No Foundation to Report One of Missing Found

Halifax, May 23 (CP)—RCAF officials said Saturday there was no foundation to a report that one of the seven aboard a missing air force Beechcraft Expediter had been found. Officials said the search for the plane, which disappeared a month ago today on a flight from Rockcliffe airport near Ottawa to Chatham, the safety of the men is diminishing steadily.

WEDDINGS

McCANN—BISHOP

Marmora.—A pretty wedding was solemnized on Saturday afternoon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Bishop, when their daughter, Honora, became the bride of William Garnet McCann, son of Mrs. McCann, and the late John McCann, of Malone. The ceremony was performed by Rev. D. Cragg, B.A., B.D., of St. St. Andrew's United Church. White lilac and spring flowers and white streamers were used in the decoration for the ceremony.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride looked charming in a floor length gown of white satin, with lace insertions. Her veil of tulle illusion was held in place by a coronet of lily-of-the-valley. She carried a bouquet of red roses.

Her bridesmaid was Alice McCann, of Peterborough, sister of the groom, who wore blue taffeta, and a Margaret Rose headdress. She carried a bouquet of pink roses.

William McGarvey of Peterborough, acted as the groom's best man.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held in the home of the bride's parents, when about 50 guests were present. The bride's mother wore cameo blue crepe with black accessories, and a corsage of red roses. She was assisted by the groom's mother, who was wearing a gown of grey crepe with black accessories and a corsage of pink roses.

Mr. and Mrs. McCann left on a trip to Ottawa, and other eastern points, the bride travelling in a blue crepe dress with black accessories. They will reside in Malone.

Out-of-town guests included: Mr. and Mrs. Donald Foster and daughter, Irene, and Mr. and Mrs. Bert Weatherall of Oshawa; Mr. and Mrs. George Reeves and Mr. and Mrs. H. Hennessey and daughter, Sandra, of Belleville; Miss Jean Lough, and William McGarvey, of Peterborough; Mr. and Mrs. George Bishop and son, Clarence, Mr. and Mrs. Jack Bishop and daughter, Shirley of Cloyne.

GOOD MANNERS

Her parents should announce her engagement first

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

In the first part of June there are several very, very important dates for us . . . my husband's birthday, our wedding anniversary, our son's and daughter's birthday (they are twins), and now we have just learned that the wedding anniversary of the parents of our daughter's fiance comes in the same week as our anniversary. My daughter's engagement has not been announced yet, and her fiance's family, who live quite a distance from here, have invited us to come to visit them on a weekend which includes several of these dates! On the Saturday evening of that weekend the young man's parents would like to give a dinner for our family and their family and several intimate friends of theirs, and have my daughter wear her engagement ring for the first time at this dinner. (This plan is really supposed to be a surprise to my husband and me but we have found out about it.) Would this really be proper for them to do at their house?—M.S.N.

No, this would not be at all proper. It is the right and privilege and social responsibility of you and your husband to announce your daughter's engagement. . . this is an absolutely definite rule, and the parents of your daughter's fiance should not even consider taking over this privilege which belongs to you and your husband. Of course I am sure that their intentions are charmingly and generously hospitable, and that they undoubtedly have no idea that they are taking from you the privilege that belongs to you. If your daughter prefers not to have you and your husband give a party to announce her engagement (and it isn't at all necessary to have an engagement announcement party), you and your husband may simply send a formal announcement to the newspaper, your daughter and her fiance may tell or write the happy news to their relatives and friends, and your daughter wears her engagement ring on the day the engagement is publicly announced. With this announcement procedure accomplished by you and your family may go ahead with a party to be given by the fiances' parents to celebrate the engagement announcement, not to make the announcement.

Large Wedding invitations should be folded with engraving inside

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I have been told that there are two correct ways to fold wedding invitations before inserting them into the inner envelopes. Are they both correct, or, if not, which one is correct? (a) The engraving folded inside, or (b) so that the invitation can be read as it is taken out of the envelope?

Bride-to-be

When the invitations are large size that are to be folded before being inserted in the inner envelopes, they should be folded so that the engraving is on the inside of this centre fold. When the invitations are of the small size that fits unfolded into the envelope the engraving is, of course, on the front page of the double sheet.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

She's better off without this man

Dear Miss Fairfax:

What do you think of a man who says he loves you and then goes and makes love to another woman?

I was married but was never very happy, and even though I love this man, I refused to go out with him until I received my divorce. Perhaps I was at fault then.

This man got angry at me because he called me on the very day I was having my tonsils out and had no way of letting him know I wouldn't be home. I was home the next time he called, but he thought I was out because the car was gone. So he wrote me a nasty letter and said goodbye. Now he is going out with this other woman. If he is happy with her I will be happy for him, but somehow I am heartsick over him. Should I write to him? Maybe he will give me another chance. My friend says if she acted a man she would go after him.

Mary

Dear "Mary:"

Why should you ask this man to give you "another chance?" It isn't you who has done anything that requires forgiveness. He is the one, if anyone, who should ask for another chance, and I think you would be very foolish to write him and humble yourself in any such way.

As I see it, you will be far better off anyhow if he never comes back to you. A little voice clear he is a selfish and childish person.

Mature love doesn't come at 13

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I was 13 I met a man who was eleven years older than I. He was terribly interesting. My parents didn't approve of him because of the difference of our ages. But he saw me frequently and was always very nice and he was a great freak like other boys I went with. He didn't attempt to kiss me for about three months, and when he did it was heaven.

Now we have moved away and to go out with boys my own age or a year or so older because they seem so young. I don't enjoy being with them. Do you think I have matured faster than most girls at 15 and that I am old enough to be really in love?

Do you think this man would have wasted his time with me if he hadn't loved me? People who know him say he hasn't gone out with any girl since I left. I don't think he would have kissed me and been so respectful if he didn't love me. I have tried to forget him but I find that I don't want to as I've never felt this way about any boy.

What do you think I should do?

"Blues"

Dear Blues:

No, I'm afraid I don't believe that you are old enough to be in love, and I certainly hope that you won't do anything so foolish as to try and revive your friendship with this older man.

I think that your feeling for him is that of a daughter toward a devoted father. It may be that your own father has not been sufficiently loving and thoughtful toward you to give you that sort of feeling.

If you are unusually mature for your age, then I believe that if you will try and look at things from this point of view, you will agree with me that you had better wait awhile and go out with other boys as much as possible before giving serious thought to being in love.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Give Your Muscles Week to Do

If a girl has a neat figure she should make every effort to keep it. If she has a poor figure, she should do some remodeling; it is easily accomplished by being mindful of the diet, avoiding fat-building food elements, and by giving her muscles a daily workout. It is a pity that the general attitude toward exercise is unnatural; it is not downright natural. Activity is a law of life; without it one has little ambition and the energy motors quit functioning.

Lazy girls who love their soft cushions, who never walk if they can ride, who won't stand if they can sit, can expect that body flaws will get flabby. What then? A host of fat cells will deposit upon them. There will be curves where curves should not be. In the future they will register an morse. Why didn't they make an effort to retain the youthful shape?

Exercise has a beneficient physical effect. It sends heat to the skin surface and the pores cleanse their channels with reserve vigor—a good thing for the complexion. It stimulates appetite, helps the digestive organs to carry on.

Properly regulated, it creates a sense of buoyancy and well-being. It has a calming effect upon the mind, chasing out worry bugs.

The woman who lies on her neat waistline would do well to walk a mile or two every day. Doing deep breathing exercises as she steps along. The abdominal muscles will contract and, by this tightening process, will grow firmer, discouraging fat. Blame may have been responsible for the policy of expansion, but it is not by one's figure go to seed. It is equally senseless not to do something about it when the fine lines have departed.

Many women make it a practice to have a ten minute workout before the morning bath. Any exercise that trims the body at the waistline, either forward-and-back or from side to side, will diminish-ize. It is the mid-section that needs muscle toning. The arms and legs get a certain amount of activity through ordinary movements.

A simple exercise, one that is excellent for thigh reducing is producing is this one: stand tall, chest lifted, head balanced. Extend the hands out on a line with the shoulders for body balance. Up on the toes. Drop the toes until the buttocks are resting on the heels. Down on the heels, up on the toes and repeat. You may have a few tumbles at first, but what of it? A more attractive silhouette will be your reward, and that is worth the effort.

A more attractive silhouette will be your reward

Georgette Returns

For day or evening wear

By VERA WINSTON

ONE BY ONE, back they come, those fabrics that loomed so large or shrunk out before the war. The latest to return is georgette, so delightful for summer clothes. It is used for this day-into-evening ensemble. Black georgette dotted in pink is the color scheme. A little waist length jacket with curved revers and cuffs just meets the shirred hipband of the skirt. The dress has wide shoulder straps and a large or shrunk out before the war. The latest to return is georgette, so delightful for summer clothes. It is used for this day-into-evening ensemble. Black georgette dotted in pink is the color scheme. A little waist length jacket with curved revers and cuffs just meets the shirred hipband of the skirt. The dress has wide shoulder straps and a full flare, repeating the idea again at the hips. The skirt is gently flared.

Fashion Flashes

A good and steady friend is the well-handled really good faille suit. Heavy faille in wool and silk makes a handsome, softly-tailored suit, the skirt with side fullness, the brief, nipped jacket with set bands at bust and hips and a front panel effect. Jacket is lined in very thin black silk.

Set off your dark suit or dress with a very colorful or white hat. Half hats made entirely of tiny flowers with bow knots of contrasting velvet ribbon appear on nice days and for informal evening events. Violets shaded from light mauve to deep purple, and lilies in pink and white are popular, sometimes set off by tiny pink silk or velvet roses.

Straws in the wind of fashion include Milan straw hats teamed up with matching bags and shoes, the latter sometimes trimmed or handled with leather, usually brown calf. The set has been worked out in various wanted colors, and is a West Coast promotion.

It isn't simple to select a coat from the wide variety available. A good choice might well be blonde-brown gabardine town coat on fitted lines. Tailored reverses are high placed and notched, waist has a self belt, and the skirt is moderately full. Turn-back cuffs flare to a point.

Have you noticed how the calot is coming in again? It was inevitable, with short hair, that the tiny flat skull cap would have a revival. We've noticed tiny flat flower calots by day, and, for evening, calots of black velvet or straw and velvet. One of the black straw is velvet bound and has loops of the velvet in back. A good choice for theatre wear, since it needs not be doffed.

For that "something different" in the way of a suit, one store is showing a group of navy woolens with matching stole. The latter is embroidered all over with matching soutache braid to match the detail on the suit collar and pockets. Stole is reversible with a plain side.

TABERNACLE GOOD COMPANIONS

The annual pot luck supper of the Tabernacle United Church Good Companions Club was held Friday evening in the church parlor with a good attendance, and an abundance of good things to eat. The centre piece of the head table was the silver trophy won by the club's afternoon team in the Bowling League.

Mr. Merritt Hackett presided for the brief business period which consisted of appointing Mr. Harry Brode-Jr., as the club's representative to the Finance Commitee of the Church Renovation project, and Mrs. Ethel Ferguson was appointed to the Church Birthday Calendar committee.

In the president's retiring remarks, Mr. Hackett stated he was indeed pleased by the co-operation from the executive, two meetings a month had been held with good fellowship, and financial success. $140 was voted to the Renovation program. The following slate of officers for the new Autumn term was accepted:

Thanks and appreciation were extended to the retiring executive by the new president.

The Reverend F. R. Harbeck stated the evening had enjoyed very unique and successful programs, and he hoped the new executive would co-operate with the church officials and that the "Club will go forward to higher heights than it has known."

Dressmaker Worsted Coat

For wear over prints

CRISP WORSTED in either black or navy is used for a suave dressmaker coat, ideal for wear over the prints. Here is a cut-standing detail in the deep shawl collar, slightly stiffened inside to make it stand up. The princess lines are broken only by the flapped hip pockets. Stiffening is also used in the cuffs.

Trenton Flyers Defeat Electrics In Opener 11-6

The Trenton RCAF Flyers opened the 1948 Belleville Baseball League season with a convincing 11-6 victory over the Northern Electric squad Saturday afternoon at the Fair Grounds.

Pregame fanfare saw His Worship Mayor D. L. Storey pitch the first ball to A. B. Hunt of the Northern Electric Company. Ballplayer Harry Rollins made proceedings somewhat by tossing off on the mayor's initial shot for an inside the park home run down the third base line.

Before the game members of the Belleville Fire Department demonstrated the new aerial ladder to the fans present.

The Flyers pounded on the slants of Bobby Bunton for nine hits, and took advantage of all Northern's errors to pit away to an early lead which they never relinquished. Labey, effective righthander for the Flyers, had little difficulty with the Northern batters getting them down with six hits and as many runs.

Flyers opened the scoring in the second frame counting two runs on a walk, a double to right field by Kaweckl, and a single by Marcelo. Adding three more in the third on two hits, a walk, and three Electric errors.

Northern came back for one run in their half of the third on a walk and two Flyer miscues. A double by Coyer and a single by Reeves gave the Northern squad another counter in the bottom of the sixth.

Opened Wide Margin

Flyers opened up a wide margin in the seventh and eighth counting one in the seventh on a triple by Zaleski and a fielder's choice, and three in the eighth on a walk, a single, and a double.

The Electrics counted twice in the seventh and twice in the eighth.

Best at the plate for the Flyers were Kaweckl with two for four, and Dunning and Maracle with two for five. Big gun for the Northern squad as Jed Carson with three for four.

Both pitchers went the route. Labey walked four, struck out seven, and scattered six hits for six runs. Bunton toiled in a losing cause striking out ten, walking seven, and giving up nine hits for eleven runs.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By W. R. WHEATLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Montreal, May 22 (CP)—What with cricket, hockey, basketball and golf getting all cluttered up with each other these days, sports writers found it refreshing to watch a top-notch soccer team in action.

The occasion was the Montreal Carsteel squad hosting Newcastle United Soccer Club.

It was English and the first time British professionals had played under the lights. But after a mediocre showing in the first half they opened up their bag of tricks, the ball zinged and galloped away to a 4-1 victory over the Montreal all-star team.

How It Was Done

Let Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson tell you about it:—

"The Scots, like the Britishers on the attack, their unbelievable ball control, was something at which to marvel. They played the English game of long passes and the 'carpet game,' which is the Scottish style of short passes, to versatile perfection.

"Their head-work was terrific. What Willie Hoppe does with a billiard ball, these Britishers did with the white soccer ball.

"It was much like the Cook-Boucher-Cook trio in ice hockey hey-day making those pattern plays with the puck, only a great deal more difficult and with more variety."

Baz (Montreal Star) O'Meara figures the Newcastle United boys "didn't have too much trouble asserting supremacy."

It was a pleasing exhibition, says Baz, and the visitors "will be formidable opponents for all teams once they have become acclimatized."

Brew Billingsalan

Now back to Fergie and a Scot who sat behind him, assuredly a thorough hockey convert as well as a soccer devotee.

Asking Fergie's ears off, the Scot roared, "in a voice rich with the tang of the heather and perhaps, as well, redolent of wee drapple of the 'Scottish national beverage'"—

"Up, Montreal, and out from behind your sin blue line."

Anything Can Happen in Golf

Philadelphia, May 22 (CP)—It just goes to show you: Anything can happen in golf.

A mere slat won the $15,000 Philadelphia Inquirer tournament Sunday from a field studded with many of the sport's top stars.

And Young Joe Kirkwood, Jr., in Hollywood he's the movie version of Joe Palooka — did it in a fashion that convinced spectators and opponents alike. His 276 score for 72 holes strikes under par — a competitive record for Whitemarsh Valley Country Club's 6,670-yard layout.

Along the victory road he shot a 66 on the second round that also was a stroke better than the old course record.

Johnny Palmer of Badin, N.C., carded 280 to pick up $1,000 second money, Kirkwood got $2,500.

Back of these two were Bobby Locke, the South African, with 281; Fred Haas, Jr., New Orleans, 282, and Lloyd Mangrum, Chicago, 283.

Two U. S. Soldiers Pardoned by Gottwald

Prague, May 23 — (AP)—Two United States soldiers sentenced to long prison terms as spies have been pardoned by President Klement Gottwald, the United States Embassy said Sunday. They are recruit Clarence R. Hill, 21, and recruit George R. Jones, 22. They were marked "missing" sent without leave from their units when they wandered across the Czech border from Germany last Dec. 1.

FINNISH PRESIDENT PARDONS TANNER AND 5 OTHERS

Helsinki, May 23 — (Reuters) — President Juho Passikivi Sunday pardoned Finland's wartime premier and wartime finance minister, Vaino Tanner and Edvin Linkomies. They were imprisoned in 1945 for having led the country into war. The two already had been given parole after serving half of their 5½-year sentences.

TWO GERMAN PRISONERS ESCAPE LANDSBERG PRISON

Frankfurt, Germany, May 23 — (AP)—Ally Wipfinger, serving a life sentence for participation in the operation of Dachau concentration-camp, and Werner Gruenes, serving a 20-year term for duties at Buchenwald concentration camp, escaped Saturday from Landsberg prison, the United States Army announced Sunday. The men fled from a guarded work detail.

Mediators Expect Attempts to End Strike will Resume

Detroit, May 23 (AP)—Attempts to end the 17-day Ford strike stood still today as both sides sat back and waited for the government to bring them together again.

Federal mediators said they were "confident" that sessions would be resumed soon following a 24-hour cooling-off period.

Negotiations ended abruptly shortly before 1 a.m. EDT today. They were still deadlocked after 11 days of heated debate.

Both the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) and the Ford Motor Company accepted a mediators' proposal for the cooling off period. Each side said it would be willing to return later to the bargaining table at government request.

The break-up followed the union's demand that Ford begin immediate negotiations on a new contract. This would have meant double-barrelled talks — sessions with talks on the strike issue continuing.

The strike, which began May 5, was called over a union charge of production "speed-up." Some 63,000 Ford workers in two Detroit plants walked out. Almost all of Ford's 160,000 production employees now are affected.

U.A.W. President Walter Reuther threatened to end all talks earlier today if Ford would not agree to contract bargaining immediately. Ford still refused and negotiations weret halted.

Recess

"At the request of the government, we are not breaking off but recessing," Reuther said. "This is a nice way of walking out of here." Observers believed the statement was a softening of the union's original threat.

The two big problems in the dispute, the union and company agreed, still remained. They centred around - two union demands:

1. That the company operate assembly lines so that no man at any time would be required to work above production standards. (Production standards set the amount of work that is expected of one man within a certain limit of time).

2. That no worker be required to make up production losses resulting from factors over which he has no control.

NEGRO BOXER STABBED

Buffalo, May 23 — (AP)—Howard King, 31, one - time (Negro) boxer from Detroit, was stabbed to death Saturday night in the kitchen of an east - side home. Police said a man and woman, who were seen by neighbors leaving the house, are being sought.

Soil Drifting Controlled By Strip Farming, Irrigation

Regina, May 23 — (CP)—The careful work of soil experts to prevent recurrence of the dusty 30s may be tested this year.

Leading prairie agriculturists say that, although periods of drought may recur, the destructive soil drifting of the 1930s that turned much of Saskatchewan into a wasteland of sand dunes is being controlled to a great extent by strip - farming and irrigation. The last may come in 1949, for Saskatchewan's farms need rain. Last week's heavy showers weren't enough.

As a result of a dry spring, western crop conditions looked poor little more than a week ago. Dire predictions were voiced that the "best" year of 1930 would be repeated. But early last week rain swept over most of the province and brought immediate improvement in the outlook. A good start for crops was assured.

The spectre of a drought year has not been lifted, but the outlook is more promising than it was 10 days ago, Says C. N. Dennis, superintendent of the Dominion Experimental Farm at Swift Current:

"We could very easily be on the verge of a repetition of the '30s. If we don't get 1½ inches of rain in the next three weeks, a serious condition may result."

Swift Current in Heart

Swift Current is in the heart of the 15,000,000 acres of land in Saskatchewan's southwest that took the worst beating in the dry 1930s. The light - textured soil area extends along the southwest corner of the province from Estevan into Alberta and is bounded on the northeast by the Saskatchewan River.

Much of the land which in the 1930s became a rolling ocean of sand has been reclaimed. Since 1937 seventy - six community pastures have been formed of sub-marginal land and nearly 2,500,000 acres have been covered with firmly - rooted crested wheat grass. Small-farm irrigation projects have been undertaken. Strip farming also has become more extensive, serving as a safeguard against drifting soil.

L. B. Thomson, director of the Prairie-Farm Rehabilitation Administration, says:

"Less than five per cent of the prairie crop acreage has suffered seriously so far (this year) from soil drifting.

"There has been no damage yet that can't be repaired. Unless it stays dry for the next five years — and we can't do much about that — we should not have a repetition of the '30s. The fallows that went through those grim times have learned to practice careful farming methods."

ARREST LOVE BIRD

Calgary (CP)—The sparrows' social circle in a local garden was crashed recently by a budgerigar and the sparrows did not appreciate the intrusion. A housewife found the budgie fighting with his less colorful feathered friends and turned him over to police.

TO-DAY, WE HAVE twice as many employees as five years ago because more people want more service than ever before. Eager, capable, courteous — our operators, installers, the girls in our business offices — all bring to their jobs the same friendly spirit that means better telephone service for you, makes it of greater value than most other things you buy.

In the past five years, our payroll has gone up from 20 million to over 50 million dollars. Yet, up to now, despite higher costs on all sides, there has been no increase in the basic telephone rates established 22 years ago

To-day's expansion program is breaking all records, but there are still orders we haven't been able to fill. We will keep right on working and building to make your telephone service a bigger bargain than ever — to continue to provide more and better service at the lowest possible cost.

FAMILY ALLOWANCES REGISTRATION FORM

GOOD NEWS FOR NEW CANADIANS

Your children, born abroad, now qualify for Family Allowances

after only ONE YEAR in Canada!

Now your children need no longer wait three years to obtain the benefits of Family Allowances. Now they need live in Canada only one year.

If you have in your care a child for whom you do not now receive Family Allowances, but who

- came to Canada a year or more ago
- has lived in Canada since
- is under 16 years of age
- is otherwise eligible

then you should immediately get a Family Allowances registration form from your post office — fill it out — and send it in right away to the address shown on the form.

You should do this even if you may have included this child's name in an earlier application for Family Allowances.

And you should do this immediately, because Family Allowances payments can only begin the month following the receipt of your registration form.

Tigers' Baseman Taken to Hospital As a Precaution

(By The Canadian Press)

George Kell, 'Detroit Tigers' third baseman, was taken to a Boston hospital "as a precautionary measure" Sunday after injuring his back in the Detroit-Boston American League game.

Kell stumbled over the first base bag in the third inning when Johnny Pesky booted his ground ball.

He left the game before the eighth inning shortly after trying to get Vern Stephens who had grounded to him, out at first.

Later the Tigers reported he had a sore back and was in hospital for observation.

Alouettes football club of the Big Four union Saturday announced signing of Jim Quadamatta, 21-year-old lineman with Hamilton Tigers of the C.R.U. in last year. Acquisition of Quadamatta was on recommendation of Frank Filchock, former star player coach of Tigers now with Alouettes.

At Arcadia, Calif., On Trust, the California iron horse, broke his losing streak Saturday with a close victory in the $30,000 Golden Gate Breeders Handicap. Showing the form that made him the greatest money-winning California bred horse in history, the five-year-old chestnut caught the flying Solidarity at the finish to win by a nose in a photo finish. On trust collected $33,700 for the win, boosting his all time earnings in 57 trips to the post to $461,170.

At Paris Louise Brough, the United States' second ranking feminine player, was beaten, and Dick Gonzales, United States men's champion, narrowly escaped defeat Sunday in fourth round matches of the French International Tennis Tournament. Miss Brough, Wimbledon champion and finalist in the United States title tournament, was upset by Jurry, British Wightman Cup star 6-8, 9-7, 6-3. Gonzales, 31-year-old ace from Los Angeles, was carried to the limit by Jean Blanzy, Swedish Davis Cup player, before pulling out with a 15-13, 6-4, 6-8, 6-8, 6-4 victory.

Edmonton Eskimos of the Western Interprovincial Football Union Saturday signed Pat West, star California halfback to play with the club this season. West joins East Bay, former Los Angeles Rams backfielder, as the second of Esks imports.

At Doncaster, England, the Earl of Derby's four-year-old Alycidon won the 2 1-4 mile Corporation Stakes Saturday. Alycidon, second to New Year Wilfred Woodward's Black Tarquin in last year's Derby at Epsom Downs is regarded as chief rival of the American bred horse for the 2 1-2 mile Ascot Gold Cup June 16.

Alycidon a 4-to-9 favorite, cantered home 12 lengths ahead of Lake Placid.

At Liege, Belgium Sunday defeated Wales 3-1 in a soccer international match. Belgium led 3-0 at half time.

At Paris, England Sunday wound up a continental soccer tour with a 3-1 victory over France at Colombes Stadium.

At Dublin, Ireland defeated Portugal 1-0 Sunday in an international soccer match.

Heavy rain Sunday forced postponement of a soccer bill featuring the Scottish International soccer team at Randall's Island Stadium in New York. The Scots were scheduled to open an eight game North America tour against an American League combination. The contest will be played off here on May 30 instead. The Scottish eleven plays in Toronto June 8.

Special Berth Being Dredged For Battleship

Portsmouth, England, May 21 (Reuters)—Dredging has begun here to provide a special berth for the visit next month of the 45,000-ton United States battleship Missouri, largest ever to enter Portsmouth dockyard. The Missouri, on board which the Japanese surrender was signed, is due here June 17 as flagship of a squadron carrying 1,200 midshipmen on a training cruise.

It would be good fortune indeed to be rid of that sallow, pepless, dragged-down feeling caused by sluggish, irregular elimination. And so simple to find relief with the world-renowned aperient—gently laxative KRUSCHEN.

K-ruschen's formula is a unique blend of saline minerals, similar to those found in natural waters of famous medicinal springs. K-ruschen offers you these basic advantages:

EASY TO TAKE—Dissolves quickly in water, or your morning coffee, tea or fruit juice. More than half the small morning dose is best.

WORKS FAST—Usually within the hour. Does not spoil your day.

GENTLE ACTION—Its formula is believed to act gently, without discomfort.

TESTED—Over 300,000,000 packets sold throughout the world.

Give yourself a fresh start to a brighter future by taking K-ruschen daily for a while. You'll soon discover what it is to have that famous "K-ruschen Feeling". 25c and 75c at all drug stores.

Intercounty Baseball

(By The Canadian Press)

Stratford Nationals have finally snapped their losing streak at the hard way.

They took on the mighty London Majors in Stratford Saturday and romped home with an easy 12-3 decision to take up their first victory in four official starts of the Senior Intercounty Baseball Association.

In other Intercounty games during the weekend, Waterloo Tigers batted out a 4-0 victory over Guelph Maple Leafs, Brantford Red Sox edged Kitchener Panthers 5-4 and Galt Terriers defeated St. Thomas Legion 3-2.

In a Central Ontario division, Peterborough Petes downed the Batawa Shoemen 2-0 in the opening game of the league.

In two Niagara District games, Welland Stokes defeated St. Catharines Blags 3-1 and North Tonawanda Dodgers downed Niagara Falls Purple Cats, one to two.

In the Nickel Belt Baseball Association opener, Frood Tigers squeezed out a 5-4 decision over Conliston Buzzers.

At Brantford it was a tight game for 5½ innings as Louis Fisher of London and Lefty Price of Stratford waged a southpaw battle on the mound. Fisher yielded one hit while Price gave up two.

The defending champion Majors held a 1-0 lead going into the last o fthe fifth inning when Hugh McGillivray slammed out a double to score two runs.

Went Ahead by Three

After scoring another run in the sixth, the Nationals went ahead three more in the seventh when Gerd McGraw hit a home run on the first pitch.

Fisher was yanked from the mound in the eighth roning when Stratford counted six runs. Reliever Joe Ladensack relired the side.

At Guelph it was curly-haired Don Bauer who broke up the game when he stole home in the ninth inning. The Tigers followed up with three runs.

At St. Thomas, the Terriers were rewarded by the six-hit pitching of Bert McCrudden as they got one run in the fourth frame, two in the sixth and two more in the ninth. The Legion counted two runs in the sixth inning and one in the final.

Hit Two Doubles

Cornelious Creeden hit two doubles as he led the Terriers. Claud Pickard and Don Wade both hit a double and single apiece. Trout Caldwell knocked out a double and single for St. Thomas.

The Red Sox were forced to come from behind after the panthers held a 4-1 lead at the end of the third frame. Brantford tallied once in the fifth, two runs in the sixth and one in the eighth.

Manager Normie Hann clinched the game when he singled to bring in the winning run. Nig Parker, who gave up three hits in four innings of relief work, was credited with the win.

At Peterborough, the Petes marked one run in the sixth on walks to Dedam and Dalton and then added the second run in the eighth on a single by Dalton.

Shoemen Had Triple Play

The Shoemen killed off a Peterborough threat in the ninth inning with the bases loaded on a triple-play—Lett to third, to catcher and to shortstop.

At St. Catharines, Danny Palskalvi fanned eight Stag batters and allowed only four singles to save Stokes their victory. Stags carried a 1-0 lead in the eight when Welland tied it and picked up two runs in the ninth.

In the second Niagara District game, Fords outhit Dodgers 10-7 but couldn't bring the men home. Dodgers collected their four runs in the sixth, bunching a homer, triple and four hits off Fords' only error. Fords pulled in their only run in the ninth.

The close Nickel Belt opener saw Tigers and Buzzers tied 3-3 at the end of the sixth. Glen Seeley took over hurling duties next frame from Flewerday in the seventh to stem the Conliston rally and Tigers picked up two runs in their half of the seventh.

Five games are scheduled in the Intercounty loop for tomorrow. St. Thomas clashes with Kitchener in an afternoon game and hies travels to Guelph for a night fixture. Kitchener also plays a doubleheader by meeting Galt in a night game. London meets Brantford and Waterloo plays host to Stratford.

In the Niagara District League Niagara Falls Cats play St. Catharines.

In the Nickel Belt League, Conliston will play host to Garson Gunners Tuesday night.

Association Stands By its Decision

Brampton, May 23 — (CP) — The Ontario Lacrosse Association executive Sunday decided to stand by its decision to bar six players and one referee from O. L. A. games this season for taking part in senior lacrosse games in Rochester, N. Y. A motion to have the suspensions shortened to one third of the 1949 senior schedule was defeated 5-3.

Suspended were players Stew Scott, Roy Morton, Jimmy McMahon and Bill Nelson of St. Catharines; John Evans and Bill Hagan of Port Dover and Hamilton; and referee George Cleverley of St. Catharines.

A resolution passed at the recent O. L. A. convention in Toronto asked the incoming executive to reconsider the ruling.

Art Brown of St. Catharines told the meeting that he could name several other players who also participated in games in the United States.

"It is pretty drastic to pick out a few and suspend them," he said.

Speedy Irish And Epic Win Plate Trials

Toronto, May 23. (CP)—Speedy Irish and epic winners of Saturday's semi-division plat trial, today share the limelight as heavy favorites in the 1949 edition running of the classic $10,000-added King's plate.

Bunty Blue, owned by John Stuart, of Toronto, finished half-a-length behind epic in the first division of the trial. The black colt, which showed a burst of speed in the last lap of the six-furlong sprint, is considered one of the main threats in the 90th renewal of the oldest continually-run race in North America. The plate is over the mile-and-a-furlong route.

Epic, Brown three-year-old colt, lived up to advance notices when the son of Bunty Lawless romped home winner in 1:12 4-5, three-fifths of a second better than Speedy Irish's time of 1:13 2-5. The good colt from the E. P. Taylor stable, making his first start, hugged the inside rail in the stretch drive to take the $2,500-added purse.

George McCullagh's Speedy Irish romped home an easy winner of the second division, passing the finish line more than two lengths ahead of Bunty Jewel, owned by Charlie Hemstead, and Robert Craig from Wheat Sheaf Ridge stable. Theson of Swift Bunty, slow leaving the starting gate, moved into the lead in the stretch run after reeling around his field passing the three furlong mark.

Misfortune struck the W. F. Morrissey stable when Gem Thief, a highly-rated filly, was injured going to the post in the second-division runs. The horse was withdrawn from the plate and may not be ready to start for three weeks.

Rolaris, owned by Steve Chris of Kitchener, ran third to Epic in the first division, a lengthy behind Bunty Lane. On following in the plate trial, Rolaris rates as the best of the outstanding fillies in next Saturday's blue-ribbon event for Canadian-bred three-year-olds.

DIMAGGIO TO TRY HEEL

New York May 23 (AP)—Joe DiMaggio will give his ailing heel a tryout tonight before the New York Yankees-St. Louis game at the stadium.

The $90,000 a year outfielder out of action since the Spring drills will don a uniform and do a bit of hitting and exercising the club announced. He is not slated for action.

The test is expected to reveal how soon the slugging flychaser can be counted on for regular or part time duty.

Parnell's Sensational Hurling Keeps Boston Red Sox Pennant Hopes Alive in the American

By JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Joe McCarthy and his sixth-place Boston Red Sox can thank their lucky stars for pitcher Mel Parnell.

The 26-year-old sophomore has made seven starts and completed them all. His record is six wins against one loss with two of his victories shutouts.

One of his overtime triumphs came Sunday when he had to wait until the 12th before he was able to eke out a 3-2 decision over Virgil Trucks and Detroit Tigers. To make it a perfect day Mel drove in two runs including the game - winning tally with a 12th inning single.

It's been "gloomy Sunday" for Cleveland Indians this season. Philadelphia Athletics whipped them in both ends of a doubleheader yesterday 5-4 and 7-3. It marked the seventh Sunday loss in as many games for the Tribe now in seventh place.

In winning both games, the second - place A's moved to within two games of the leading New York Yankees. Rookie Alex Kellner hurled his fifth victory in the opener.

Eddie Joost's eighth home run and Hank Majeski's two - run double helped Lou Brissie win his fourth game in the nightcap, which was halted after seven innings.

Kenny Raffensberger, veteran lefthander of Cincinnati Reds, came within one hit of pitching a no-hitter for the third time in two seasons. He shut out Brooklyn 2-0 on one hit in the second game of a doubleheader in Cincinnati. The Dodgers won the opener 3-0.

Had No-hitter Till Eighth

Raffensberger had a no - hitter until the eighth when Gil Hodges singled to left. A home run by Hank Sauer of Joe Hatten helped Raffensberger win his fifth game.

Don Newcombe, Brooklyn right-hander, held the Reds to five hits in his first big - league start. The former Montreal Royal star also singled in two of Brooklyn's runs.

Boston Braves tied New York Giants for the National League leadership, beating Chicago Cubs 7-2 while the Giants divided a doubleheader with the Cardinals in St. Louis. The Red Birds won the opener 3-2 on Stan Musial's three - run homer in the third. The Giants walloped six pitchers in the finale for a 13-4 triumph.

Johnny Sain gained his fourth victory for the Braves in the opener. In the nightcap the Braves clipped Larry Jansen for 16 hits but he went the route for his 4th victory.

Dick Sisler's pinch - hit double in the ninth inning scored Jack Mayo with the run that gave Philadelphia Phillies a 6-5 victory over Pittsburgh in the first game of a scheduled doubleheader. The second game was postponed by rain. Five home runs were hit in the game by Philadelphia. Eddie Miller banked two for the Phils and Ralph Kiner hit his eighth for Pittsburgh.

Chicago White Sox scored all their runs in the last two innings to defeat Washington 6-4.

Rain washed out a scheduled doubleheader between St. Louis Browns and New York Yankees at Yankee Stadium.

Buffalo Bisons, Montreal Royals Tied for Second

(By The Associated Press)

Clyde King, taken south by Brooklyn to teach Dodger farmhands the art of picking runners off base, is picking up his share of victories for Montreal Royals.

King, 24 years old today, celebrated the event prematurely Sunday as he pitched the Royals to a victory over his fourth without a loss—over Toronto Maple Leafs in the first game of an International League doubleheader. The second game was postponed because of wet grounds.

The lanky right-hander scattered ten hits, walked one and fanned three.

Montreal blasted starter Lou Pezzelli for four runs in the first inning and coasted the rest of the way. Karmil Wahl of the Royals and Bill Glynn of Toronto, homered.

The victory enabled the Royals and Buffalo Bisons to move into a tie for second place. The Bisons to move into a tie for second place. The Bisons knocked Rochester out of second by beating Red Wings 3-2 on three homers.

Ray Coleman broke up the game with his fourth circuit drive of the season in the ninth inning. Chet Laabs and Coaker Triplett attacked the other homers. Rookie Tom Poholsky was the victim of the Bison homer barrage. Emile Silvernan checked the Wings on five hits to post his sixth victory.

The second game between the Red Wings and Bisons was postponed because of rain. Double-headers between Syracuse and Jersey City and Newark and Baltimore were also washed out.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE H. CARVER, Sports Editor

ONE FOR FLYERS

Behind the six-hit flinging of Lahey, newcomer to these parts the Trenton Flyers got off to a right start on Saturday when they pounded out six-junior Bob Bunten's offerings for nine hits which were good for eleven runs, and the first victory of the Belleville District Baseball League. The victims were the Northern Electric squad which bobbled grievously afield in the first few innings and gave a lead which Flyers never lost.

There was only a fair crowd on hand to greet the official opening of the baseball season here and the teams were deserving of a better attendance fate. Harry Bleecker and Messrs. A. B. Hunt and Parke Board Chairman Harry Rollins' officiated in the opening ceremonies with the honorable Parks Board Commissioner pulling an upset and a dollar when he connected with the first official pitch for a stinging liner down the first base line.

It is not fair to judge the teams however on their performance on Saturday. Northern got a bad game out of its system and on paper it should be one of the more powerful squads in the loop. They did, however kick the ball around badly in the first few innings and thereby hangs the tale of defeat. On the other hand Flyers proved that they had balanced and with good hurling dished up by Lahey took advantage of the breaks and the Linemen errors to score a convincing victory in the first time out.

PETES HERE TOMORROW

Tomorrow afternoon at three o'clock the Belawa team pries the lid off the Central Ontario Baseball League pot at the Fair Grounds where they will be hosts to the potent Peterborough squad. Manager Bill Easton and Coach Gerdie Moffitt. Back his mound staff on the hill and Gerdie Moffitt. Back will be a lot of the old familiar faces such as Johnny Aquino, Carmen Cassidy and the rest of the boys with new faces tossed in for good measure.

Eddie Murphy, Pets mentor, will also have some of the veterans of his last year's champions back again in the persons of Jim Bloss, Bruce Whitehill, Bill Dadaoun, Bryan Wade, Lowery and Edger on the mound staff while the old reliable, Edgar Hart, Jones and Ballen will be back. Garvey, Lowe, Mackenzie and Stewart. Some more well-known names in COBL circles will also see Adden, Hall, Bowerman and Ellis from a leg injury will share the catching duties with Al Mennies.

KIWANIS JUNIORS OPEN WED.

On Wednesday night the Kiwanis juniors see their first action in the District league taking on the Trenton Town team in a scheduled game. Picton opens the season tomorrow afternoon at home with last year's Intercon champions as their guests.

SOFTBALLERS READY

The Canadian National Railway Nationals all-star softball team is all set to get into action in the Peterborough Softball Tournament which gets under way at ten o'clock tomorrow morning. Ten teams, it is reported, are entered with strong aggregations coming from Toronto. The Nationals, however, will field a strong team with such flingers as Jim Mackie, Pat Maracle, Don Boyle, Al Adams and Lum Carson ready for duty.

The National's new uniforms did not arrive, contrary to earlier reports but the boys will be looking for them. They will wear the Belleville Mechanix' baseball trousers which will wear the Belleville Mechanix baseball trousers which will be topped by the CNR Diesel's green sweaters. The team will leave the city hall at eight o'clock sharp Tuesday morning as will the bus carrying the fans.

The radio offered by the Nationals will be drawn for at Ed. Thomas' Tobacco Store shortly after seven o'clock tonight, and it better be around if you happen to hold that lucky ticket.

Nationals will carry such players as Herbie Henn, Vernon Goyer, Roger Mallory who will do the receiving. OPP Constable Harrie, socker de-luxe, Jackie Wardhaugh, Red Carson, Tommy Genereaux, Red Culkin and others. They appear to be powerful on paper and have been doing some serious training and practising. Don't be surprised to hear that they bring home some of that financial bacon.

Now that the summer season of sports is definitely under way, we would like to again remind managers of teams that reports of games, etc., should be forwarded to this office as soon after the game as possible. Our sports staff has been augmented by our young Mr. Boyd Upper, but even so, all events cannot be covered. A little co-operation fellas, please.

"BE OURSELF"

"Just be yourself. Don't try to emulate any of your favorite National Hockey League stars. Develop your own style and techniques, do what your coaches tell you and don't try too much in the National Hockey League," Howie Meeker, Toronto Maple Leaf hockey star told a group of kids here on Monday night. With Captain Teeder Kennedy, Meeker was guest of President Max Matthews and other Canadian Legion officials, at dinner. The duo were mobbed by a group of wide-eyed youngsters, and were kept busy for some time signing autographs. Both stars gave out some highly interesting advice to the youthful hockeyists.

Meeker will play baseball with the Kitchener Panthers senior team this year, as soon as he sufficiently recovers from a hockey injury. He feels he will be ready in a couple of weeks or so. "Never broke a bone in my life before," he gmitted, "but last season I broke three in a row." The lanky youngster with the crew-cut was popular with his small visitors, as was amiable Teeder Kennedy.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Batting, Mel Parnell, Red Sox —Drove home two runs, including the winning run in the 12th inning of Boston's 3-2 victory over Detroit.

Pitching, Ken Raffensberger, Reds—Cincinnati to a 2-0 one-hit victory over Brooklyn in the second game of a double header. It was his third one hit triumph in two seasons.

HARNESS RACING OPENS

Toronto, May 23 (CP)— Harness racing will start tomorrow in seven Ontario centres and early reports say there will be no shortage of entries.

New Hamburg and Sarnia will stage Western Ontario meets, while Aylmer will combine a horse show with the pacers in the southern part of the province. Peterborough, Uxbridge and Trenton meets will open in the east and Collingwood will hold the lone northern events.

Purple Raiders From Windsor Beaten 62-58

Vancouver, May 23 —(CP)— Stanley Nantais, carrot-topped mentor of Windsor's challenging Purple Raiders, believes height will decide the 1948 Canadian Basketball championships — if Windsor is defeated.

The masterminds of Assumption College's formidable squad made this prediction today as he readied Raiders for the second encounter tonight with the defending champion Vancouver Clover Leafs.

Leafs staged an 11th hour rally Saturday to edge Windsor 63-58 in the opener of the best-of-five series.

Nantais, the long range shooting star of Windsor Fords when they lost to University of British Columbia in 1937, is worried over the lack of height in his roster. His boys average six feet; the Leafs 6'2", with five sharpscrapers dwarfing that average.

Nantais has another worry. Freddie Thomas, his Negro scoring artist who was benched Saturday for five fouls after he totalled 17 points. That was a factor Nantais insists decided the close game. Thomas' big frame and his scoring ability, said Nantais, invites fouls.

"And any opposing team will certainly place themselves in position to be fouled by Thomas to get him out of the game," said Nantais.

That's apparently what happened Saturday night. Ron Weber, Vancouver, guard waited till Thomas hit the bench, shook loose his fleety forwards Sandy Robertson and Harry Kermode and drew away from a 42-38 third quarter Windsor lead.

Weber, who himself polled 11 points, fed forwards Kermode and Robertson passes for them to flash winding baskets.

Frank Marchand, his tallest man on the Windsor team at 6'3" registered 14 points.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

Well, playmates, how do you like the golfing technique (I was long come out of good old West Virginia before I knew what that one meant) of today's pictured player? OK. Looks good, doesn't it? But there's one flaw here which I hope all bunker-jumpers will notice. This player has wound up nicely. His left heel has risen to keep his knee on an even plane, his hip pivot has been about horizontal while his shoulder pivot has been more perpendicular than his hip pivot, his left arm is straight and his right arm is well under the club shaft. His head is still in the address position and he has a good view of the ball. So far, so good. But now what? Look at that club shaft. This player has badly overswung and while a few, very expert, very limber players can get away with a swing like this, this overswing is not for the average golfer or for the once-a-week players since there would be only one chance in ten that the average golfer could ever get that clubhead back to the ball at the right mechanical instant. What caused this player to overswing so much? Look at that open left hand. If this player had kept that left hand closed like Ben Hogan does, the club shaft would be about parallel with the ground and then he'd be set for a beautiful shot.

St. Catharines And Brampton Win Openers

(By The Canadian Press)

St. Catharines Athletics and Brampton Excelsiors both walloped off with decisive wins in two Ontario Lacrosse Association openers Saturday night. Athletics came from behind to defeat Mimico Mountaineers 17—12 in a first-quarter, five goal splurge and Excelsiors trounced Owen Sound Crescents 12-6.

Frick was high scorer for Athletics, getting four goals while Smith accounted for three. Madsen, Bradshaw and O'Hearn knotted two goals apiece and Urquhart, Croft, Damico and Whitely each tallied once. Beattie put in three goals for Mountaineers. McKay, Dixon and G. Gelr got two apiece and McDonald, McPhail and Peterson each counted once.

H. Madgett, G. Madgett and Cruickshanks with three apiece accounted for nine Brampton goals, with three apiece while Ferri, Steele ,Crawford and Hilson each nabbed one goal. Campbell was the only man for Owen Sound to get two goals. Gillespie, McWhirter, Smith and Ashbee each scored once.

Mountaineers flashed three early first period goals past Whitaker, but Athletics whittled down the lead and tied the game 12-all by the end of the third quarter. In the last frame Mountaineers were held scoreless and

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON JR.

New York, May 23 (AP)— It was during one of the spring golf tournaments that Fred Haas, Jr., the New Orleans pro, ran into a sour putting streak just before he was due to tee off .... Fred appealed to Henry Picard for advice and Henry suggested leaving that long smooth putting stroke Bobby Jones used to use .... "Show me just how, so I can get it down right," Haas asked.

"Son," Picard replied sadly, "you can't get it down in one tournament. You'll have to spend a whole summer on it."

Monday Matinee

The manoeuvres leading up to the formation of the "Monopoly A.C." in boxing have left three of this town's most experienced matchmakers looking for jobs. Andy Niederreiter, Chickie Bogad and Nat Rogers all are out ... and as on veteran commented: "They've got all the arenas but no fighters" .... probably the most satisfied "booster" when Kid Nichols was elected to baseball's Hall of Fame was Ty Cobb .... Ty had been "campaigning" for Nichols for a couple of years.

End of the Line

Ira Godin may be the second Harvard pitcher to reach the majors (Charley Devens was the first and he quit after three years). Coach Stuffy McInnis thinks Godin has the stuff to make good .... When Maurice Cosman left his post as Flint (Mich.) Journal sports editor after 20 years in the writing racket, Michigan football writers presented him a book: "How to write Sports."

Gus Lesnevich To Meet Maxim

Cincinnati May 23 (AP)— It will be Slugger Gus Lesnevich against fancy boxer Joey Maxim here tonight for National Boxing Association recognition as American light heavyweight champion.

Also at stake in the 15 round bout at Cincinnati Garden will be a possible crack for the winner at the world's light heavyweight champion Freddie Mills of London, England. Promoter Sam Beckner says he has a verbal agreement that Mills will meet the winner in an outdoor scrap here in September.

Lesnevich who hails from Cliffside, N.J., may be slightly heavier than Maxim at around 174 pounds but-he'll give away seven inches in age, four inches in height and 2 1-2 inches in reach to the Cleveland sharpshooter.

The odds held at 6-5 in favor of Maxim.

Hollywood, May 23 (AP)—After a lull in his film career John Hodiak is getting action—all over the globe.

Now fighting the battle of the Bulge in "Battleground," the Pittsburgh actor goes immediately to New Mexico for a western, "Ambush." Then he goes to China for, "Man Hunt," another film about a government agency.

Hodiak's crowded will continue this fall when he is scheduled to go to England for the lead in "Forever" sequel with Greer Garson and Walter Pidgeon.

Short-On Stars

Errol Flynn gets top billing over Greer Garson in "Forsyte Saga." It's the first time that's happened to G.G. in years.

"I'm very happy . . . and a wee bit sad," said Al Jolson, as he recorded his last air show. The Thursday night radio hall, once presided over by Paul Whiteman, then Bing Crosby, is going off the air, making the end of one of radio's oldest shows.

Howard Hughes is mad at M.G.M. over Ann Southern. He expected to get her immediately for a comedy with Robert Ryan. But he'll have to wait while she does "Nancy Goes to Rio."

Starry-eyed Elizabeth Taylor tells me she'll probably go to Florida before she sails to Italy and "Quo Vadis." The purpose is to see her latest boy friend, Bill Pauley, Jr. But there will be no engagement until Elizabeth gets back from overseas. A 17-year-old girl can change her mind, as football star Glenn Davis discovered.

Eleanor Parker Back

Eleanor Parker returned to work after a two-year absence and she'll be kept busy. After the jet film, "Chain Lightning," she'll do her first western, "The Travellers" with John Wayne.

Pittsburgh (AP) — Yesterday was a tough day for the Irish—the Irishman in this case being nine-year-old Danny Donahue.

Danny's been sick the last few days. Nothing serious, said his mother, but he's been sort of restless," starting in bed.

His mother started looking for Danny yesterday when he disappeared from his room. She found him — in the laundry chute.

It seemed Dannyboy wanted to see if his 75 pound body would fit into the eight by nine inch chute. Danny started at the top and stuck smack in the middle, between the first and second floors.

His anxious mother called firemen. They couldn't dislodge Denny with ropes and poles. So they got out their trusty axes and tore out enough wall boards to give Danny clearance to the cellar. Danny said he's convinced now — no more exploring in the laundry chute.

Wis Borough Green, England, (AP) — The Bishop of Chichester let the congregation of the Sussex Village to the banks of the river Arun and offered prayers for rain in the time of drought. Then he hustled the parishioners back inside the village church.

Just in time to beat the rain.

AND IT'S STILL "SHE"

The Greeks were the first to give each ship its own name — usually that of a woman.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE
By SAM GORDON
The Bridge Builder

A bridge game could change the course of a stream of players. It was so in the recent Vanderbilt four-man-team championship. A deal that influenced the result was this:

♥ A K 9 8 3
♦ A 7 4
♣ K 9 6

WEST
♠ 5
♥ Q 6 5 4
♦ 8
♣ Q 10 7 3 2

EAST
♠ J 9
♥ 10 7
♦ K Q 10 9
♣ 5 4 2

SOUTH
♠ A K Q 10 8 7 4
♥ J 2
♦ 5
♣ A J 6

One of the most skillful pairs in the match stopped at a small slam in spades. Later it was stated that modern bidding methods do not promise enough safety for a go at grand slam.

Mebee so, cousins. North was the dealer and the bidding should go like this:

North	South
1 H	2 S
3 D	3 S
3 NT	4 NT
6 D	7 S

North did not show a biddable club suit. Nor did he announce a rebiddable red suit. This is an indication that he is not void in spades. It is reasonable to assume he has one or more spades.

Of course, this does not assure south that his spades will pick up all the trump tricks. But I have seen experts expect it on less. At any rate, chances are many that spades are solid enough.

In answer to four no-trump, six diamonds is Ribbon convention for showing two aces and one king. South is thus able to see all the aces and three kings in their pair.

If west does not lead a diamond, seven spades is easy to make. After pulling three trump rounds, a third heart is ruffed. An entry to dummy is diamond ace. A fourth heart is ruffed. An entry to the dummy is club king. On the fifth heart a south club is aluffed.

With a diamond lead the story is different. A dummy entry is spoiled too soon. Can you then see the guesses use?

Answer to Saturday's Puzzle

Little Benny's Note Book

I was walking along with Shorty Judge and Glasses Magee just walking along, and Shorty said, Hey look, that's a heck of a thing for somebody to throw on the sidewalk for somebody to slip on.

Meaning a empty bannanna skin, and I said, Let's wait a while and watch. If somebody's actually going to slip on it, there's no sense of us missing all the fun, I said.

And we stayed there and waited, and people kept on just walking past without even stepping on it some of them probably seeing it in time and some probably just being lucky, and after a while Glasses said, Aw what's the use? I've saw a lot of loose bannanna skins but I never saw anybody slip on one, he said.

G, thats rite, I never even slipped on one myself, and I've passed plenty, I said, and Shorty said, They're always slipping on them in the funny papers. Fat men are the funniest, he said.

And we waited a while longer, nuthing happening except a man giving the bannanna skin a kick to prove he didn't even like the idea of it, and I said, Aw heck, what funs this! If somebody got hert we'd all feel gilty whether it was our bannanna skin or not.

Sure we would, Glasses said, I wouldn't even want to see a fat man sit down too hard, even if he didn't actually get hert, he said, and Shorty said, Sure, the poor guy. The fatter you are the harder of a bump you probably get, he said.

Which you probably co, and we put the bannanna skin in the gutter careful and kept on going, feeling better instead of worse.

Proving it's never too late to do good.

CANADA RECALLS EMPIRE GROWTH ON MAY HOLIDAY

By ALAN DONNELLY

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

A change has come over the British Commonwealth and Empire since Canadians last celebrated the birthday of Queen Victoria, under whose 63-year reign the empire was consolidated around the world.

Canadians holidaying on May 24 last year belonged to a system comprising dominions and colonies, all owing allegiance to the crown.

Tomorrow they will be part of a revamped community of nations, for India has taken on the unprecedented role of a Commonwealth republic and Ireland is a republic claiming complete independence.

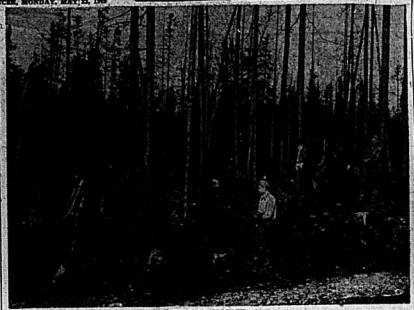
Other changes have taken place since Alexandrina Victoria died in 1901 soon after the South African War provided the empire with its last great addition.

Newfoundland, Britain's oldest colony, has been successively a colony, a dominion, a country ruled by commission government, and a Canadian province.

In Canada was inaugurated the great experiment by which the first dominion was formed and under which Britain found the solution to the problem of giving self-rule to her wide possessions. The pattern formed in Canada by Queen Victoria's governors and Canada's early statesmen was followed in Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, Ceylon, Pakistan and Eire.

Some historians believe that if the dominion pattern had been set earlier, the American colonies would have developed into the empire's greatest dominion.

Observed in 1838



Canada is unique among Commonwealth and Empire countries in still holding May 24 in memory of Victoria the Good. First observed in 1838 the year after the young queen came to the throne, May 24 was an empire holiday for more than 60 years.

At the accession of Edward VII the remainder of the empire decided to mark the new king's birthday, in November, but Canada passed a bill designating May 24 as an annual holiday commemorating Queen Victoria.

Elsewhere tomorrow will be celebrated as Empire Day, although it is not kept as a holiday. In Canada Empire Day is marked only by special school observances on May 24.

The pride and dazzling splendor of the girl queen's coronation in 1838 was an augury of succeeding years in which the British flag was carried by soldiers, missionaries and traders throughout the world to consolidate the greatest empire since early Roman times.

Now the displays of power and might have given way to austerity in a Britain battling for her economic life. But tomorrow bunting and flags will be flown across Canada and fireworks will light the skies recalling the development of the empire concept that reached its peak in the Victoria era.

REMOVE TIMBER

When the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests completed their survey of the damage by the forest fires in the Mississagi area last summer, they found the salvage operation too large a venture for any individual lumbering concern to accept; it was considered hazardous to risk capital on this venture since much of the white and red pine might be ruined by the pine bore before it could be cut. To solve this problem, the Ontario government set up a program to assist private contractors. This Lands and Forest photo shows the timber being removed by one such contractor hauling the cut trees from the forest. Most of the trees left standing are expected to resume growth despite the damage by the fire.—(CP.)

AID LUMBER SHORTAGE

From the charred forests of Ontario's Mississagi Forest some of the finest red and white pine lumber is being salvaged. The operation set up last fall under the sponsorship of the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests after the disastrous summer fires is now in full swing. Twenty contractors are operating 24 camps and employ 2,000 men. By July the cut is expected to reach 100,000,000 feet; equal to the total annual output of all Eastern Canada. This Lands and Forests photo shows loggers handling some of the large trees being cut.—(CP Photo.)

FOR CANADIAN BUILDING

Canada's builders will benefit directly from the huge timber salvage operations now under way in Ontario's Mississagi Forest following the forest fires last year. To date more than 70,000,000 feet of top quality white and red pine have been cut and is now being fed into the domestic market. This timber is valued at more than $12,000,000. Private contractors working with the assistance of the Ontario Government are reducing the shortage of this type of lumber through their operations. This Lands and Forests photo shows one of the automatic pilers at work at a small mill in the salvage area.—(CP Photo.)

Young Boy Loses Eye When Torpedo Explodes

Lindsay, Ont., May 21 — (CP) — Seven-year-old Fraser Clarke Friday lost his left eye when a railway torpedo he though was a harmless firecracker exploded in his face. Mrs. R. M. Clarke, Fraser's mother, said she told the boy she thought the explosive was a discarded firecracker. A few moments later the torpedo, used by railwaymen as a warning signal, exploded.

41 FOUR-LEAF CLOVERS

Niagara Falls, May 21 (CP) — If four-leaf clovers really bring luck, a printer on the Evening Review here should be the luckiest man in the world. He came to work yesterday with 41 four-leaf clovers he found in his garden. He also had 25 five-leaf and three six-leaf clovers.

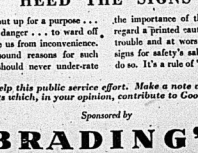
SURVEY DAMAGE

One of the biggest lumber-salvage operations in Eastern Canada in the past 50 years in underway in the charred wastes of Ontario's Mississagi Forest area swept by disastrous forest fires last summer. Immediately after the fires were extinguished, the Ontario Department of Lands and Forests made a survey of the burned-over region with the object of salvaging the timber. This Lands and Forests photo, taken last summer, shows a member of the survey crew listing the damage in one of the worst areas.—(CP Photo.)

Msgr. Lardone Named Titular Archbishop

Washington, May 21 — (AP) — Monsignor Francesco Lardone, director of studies for the Ecclesiastical Schools of Catholic University, Washington, has been named Titular Archbishop of Rhesaena and Apostolic Nuncio to Haiti and San Domingo. The appointment by Pope Pius was announced Friday night by Archbishop Amleto Giovanni Cicognani, Apostolic delegate to the United States. A member of faculty of the university here since 1937, Archbishop-elect Lardone was born in Moretta, Italy, in 1887.



ROBOT-LIKE DEVICE

Dayton, O., May 21 (AP) — A television aiming device — with optics resembling the human eye — was developed by German scientists during the Second World War, the United States Air Force announced Friday. The device was for control of guided missiles or airplanes.

OLEO C . . . PROTESTED

Toronto, May 21 (CP) — Restriction of coloring in Ontario margarine was protested in a resolution adopted Thursday by the Toronto District Labor Council (A.F.L.). An Ontario law now in effect limits yellow or yellow-red coloring of the butter substitute to 1.6 degrees.

GOOD CITIZENSHIP is a lot of little things

HEED THE SIGNS

Warning signs are put up for a purpose . . . to protect us from danger . . . to ward off damage . . . to save us from inconvenience. There are many sound reasons for such sentinels and we should never under-rate the importance of their messages. To disregard a printed caution is to invite at best trouble and at worst tragedy! Follow the signs for safety's sake and urge others to do so. It's a rule of "Good Citizenship"!

You can help this public service effort. Make a note of some of the little things which, in your opinion, contribute to Good Citizenship.

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

The hotel, as we expected, was closed for the season, but we were able to drive a short distance toward Two Medicine Lake, which took us near the foot of one of the Big Boys. A storm was gathering and great heavy bags of feathers, touched ominously with black, blew resolutely over the summit and sifted down the side.

The long bridge over the ravine of the Two Medicine River was sheeted with ice. When we went over it earlier, it had been clear and we hadn't thought of danger.

Major jockeyed it toward the middle of the road so a bad skid would have room, if we should skid out. Our breathing was audible. Major slowed down to 15. The car swung sideways. "Steady boy!" he breathed aloud. We were near the end of the fill. Major gunned it again. We leaped forward and onto the broad highway.

Half way home, Major pointed to the gas gauge. It registered nearly empty. "Where shall we get some?" he asked, as though gas in Montana sprang out of the ground in convenient artesian wells.

We asked a man walking along the road how far it would be to a gas station. "Ted Davis in Dupuyer might accommodate you."

"How far's Dupuyer?" Du — Da — that town?"

"Twenty miles."

We all looked at the gas gauge. There were three sets of crossed fingers.

The storm was at our back, but the night would be cold and we'd have a long walk if the car stopped. We hadn't seen another car on the road for an hour, and after dark there would be even fewer cars abroad. Likely no one would have gas to spare if we did flag him down. The countryside was almost tenantless; what few house there were were scattered miles apart on the sheep ranches.

We pulled into Dupuyer cramped and lame from muscles tense from pressing.

Davis' garage was locked. I squinted around hopelessly for some kind of hotel. Major got out of the car and stopped a boy riding up the street on horseback.

"This garage locked for the day?" he asked.

"Probably so. Take you can find Ted. Gas shortage," he explained.

With help from the boy, Major sighted the pool hall and, hitching up his trousers, made for Ted — we hoped.

A few minutes later Major reappeared, followed shortly by a man pulling on a leather jacket. He unlocked the pump and let us have a tankful, refusing to accept coupons for it. "What I could afford to give you gas too," he breathed aloud. We were near the end of the fill. Major gunned it again. We leaped forward and onto the broad highway.

AT THE CAPITOL — Jesse and James, top terpsichorean tappers, set a torpid pace for their dancing waiter routine in "Variety Time," opening today at the Capitol Theatre. RKO Radio's novel feature film presenting many musical, dancing and comedy specialty acts. On the same program "Blood on the Moon," starring Robert Mitchum and Barbara Del Gedden. Both hits are first city runs. Continuous show Tuesday, May 24th. from 2.00 p.m.

He had to admit next day that Major was in jail all right, for we gave him a thermos of coffee and a bagful of sandwiches to deliver; but he'll likely die before believing we lied to him about going twice in the same day to Glacier Park. Montanans simply didn't carry on that way.

Major had been "out" for 10 days and the incident was practically forgotten. We were having a game of bridge when there was a knock at the back door. Being a dummy, I answered it.

Two begrimed individuals stood there expectantly. They were young and dirty. Their faces were black as with coal dust; stock of filthy, matted hair showed around the edges of their caps; their Navy peacoats were gray with dust and dirt, and their rough, work shoes were the same.

One asked for Major Capner.

I asked who they were.

"I'd rather not say," the bigger boy replied. "Just please let me speak to father."

"Father! . . . Major!" I called. "Come quick. It's for you."

It required a good hard look before he recognized his son. "George!" he exclaimed. "What on earth!"

The boy's chin trembled. He bit his lip before he answered. When he spoke, it was with childish bravado. "I came out to see you. Aren't you going to let me in?" Spying Molly peering over Major's shoulder, George said, "Ta, Mom," and sent her into hysterics.

(To Be Continued)

"Don't cry Mom," George said. I'm all right. I'll tell you all about it."

Molly was reaching for begrimed son—dirt, coal dust, matted hair and all—but Major intervened.

"You'll tell nothing until you've had a bath," Major said. "Who's your friend?"

George introduced Hank, his roommate from school.

"Downstairs, you two, to the laundry," Major said. Turning to me, he asked what chance there was of borrowing some of Bill's clothes and letting the boys sleep in his room.

I hustled upstairs; Major and the boys hustled down; Molly took off for the kitchen.

Scrubbed pink, with wet hair clinging to their heads, dressed in clean clothes, they sat down to the mound of food Molly had whipped up. When they finished, they told their story.

"You knew I didn't want to go back to school, Dad," George began.

Major nodded.

"Well, Hank and I fixed it up to run away. Shucks, if we could get someplace where we weren't known, we could enlist."

"Oh," Molly gasped, "so that's it!"

ROARING BATTLE RAGES IN HEART OF SHANGHAI

Back West German Republic Against Soviet Proposal

West Powers Oppose Return To 4-Power Control Paralysis

By JOSEPH E. DYNAN

Paris, May 25 — (AP) — The three western powers stood firm today behind the new West German Republic against a Soviet move to replace it with four-power control over Germany.

Foreign Ministers Ernest Bevin of Britain and Robert Schuman of France and State Secretary Dean Acheson of the United States, in turn said the clock must not be turned back to what they termed "disastrous paralysis."

They were referring to the five point proposal of Russian Foreign Minister Andrei Y. Vishinsky by yesterday's unanimous control of Germany through the old Allied Control Council for Germany and the Berlin Kommandatura.

The Kommandatura has not been functioning since last year when the Communist dominated East Berliners boycotted regular elections and set up a hand picked communist government for the Soviet section of the city.

Vishinsky's Suggestions

Vishinsky's five-point proposal was:

1. Re-establish the control council as supreme governing body in Germany.

2. Re-establish the Allied Kommandatura in Berlin.

3. Create an all-German state council, founded on German economic councils, including Germans in the Soviet zone and the three western zones.

4. Establish an all-Berlin city government on the basis of elections to be held by the Kommandatura.

5. Create a new four-power supervisory authority over the Ruhr industrial basin to be aided by a consultative body of representatives of neighboring nations, such as the three Benelux nations and Poland, Czechoslovakia and Denmark.

American sources latere interpreted Vishinsky's proposal as nullifying the Ruhr control plan for public and poiinted out it would have deprived West Germans of the local government they received in the occupation statute drafted by the Allied foreign ministers.

The proposal also would have implied recognition for the "peoples congress" regime in Eastern Germany.

Parliamentary Labor Party 'Rebels' Lectured

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 25 — (CP) — "Rebel" members of the Labor party today were lectured by Prime Minister Attlee and Herbert Morrison, government leader in the House of Commons, on the need for continued unity within the party.

The reproofs were delivered at a private meeting of the Parliamentary Labor Party. They followed a stormy session of back-benchers over the government's Ireland Bill.

A brief press statement after the meeting said merely that a "general discussion" had taken place on the situation arising out of the action of some Labor members of parliament voting against the government despite the issue of the whole whips.

A three-line whip is the customary method by which a party seeks to have all its members present and voting on one side when a key issue is at stake in the House.

Suggestions of wide-spread conflict within the party were given little credence.

Concern Over 1949-50 Budget

Observers speculated that greater concern was expressed over Britain's 1949-50 budget to get than over the political shakeup which last week stripped the party tag from two members of the cabinet and seven parliamentary secretaries from their jobs.

It was not immediately known whether any voices were raised at the meeting against the idea that Labor leaders should bring back the party's old "iron and steel discipline."

These strict "rules of the school" laid down the exact manner in which the government supporter was expected to vote. They were suspended during the present parliament as an experiment in responsible freedom but many members would reluctant to see them reimposed.

Thomas Driberg, Labor Member for Reeve, said recently Labor's government "does not need discipline is a more impressive sign of strength than a rigid imposition of authority."

But those who oppose the disciplinary jacket also say that last week's action was inevitable.

They say Konni Zilliacus and Leslie Solley, banished from the party for persistent criticism of the government's foreign policies and Commons leaders Russell Hoe "had it coming" for a long time.

Nearly a year ago Prime Minister Attlee warned senior ministers that private members must regard themselves as part of the government and could not be allowed to vote as they pleased on major issues.

Has Some Difficulty Explaining Why Card Arrived 62 Years Late

Toronto, May 25 (CP)— Toronto postal authorities tried to explain why a postcard mailed here 62 years ago was delivered to the addressee only Monday. The card, postmarked June 27, 1887, was received by Mrs. Sarah Ott, town clerk asking him to consider her name in municipal handbooks.

Commenting on the delay, a Toronto postal official said: "I really wouldn't....without knowing about it .... ahh .... I can imagine some buildings torn down, or renovated .... Dresden isn't in my district .... I suppose something was on the card to indicate .... ahh .... did you say 1887? .... hmm.

VICTOR REUTHER, UNION OFFICIAL, SHOT, WOUNDED

Unknown Assailant Shoots Thru Window

Detroit, May 25 (AP) A Stealthy gunman, firing through a window, shot and wounded Victor Reuther of the United Automobile Workers Union (C.I.O.) at his home late last night.

Badly hurt, the 37-year-old unionist faces the possible loss of his right eye, pierced by a shotgun pellet.

Victor, for the second time within 13 months, police today sought a man, or men, apparently bent on murder in the U.A.W.'s militant family.

The union's president, Walter Reuther, escaped death at the hands of a mysterious assailant April 20 last month.

That attack remains unsolved despite the use of the most painstaking investigations in Detroit's police records.

Victor Reuther's shooting following by 72 hours the mysterious slaying of Leo Steigbrandt Weisser, of a rank-and-file member of the U.A.W. Ford local.

That victim, William D. Allen, 37, also was killed by a shot-gun blast through a window of his home. Allen was an inspector at the Ford Highland Park plant assembly.

Police, however, said they could establish no connection between Allen's slaying and the attack on Victor Reuther's life, nor any connection with the Ford bombings.

Claim Assailants Paid

Walter Reuther charged the attacks on himself and Victor were carried out by men who were "paid" to do it in a "campaign of terrorism."

He said this was directed against "pro-American and progressive trade unionists."

In a formal statement, issued from his room in the hospital where his brother is confined, U.A.W.'s top man said:

"I believe the same people who paid to have me shot paid to have my brother, Victor, shot for the same reason.

"They are people who are opposed to democratic and progressive trade unionism. They could be found in the ranks of among employers, or Communists or Fascist agents."

Heads High Office

Like his brother, Victor holds high office in the U.A.W. He is the 1,000,000-member union's educational director.

The assault on Victor was strangely similar to that on Walter.

In each, the gunman crept to a window and fired a shot-gun blast through a glass, then fled, apparently on foot.

In bushes near the Victor Reuther home police found a gauge shell-case and two shot-gun. Both barrels had been fired.

Authorities took precautions to protect a third Reuther brother, Roy, U.A.W. International representative.

A guard was set up at Roy's home. Police and Wayne County Guards also were reinforced at Victor Reuther's which has been watched by police since the attempt on his life.

CCF Favors Social Ownership Only if Danger of Monopoly Coldwell Tells Meeting Here

A prediction that the election propaganda of the two old parties would not continue to fool the Canadian voters who were getting tired of unfilled election promises was made here Tuesday evening by the national leader of the C.C.F. party.

Speaking before a representative gathering at the collegiate auditorium M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. party leader opened the Ontario section of his campaign for the June 27 general election with a fine attack on the policies of the two old-line parties and at the same time set forth the platform of the C.C.F. in Canada which he declared "was the most democratic of all democratic countries."

Mr. Coldwell was speaking in support of Arthur Cole, C. C. F. party candidate in Hastings South, and visited Belleville in order to be speaking at Napanee earlier in the evening.

Declaring that the C.C.F. viewpoint was becoming more prominent in democratic countries, Mr. Coldwell assured his listeners that no Liberal or Progressive Conservative propaganda could continue to throw dust in the eyes of the Canadian voters.

Favorable Trade Relations Important

The importance of favorable trade relations with other countries was stressed by the speaker who went into the economic picture of the country. Canada's natural resources were tremendous, but still many essential commodities had to be imported. Trade was therefore necessary to build the country's economic structure and to give Canadians a better standard of living.

"It is all very well to talk of multi-lateral trade," said Mr. Coldwell, "but the best way is the best customer—the United Kingdom. Almost every Canada thinks of something else. It is goods — not money—that is the basis of international trade."

NURSE TELLS OF DANCE PARTY AT DETROIT HOTEL

Says She and Another Nurse Locked Themselves In Room

Windsor, Ont., May 25 (CP) — One of four nurses from Metropolitan General Hospital who attended a Detroit party with four prominent Windsorites testified she left a Detroit hotel suite when Horace Atkin began "getting friendly."

Miss H. fourth Metropolitan nurse at the party, first told the Royal Commission probing affairs of the city-owned utility she left the suite because it was "crowded and smoky" and that it had nothing to do with the allegations of hospital superintendent Atkin.

Later, under questioning by Bruce J. S. Macdonald, counsel for several local businessmen, she said "he was just getting fresh" when Atkin left a blonde girl locked themselves in a private room for more than an hour. Macdonald inquired:

The nurse, with three others from the hospital, went to a press photographer's ball at the Book-Cadillac Hotel May 18 in company with Atkin, Mayor Arthur J. Reaume, Dr. P. J. G. Morgan, superintendent of Metropolitan Hospital, and Gordon Fuller, Windsor contractor.

Previously another nurse indicated she and Miss H went to the private room because of Mr. Atkin's actions.

Although administration of the hospital is the basis of the inquiry, much of the evidence to date has been about the Detroit party. The probe started after the resignation of Metropolitan hospital superintendent of nurses at the hospital following investigation of the party and of lack of discipline at the hospital.

NEWFOUNDLAND WILL VOTE FRI. TO ELECT GOVT.

Result of the Vote May Not be Known for Week After Election

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

St. John's, Nfld., May 25 (CP) —Newfoundlanders go to the polls Friday to elect their first provincial government since Confederation.

Results of the vote may not be known for some days. Collection and counting of returns will be conducted under the 1913 Newfoundland Election Act, drawn up to match the slower moving tempo of a bygone day.

The present interim government, holding office since confederation last March and until a successor is elected, has no powers of legislation and thus is unable to amend the act to speed up the operation. Each returning officer is determined efforts must wait until all the boxes in his particular district have been collected before starting the count. In other provinces votes are counted immediately after polls are closed and telephoned or telegraphed to a central place.

Chief Justice Short, chief electoral officer, estimated tentatively that it may be the election will be known within three days. Other estimates varied between one day and a week.

Some idea of the vote-gathering may be gleaned from the following map of the broken, 6,000-mile coastline. Newfoundland fishermen or boats will dodge in and out of inlets and harbors in 77 coastal districts to get the ballot boxes. Much will depend on weather conditions.

Polls will be open from 8 a.m. (NST) Friday to 8 p.m. and 9 p.m. in the two dual districts of St. John's East and West and to 4 p.m. in the other ridings.

Because of the lateness of polling in St. John's, returns from the capital districts, which include a number of fishing villages, may be means before counting ends for the night at midnight Friday. Most returns from the heavily-populated Avalon Peninsula are expected before noon Saturday and the first district likely to be available is Port De Grave, on the Conception Bay.

There are more than 176,000 voters in the 25 districts comprising Newfoundland and Labrador. The island and Labrador. The island is the third dual riding. The election in the two districts will be held on June 2. July 25 because of weather conditions.

WEATHER SYNOPSIS

Toronto, May 25 (CP)— Synopsis: The cool air that moved over Ontario during the 24th of May will bring mild afternoon temperatures in the low fifties in northern sections and the high fifties or low sixties in southern sections today and Thursday. Skies will be partly cloudy with a few scattered today and will be tomorrow with a few showers during the night.

DOUBLE DROWNING DESPITE EFFORT TORONTO WOMAN

Man, Woman Slip From Overturned Canoe

Timagami, May 22. (CP)— Using grappling irons, a party of workers this morning found the body of Mrs. Lloyd Herron, 34, of Haileybury, who was drowned Monday in Lake Timagami.

Meanwhile workers are dragging the lake bed in an effort to find the body of Stanley S. Saxton of Timmins, prominent mining official, who was drowned with Mrs. Harron when a canoe from which three persons were fishing capsized.

The victims, believed to have slipped from an overturned canoe adrift in Ivy Lake Timagami, were Stanley Saxton, manager of the Aunor Gold Mine at South Porcupine, and Mrs. Lloyd Herron, 34, of Haileybury, mother of two children.

Timagami, popular resort area, is about 30 miles north of North Bay.

Mrs. McClary set out from here Monday afternoon to take the couple by canoe for a Victoria Day outing at Ivy Lake, a trip of about 24 miles southwest of here in Lake Timagami. The trio were within sight of the island and the camp on it when Mrs. Herron said a squall capsized the canoe in the choppy offshore waters.

Mrs. McClary, the other woman clung to the drifting canoe while Mrs. McClary swam ashore to obtain a small boat. The second craft capsized and Mrs. McClary again swam ashore. Chilled and exhausted, she could do nothing but watch to help her companions. She watched them drift out of sight and heard their frantic cries die away.

Marooned on Island

With both the canoe and the boat lost, Mrs. McClary was marooned on the island for almost a night. Tuesday morning, she was able to attract the attention of Gus Friday and George Angus and chief boat keeper on the island. Friday and Angus took her to Bear Island, a few miles to the south. They came from the southwest to the pealing of church bells, they marooned in the centre of the city without a fight.

Mrs. McClary is the famous bund, facing on the Whangpoo River, by 8 a.m. Their line of defence ran from the north of the French concession and international settlement.

Until afternoon, the Communists made no move against the Nationalists, but their city that had not already been handed them —the northeastern district and the Bund itself.

At 1.30 p.m. fled troops moved out into the Bund and against the Nationalist-held bridges across Soochow creek. The Communists through Shanghai from east to west and flows under Garden Bridge into the Whangpoo at the north end of the famed thoroughfare.

Fighting Sharp but Minor

Some of the bridge holding Nationalists fought back. Their fire was heavy from pillboxes on the Whangpoo to Woosung, 10 miles away at the mouth of the Yangtze. This was the area the Nationalists used Tuesday night to evacuate the bulk of Shanghai's defenders.

Fighting at the Soochow bridge was sharp — but minor. The communists already had taken the world's fourth largest city. The defence could not last long.

The Nationalists had only about 10 men on each end of Garden Bridge when the Communists began moving in. There were approximately the same number of defenders on each of the other spans.

The Reds took over abandoned Nationalist emplacements where Nanking road meets the Bund in the heart of town, on Garden Bridge, four blocks to the north.

Already there were scuttling farther north. This suggested Communists had crossed Soochow upstream and were encircling the Nationalists.

In the Hongkew section, still farther north, Nationalists were pulling out under the Communists. There evaquation ships were waiting.

The only way out was north.

Long since, the Reds had forged a steel ring almost around the city. Their drive from the southwest had left only one big gaps here international airport and the smaller Jungfoo airfield.

All the refugees poured to the Nationalists was the northward corridor along the Whangpoo—and perhaps the Klangwan military airfield.

City Shook By Blasts

All the while cannonading shook the city as the Reds pressed on with everything available at Woosung fortress. The Communists were determined to make the Nationalist escape corridor a bloody avenue if they did not close it.

The Reds, overrunning the world's most populous country, gave Communism its largest city by occupying almost all of Shanghai.

Stubborn Nationalist rear guards held fast at bridges across Soochow Creek. Red mortars smashed in the main city post office near the Szechuan Road bridge.

Obviously the Nationalist rear guard was buying time in last-stand fights. They want the bulk of their comrades to deploy on the northern edge of the city for another fight or reach ships waiting in the Yangtze to sail for Formosa island or south.

Green-clad communist army veterans emerged the Asian metropolis of some 6,000,000 after 12 hours. They came from the southwest. To the pealing of church bells, they marched in the centre of the city without a fight.

The Communists took famous

Mrs. McClary was taken to hospital at Haileybury, of about 1,000 population, out of here, where she was reported suffering from severe shock.

Her husband, former proprietor of the Rainbow Dairy in Toronto, was killed in a traffic accident about a year ago.

Mrs. Herron left the Saxton and the Haileybury woman had been attempting to take photos on rocks about a mile from the spot where it upset.

Searchers had no trace of the man and woman.

GETS BIG MUSKIE

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 25— (CP) — A 46-pound muskellunge was caught Tuesday by Donald Hamilton of this city in a net set in the Montreal River, about 90 miles north of here, it was announced by W. J. K. Harkness, of the Lands Department, said Tuesday night that the muskellunge, a species does not open until July 1, was illegally caught and taken before the fish were proved to be muskellunge.

Nationalists Blow Up Everything As They Retreat

Whole Horizon to North Of City Appears in Flames

By FRED HAMPSON

Shanghai, May 25 (AP)—Communists marched into Shanghai today and a roaring battle, far worse than the siege, developed.

Retreating Nationalists, trying to fight their way back to Woosung and escape, were blowing up everything they could. At 9 p.m. the whole horizon to the north seemed to explode.

Apparently the government soldiers, pulling back before the advancing Communists, blew up the last of their big ammunition and ammunition installations at Kiangwan airfield.

B. C. I. INSTRUCTOR GOES TO HAMILTON

Instruction in motor mechanics in the vocational dept. of the Belleville Collegiate for the past 18 years, Mr. Ralph Davies, 34 George Street, has resigned his position effective at the close of the present school term. It has been announced by the local board of education.

Mr. Davies has accepted a position at the R.H. Cline technical school at Hamilton, the city from which he came to Belleville 18 years ago. Mr. Davies is a native of Hamilton.

COUNCIL CHAMBERS' ACOUSTICS IMPROVED

With application of acoustic celotex to the walls of the city hall council chambers completed, the "acoustics" of the chambers has now been considerably improved. Previously speakers' voices re-echoed about the room making for very difficult hearing.

The acoustic celotex was applied only to the upper half of the chamber walls but it has the effect of absorbing speakers' voices, thus diminishing the echoes. Ceiling of the chambers will be painted and the floors sanded and oiled before it is again used for meetings.

Monday night's regular council meeting was late in the fair ground forum previously used by the national employment service.

WILL LEASE GROUNDS TO CURLING CLUB

City council Monday evening finalized a previous recommendation to dispose of the brick caretaker's home on the fair grounds property when they passed a by-law authorizing sale of the residence.

Under the terms of the by-law the brick house will be the property of by the Parks Board and the ground leased to the curling club who plan to construct a rink on the property.

H. D. BATEMAN PRES. ASSESSING OFFICERS

City comptroller, Mr. Harold D. Bateman was elected president of the Association of Assessing Officers of Ontario at the association's annual meeting held in Ottawa on Tuesday.

Mr. Bateman succeeds A. G. Tipper of Kirkland Lake. Vice presidents elected included E. V. Radmore of Port Hope, Sound and Morton Laird of St. Catharines.

FIRE DEPARTMENT HAD QUIET HOLIDAY

Members of the local fire department had a comparatively quiet holiday, it was reported today, only three minor calls were answered, it was stated.

Monday firemen were called to a Church Street address to attend to an oil burner which was giving trouble, while this morning the services of firemen was needed to quench a blaze in a car parked at the Bell Telephone garage on Murney Street.

On the holiday a Victoria Street, man on the lawn of a friend themselves locked out of their home and firemen were called to effect an entrance.

Friends Honor Fred Sprague On Retirement

On Monday evening about sixty friends of Fred Sprague gathered in the new recreation centre of the Corby Distilleries, to pay tribute on the eve of his retirement.

Colonel E. A. Gean, collector of Customs and Excise, made the presentation of a beautiful desk set, suitably engraved and handed to the staff of the Port. He reviewed Mr. Sprague's past service and extended a vote of thanks for many happy years of life ahead to Mr. and Mrs. Sprague. Mr. J. V. Doyle, Sales Manager for Canadian Industrial Alcohol Co. and representing the Corby Distilleries presented Mr. Sprague with a gift on behalf of the staff, wishing him extending good wishes.

Mr. Wilfred Leporte, manager of the Corbyville Distilleries, spoke in glowing terms of his association with Mr. Sprague and was confident the same fo-operation would be forthcoming from his successor, Mr. Gordon Miller.

Bridge and cribbage were indulged in for the rest of the evening, then a delightful buffet lunch was served and the guests departed wishing Mr. Sprague many years ahead for his fishing and sailing.

Mr. Sprague entered the civil service as a post office employee in June 1906. He transferred to the Inland Revenue Department, now the Customs and Excise, in January 1918. In 1925, he was awarded the "King's Silver Jubilee Medal" for attention to duty, efficiency and courteous servic on behalf of His Majesty's Government. He was promoted to second officer of the Survey in April 1936 and became chief officer in August 1947. For forty-five years he has given faithful and efficient service and his amiable disposition has won him a host of friends both in the service and with the employees of the Canadian Industrial Alcohol Co. Ltd.

Swamped For Autographs

Players of the Toronto ball club were swamped with demands for autographs and the one who really was swamped was right fielder Johnny Blatnik. Here he is shown with just a few of the many that were wanting him to pen his name for them. Due to the game being played at night the boys had very little time to see the players during pre-game practice but the second load of carriers who are making the trip this Saturday, will have more time to see them after the ball game is over. Waiting while Blatnik gives him his autograph in the back row at the left is Wayne Boyer while Jack Dreyer.—(Photo by Turofsky, Toronto.)

Cast Anxious Eyes on Bat

Either he is wishing he could have a bat like the one that Johnny Weld is showing to the boys or else it may be the effect of all the food that he ate that makes Jack Kennedy look like he wants to cry but whatever it is the boys all had a lot of fun. Because of the large press of the time the boys were unable to stay for the whole of the second game but the most of them were thoroughly satisfied to see Toronto win the first game 8-2. Rain Prevents Finish Quinte Tennis Tourney

Rain Tuesday prevented the completion of what appeared to be earlier in the day a highly successful tournament staged by the Quinte Tennis Club on its courts here.

Morning activities saw the completion of the first round of ladies' doubles, men's doubles and mixed doubles, but early afternoon and evening downpours prevented further play.

The remaining games will be played on the club courts next weekend. Tournament Chairman Dan Cowley announced today.

Upwards of 100 entries from all parts of the district were on hand when play opened at 9:30 yesterday morning. Madoc, Tweed, Point Anne, Trenton, besides the Quinte Club were represented.

The courts were in excellent condition thanks to the hard-working committie in charge and as a result some excellent tennis was provided.

MARMORA Guests from Holland Enjoy Canadian Spring

Marmora.—Marmora welcomes two interesting guests for the next three weeks in the persons of Mr. and Mrs. B. Van den Berg of Rotterdam, Holland. They are guests of Mrs. Charles T. Archer of Forsythe Street.

They left Holland on May 4, to travel by the S.S. Heidi, a merchant ship, and arrived in Montreal last Thursday, following a five weeks voyage. Only other passengers made the trip with them, namely a lady who is visiting her married daughter in Simcoe, and a girl visiting her sister in Toronto.

Father, Interpreter

Mr. Van den Berg is able to converse to some extent in English, but father and daughter will be acting as interpreters for the mother during their stay here. The St. Lawrence and the country through which it passed held charms for this couple. They were thrilled at the sight of the first robin of a second Spring, as they feasted their eyes on the fields, lilies and wild blooms. They are proud of their two grandchildren, Anna Mary and Mary Lou Archer, the former having been born in Holland and but seven months old when coming to Canada.

Mr. Van den Berg has been a notary public for forty-three years and will not be retiring for a while.

Lovely Delft China

Mrs. Archer was pleased to show some of the lovely china made in Holland which was augmented by some five specimens brought by her parents, on this trip. Butter is 39 cents per pound, and eggs 16 cents each. A man's suit is obtainable at 185 guilders, which is practically the equivalent to $185. It was learned that Holland was making good recovery from the effects of the war and the dykes of Zeeland and other fortifications are practically all repaired.

NEWS DISAPPOINTS FAIR

Duke Ellington Thrills Crowd At Arena

Duke Ellington, famous International known orchestra leader lived up to his reputation as one of the foremost exponents of "jazz" here on Monday night when he played to a large crowd of dance devotees at Memorial Arena.

The famous "King of the Cotton Club" one of the most popular night spots in New York's Harlem also gave first hand evidence that his mastery of the piano "swing of music" is no flash in the pan.

The colored maestro wearing a tieless long-collared white shirt, gave a flashing performances in his individual numbers especially when the band was on the air via CJBQ from 11-11.30 p.m.

The rhythmic style of the orchestra played in real "jazz" style caught on immediately and during the evening usually about forty per cent of those who came to dance remained to stand around the orchestra and watch the performance.

It was grand dance entertainment if you were a jazz enthusiast. Such sterling artists as Al Killian, lead trumpeter, Jim Hamull, smooth-working clarinetist, Johnny Hodge alto saxophonist, and Ben Webster, tenor saxophonist were superb with their various instruments.

Al Hibbler one of the band's vocalists, who is totally blind, with Kay Davis and Sara Ford "gave solidity" with song in typical Harlem style.

The drummer of the band who owns equipment to the value of $15,000 was one of the features of the performance not only with his ability with his various instruments but physical antics as well. He practically directed the band during the entire show.

Robt. Acton Closes Railroad Career At Edmonton

A railroading career of 51 years came to a close last month when Robert Acton, formerly of Belleville, brought the crack transcontinental C.N.R. No. 1 passenger train into Edmonton station on his last run from Edson.

Mr. Acton started his career in this city in 1899 as a call boy with the Grand Trunk Railroad. He was promoted to fireman in 1902 and engineer 1909. He has been working out of Edmonton since 1916.

On hand to greet Mr. Acton at the end of his last run were more than 100 friends, including Charles B. Rossiter, the engineer for whom Mr. Acton fired on his first trip. Several company officials were present to extend the company's greetings to the retiring engineer.

In February of this year Mr. Acton was presented with a 50-year service pass from CNR president R.C. Vaughan entitling him and Mrs. Acton to transportation anywhere on the system.

Mr. Acton is a brother of the late Mrs. Nelson Patterson, and an uncle of Mrs. Frank Cushing.

B.C.I. Students Win Top Honors In Oratory

Jeanette Ashbury, Leo Marcus and Kip Summers, all students of the Belleville Collegiate, won top honors in the Rotary Quinte oratorical contest which was held in the Trenton High School last Friday evening. The contest was sponsored by the Trenton Lions Club and attracted contestants from Belleville, Trenton and Westport.

Jeanette Ashbury spoke on "My Profession," Leo Marcus spoke "It's Great to be a Canadian" as his subject and Kip Summers spoke on "Students' Opinion."

Leo Marcus and Jeanette Ashbury, having been chosen as top boy and girl speaker, are now eligible to compete for the Dominion Oratorical championship which will be held at the Canadian National Exhibition.

Seven contestants from Belleville competed. They were Jeanette Ashbury, Joan Harbeck, Leo Marcus, Eleanor Sprague, Kip Summers, Ruth Hall and Betty Woodley. Judges were Fit.-Lt. Rogers of RCAF Station in Trenton and Rev. E. Puttenham of Trenton and Malcolm Robb of Belleville.

Bay of Quinte U.C. Conference In County Town

Picton (Special) — The 25th session of the Bay of Quinte Conference of the United Church of Canada is being held in Picton United Church, Tuesday, May 31 to June 3. The occasion also marks the 125th anniversary of the First Conference of the Canadian Methodist Church which was held in Picton in 1834.

Rev. Wilfred Wallace Jones, M.A., D.D., Immediate Past Moderator of the Church in Canada, will be the special preacher for the session, Rev. J. Verner McKinley, Oshawa, is president of the Conference with Rev. H. C. Wolfraim of Almonte, secretary and Rev. Alfred Poulter, Madoc, assistant secretary and press reporter, and Rev. John E. Glover, treasurer. Rev. A. H. Batcheler is pastor of the Conference church.

At the ordination service seven candidates will be ordained into the ministry of the United Church. They are Harold Wesley Clifton, Benjamin Lewis Hoskin, Jack H. McAvanay, Wilson Laird Morden, Gordon M. MacKenzie, Charles Frederick Poulter, Geo. F. Teskey.

A service will be held in the old Conger Chapel, built in 1809, just east of Picton, during the session, with Rev. J. Faulds, archivist, giving an historical sketch.

1,000 Expected

Among those who will take part in the sessions which are expected to be attended by one thousand ministers, laymen and others are Dr. C. W. Siemon, president of the Lay Association; Rev. G. Telford, Oshawa, who will speak following the communion service; Rev. E. W. Rowland, in charge of memorial service; Rev. Leslie Cooke, secretary of congregational union of England and Wales and Rev. A. S. Sissel, formerly of Africa; A. E. McBride, chairman of M. and M. Fund; W. H. Harold Young, Secretary of the Board of Colleges and Secondary Schools; Rev. C. M. Macdonald, Associate Secretary of Home Missions and A. J. Wilson, editor of the United Church Observer, Toronto; Rev. F. E. Glover, conference treasurer; Rev A. J. Cooper, Associate secretary of the Board Christian Education; Rev. H. G. Tuttle, secretary of the Department of Pensions.

Liberal Nominated

Picton — Gordon L. Bell, Cherry Valley, was named Liberal candidate at a convention for the Prince Edward-Lennox riding held at Napanee, Saturday after noon. In the balloting, he defeated Reeve Hugh R. MacDonald of Bloomfield. There are now three candidates in this riding for the June 11 election: George J. Thistin, Progressive Conservative; G. L. Bell, Liberal, and Colin Carter, C.C.F.

Group Capt. Harvey Moved to Trenton

Ottawa, May 25 —(CP)—Group Capt. J.B. Harvey, 37, of Winnipeg has been appointed senior personnel staff officer of Central Air Command, Trenton, Ont., air force headquarters announced today. He takes up his new duties June 1.

Group Capt. Harvey succeeds Group Capt. E. M. Reynor, 32, of Toronto, who has been appointed chief instructor of the R.C.A.F. Staff College at Toronto.

Sanicki Shows Carrier Boys

The carrier boys were a little downhearted with the Leafs in the first game of the doubleheader but soon made centre fielder Ed. Sanicki their idol as he hit a two-run homer over the left field fence to help the Leafs defeat Montreal 3-2 in the first game at Maple Leaf Stadium on Saturday. North Hastings Schools Take Part In Forestry Work

Among those concerned with replacing what has been lost, there are few more interested than today's school children. Evidence of this was well illustrated in the Birds Creek area northwest of Bancroft this past week, as students from eleven public schools in the North Hastings Inspectorate and from North Hastings High School, assembled over 200 acres of land sparsely grassed and dotted with brush and tree stumps. The size of the stumps gave some evidence of once great red pines. One stump measured 32 inches in diameter.

A unit of the Hastings County Forest project, a small portion of the Bird's Creek area is covered with scrub poplar, white pine with interspersed red but the far greater and more barren area, leads to the voluntary efforts of the school children in new set out with 25,000 red pine seedlings six feet apart, in rows spaced eight feet apart. Fire guards, too, were plowed, so that a large measure of protection is given to the infant red pines.

Schools represented along this 200 acre front in this battle for reclamation were Bancroft Public School, Grades 7 and 8; Farley Schools No. 2, 3 and 4; Wicklow-McClure No. 2; Monteagle-Herschel No. 1, 3, 7 and 8; and North Hastings High School, Bancroft, Grades 9 and 10. Included in the student body were members of the Forestry Club. The Forestry Club of this school is composed of 18 students who are studying, in addition to their regular courses, the fundamentals of good forestry practice. This is a unit of the Boys' and Girls' Club groups sponsored by the Ontario Department of Agriculture in co-operation with the Department of Lands and Forests.

Department of Lands and Forests Zone Forester W. E. Edwards was in charge and gave instruction in planting. Representative A. O. Dalrymple, Department of Agriculture, Stirling; District Forester Griffith, Department of Lands and Forests, attended.

Indication of the increasing interest in woodland conservation and land reclamation tree planting is evidenced by the many local planting projects under way this Spring in addition to the Hastings County Forest program. Other planting projects in the Quinte Forest, Lennox and Addington County, 225 acres near Actonville; Lennox and Addington County Forests, Kaladar, near Flinton, 150 acres plus 200 acres recently purchased; Frontenac County, per Kingston Horticultural Association Game Sanctuary area, Battlefield Military Camp, 800 acres.

NURSE TELLS

"There was nothing unusual at the Zoo as I had a very good time and made no complaints," Miss H. said.

Miss H. told Judge Eric Cross, one-man Ontario Royal Commission, that the reason Mr. Atkin was "overbearing" when she said he was getting friendly.

Grace Atkin appeared after Miss H.

Budget Explained

Asked to explain how the budget was drawn up each year, in view of previous testimony by Dr. C. H. Weber of the medical staff that it is arrived at by adding two per cent to the previous year's deficit, Mr. Atkin said department heads are consulted and they submit estimates of figures. Estimates are compared with the previous year's expenditures and are given to the finance committee. The total is divided by 12 for a roughly monthly estimate.

Mr. Atkin said the big fault in the budgeting was that no attempt was made to figure out expenditures in the light of peak periods. He said the quarterly statement is the "one which gives us the best picture of how we are going."

He said that the mayor asked him to get girls for the party. To another question he said he did not believe it was over the party that Miss Mather resigned but rather because she was in ill health.

SCATTERED FROST DAMAGES TOMATOES

London, Ont., May 25 (CP)—Scattered frost damage was reported among garden plants, especially tomatoes in the London district Tuesday night as mercury dipped to an official low of 34.2 at city airport.

Tuesday's high temperature was 68 degrees and the 10 a.m. reading today 47 degrees.

Local Branch Can. Legion Holds Special Meeting

With pasture growth considerably earlier than normally, cheese factories in the Bay of Quinte district reported a considerably heavier flow of milk than at the same time last year. Weekly crop report issued by the Ontario Department of Agriculture indicated that the cheese make is about twice what it was at the same time last year.

In Prince Edward county American cattle buyers have scoured the country with the view of purchasing good milch cows, a number of farmers have made a start at tomato setting, it is reported.

General development of all crops in the district seems to be about one week ahead of that for the same period last year, while the rain received over the week-end will further speed the growth of crops.

24 Lambs Killed At Shannonville

Dogs running at large in the Shannonville area have destroyed a total of 24 young lambs, it was reported today by the Ontario Humane Society inspector, Thomas Thorne.

Mr. Thorne stated the dogs chased the lambs some time Sunday night, the young lambs being found about the pasture fields Monday morning with their throats slashed. The lambs were owned by two farmers, a Mr. Wheeler and a Mr. Graves, residing about one and one-half miles west of Shannonville. Mr. Wheeler lost 14 lambs and Mr. Brown 10.

Farmers state that five black and tan hounds and one large black dog, all believed to be from Shannonville, were responsible for the destruction. Mr. Thorpe has warned all dogs in the village tied.

CHECK 'N DOUBLE CHECK

Chemical analyses conducted by the Dominion department of agriculture on farm foodstuffs, fertilizers and pesticides total approximately 20,000 yearly.

REDS MOST

Avenue, a group of Communist soldiers came down the street carrying stacks of rifles they took from soldiers who barricaded themselves in the China Press-China Tribune building but later surrendered.

These are the most professional-looking Chinese soldiers I ever saw.

Everybody connected with The Associated Press is covering the change-over from some vantage point. My house boy, Koo, just telephoned from his spot near the top of Hamilton House, which is across Puchow Road from the city hall.

Koo said: "Master, just now I see through window mayor's office many Communists go in, open desk, take many papers. Just now many Communists' reading papers."

For a while, the Great Northern Cable Building, where The Associated Press offices is located, was blocked off by Red troops.

Correspondent Landman solved the problem by climbing over a high fence, carrying behind a service station into an alley and reached Szechwan Road. There, he found a government radio office where he stayed while developments were phoned to him.

Several Charges Face Sidney Man

Out on bail awaiting trial on two charges of forgery and of illegal use of documents, Harold Crawford, Sidney township, has been apprehended on four charges of false pretences involving the passing of bad cheques.

Crawford was arrested in St. Catharines at the request of local police and was presented earlier yesterday by Inspector J. C. Hayes. He will appear in county court on Thursday and in city magistrate's court on Friday in answer to several charges.

Crawford is said to have hired a car from a local garage and drove it to St. Catharines where he was apprehended by provincial police.

VICTORIA DAY CELEBRATED

Canada has celebrated Victoria Day and Empire Day in the traditional manner of observance.

The Empire or Commonwealth today is firmer than ever it was and it can see its influence widening the bounds of freedom of the nations. Not long ago India decided to become a republic and still she remains in the Empire. The Empire is one of the happiest ideas and realizations ever held or achieved in the realm of world political organization. It is indicative of the strength that lies in British freedom. The world not so long ago saw Britain and the free powers smash the tyranny of Germany, Japan and Mussolini's fascism.

In the hearts of the Canadian people Victoria Day means just that great freedom within the Empire, a freedom for which Canadians have true grounds for pride and gratitude for Canadian freedom is freedom itself and still it is within the Empire, which in the late war became an example to the entire world of the devotion of Empire countries to their world obligations to crush tyranny.

Canada has observed another Victoria Day and with it has been associated Empire Day. The people of this country feel the widening influences of those states which are truly free, the members of that wide-wide organization of free men in the Commonwealth or Empire.

Victoria Day has a deep significance for the Canadian people and it is one of the very happy signs that Britain is still the leader and that with her are the nations of the British Commonwealth and those nations that are free and those that are seeking freedom.

NORWAY CELEBRATES

Norway's Constitution Day was celebrated last week in no uncertain manner. On May 17, 1814, 112 delegates chosen at spontaneous local gatherings in the land over met at Eidsvoll near Oslo, to draft Norway's present constitution. The draft had been wisely selected. It was one of the cities where a thousand years before Norwegian freemen had met to hear the laws recited and to have their disputes adjudged. Freedom, self-government and independence were to be restored, not imposed by the Eidsvoll men.

Rule of dictatorship was matched in the ancient forms only by respect for the right to speak one's mind. That is still Norway's attitude.

This year long processions of children waving flags marked the day in the traditional manner. Tens of thousand of the people of Oslo paraded up Karl Johan's Gate and the Royal Palace where King Haakon and his family returned congratulations. May 17 was at once a rededication and warning, a rededication to Norway's faith in the good example and a warning to all who would underestimate the strength of the Eidsvoll ideal.

What Norway underwent in the cause of worldwide liberty is well known to this age which has seen such nations as Norway defy the might of such as Hitler and roll them and their organizations of terrorism in the dust. Norway had her true share in smashing the Axis.

DEVOTION TO COUNTRY

The United States and her Allies in the late Great War and the nations of the Atlantic Union mourn the untimely devotion to his country, James Forrestal, secretary of the treasury during the late struggle. In the words of the President of the U. S., he died truly a casualty of the late war in the service of which he had sacrificed himself to the extreme limits of human endurance. He had later the very trying task of the first Secretary of Defence. First he had served as assistant to President Roosevelt.

His life is an example of the spirit of devotion to duty carried out at great personal sacrifice and with the utmost zeal.

His memory will not be forgotten by the democratic peoples whom he served in a manner worthy of all those inspired by the principles and cause of freedom.

The general belief in democratic countries is that the recent anti-Red vote in Soviet-dominated West Germany was much higher than that announced by the Red authorities in the German zone, which was said to be slightly more than 98 per cent.

Universal democratic opinion seems that the fact was so marked that the Soviet advocates did not dare to claim any more than they did on account of the strong opposition shown by the voters in Germany.

What will indicate most clearly the strength of the anti-Red vote was the ill-grace with which the Communists acted when it came to announcing the vote. Their announcement bore the marks that all the facts of the voting and the strength of the anti-Communist vote were not disclosed.

JUST FOLKS

RELAX

Relax and let the muscles rest.
Relax and all that's wrong forget.
Relax, though people are oppressed
And tyranny is still a threat.

Relax and put the mind at ease,
Dismiss the worries of the day.
Forget the quarrels overseas.
Relax! How easy that to say!

Yet thoughts will come by day and night
And care pick up the brawling work.
And those who tell the news must write
The second war may breed the third.

Oh, when will come the days of peace
To end the fears that fret and taxt
And when will all the hatreds cease
That men and nations may relax?

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS

20 YEARS AGO

MAY 25TH, 1928

Mr. J. Duffin of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, is spending a few days in town.

Mr. and Mrs. Parks and son of St. Catharines are visiting Mrs. Parks' mother, Mrs. Robson, Murray Street.

Mr. and Mrs. R. Cordes, Ottawa, are visiting the former's mother at her home on Murney Street.

Miss Irene Baker was home from Toronto to spend the holiday.

Mr. Wilton White of Chicago, Ill., and formerly a printer here, is spending a few days in town. He is enroute to New York City and Boston on a holiday trip.

30 YEARS AGO

MAY 25th, 1918

A close and exciting game of baseball was played on St. Michael's School ground between two Midget League teams, the Lions and Tigers, the game ended in favor of the former team, the score being 13 to 5. The following composed the teams: Lions, Marsaw, R. Storks, D. Scott, Hickey, B. Scott, L. Storks, O'Brien, Jackson and Lafky; Tigers, F. Woodley, Leonard, Barrage, Baker, Barnett, Kennedy and Wells.

Mr. C. J. Martin was home from Toronto to spend the holiday.

Mr and Mrs. Roy Minne have returned to Toronto after visiting relatives here.

Mr. and Mrs. O.P. Lowery of Toronto are visiting her parents Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Thompson, Sinclair Street.

40 YEARS AGO

MAY 25th, 1908

The officers and men of the 15th Regiment and both bands went to Picton yesterday and had a grand time. The men made a fine appearance in the street parade. The trip was made on the steamer Aletha.

In a baseball match here yesterday the Kingston Three Link Team defeated the Belleville team, the score being 5 to 2. The following composed the Belleville team: Thompson, Morrow, Smith, Brennan, Brown, Connolly, Walker, Ramsay and Herold.

The Belle Crothers of Toronto, formerly of Belleville, spent the holiday here with friends.

50 YEARS AGO

MAY 25th, 1888

Ald. W. A. Hungerford is spending some time in the mining country of the northern part of the county.

Mr. and Mrs. George Bridgen of Toronto are visiting here.

Mr. Arthur Dulmage is home on a visit from New York City, where he is taking a course in the Vanderbilt School of Nursing.

Mr. Will Taylor has accepted a position with a firm in Toronto and has left to reside there.

Everything is now looking quick and span in Bannockburn Park. Under experienced direction of Mr. J. F. Baird the grounds are now in fine shape and in good order and nothing has been left undone which will tend to the pleasure and comfort of those who visit this beautiful spot.

Mr. Gil E. Fox of this city took part in a concert at Madoc last evening.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

Don't Try That Route

In a current motion picture, one of the characters heads down a bottle of gin before a disconsolate chap who was having a hard time facing his troubles. He tells this and do your forgetting alone." Is the way the script runs at this point.

Will bring to one's mind the realization that a lot of people drink under the delusion that they can forget their troubles that way. Of course all they do is to knock centers and, having lost all sense of responsibility by subjecting a portion of their brain to the effects of an anesthetic, they temporarily forget their troubles.

But only temporarily. When the effect of the drug, which gives the kick to liquor, has worn off, then the troubles are back again more impudent and assailing than before. Not only has nothing been gained; the habit of running away from the problems of life has begun to form, as a well-known psychiatrist said recently.

Alcoholism is not the outstanding problem we sometimes think it is. Moderation is the real issue. Drinking is an unwise method of trying to handle the problems of life.

Fort Frances, Ont., (CP)—Building permits issued during April total $74,443. Eleven new residences to cost $41,525; two general stores at $10,500 and public utilities storage building at $3,200 are included in the list.

Communists Start Indoctrinating Youths in Germany at Six Years

By KARL HEINZ SCHWAB

Berlin, May 25. (AP)—Hitler started indoctrination of German youth in Nazism at the age of 10. But the Communists in the Russian Eastern Germany start with the youngsters at six years.

"We are not old enough yet to go into the factories and fight, but as a better life but we are not too young to help fight for peace. Therefore we will do all we can either to suffer from the war the Communists want."

This statement was made by a five-year-old boy at a Communist youth rally. The boy is a member of the "Young Pioneers", a new Communist youth organization comprising boys and girls between the ages of six years of age.

The order to set up the Young Pioneer" came from the Russian backed "German economic commission" in Berlin. Communists are thrilled de facto government of the Russian Zone. They decreed that "pioneer" groups be set up at every school in the Zone.

All German teacher who recently fled to Western Germany said school principals thoroughly ran the show, predominantly Communist, went to work quickly. They got a great number of children into the Young Pioneer organization.

But Russian political officers were dissatisfied, and declared, when they received the first reports, that they had failed in principals.

There are too many members, said the Russians. They told the embarrassed principals that they had in mind "quality" rather than a "mass organization".

Meanwhile an anti-Communist Berlin newspaper reported that first elected heroes of "pioneer" activity.

In a report from Leipzig, in the Russian zone, the paper "Der Abend" said the "young pioneers" had taken steps at one school to prevent children from playing "cowboys and Indians". Now they have an average of 125 truants a day before school, whereas formerly there were only four a day now, the paper said.

But it added that this, of course, wasn't managed without some nose-punching.

Vishinsky Agrees To Proposal of Western Powers

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
(Associated Press News Analyst)

That crash you heard Tuesday was the monkey-wrench being thrown in the works of the newly-assembled Big Four Ministers' council in Paris.

When the council assembled Monday, after a lapse of a year and a half since the Big Three last walked out of the last session, the meeting was a half-hearted affair at which foreign ministers Bevin of British, Schuman of France, Molotov of Russia and Acheson of the United States, Secretary of State Vishinsky promptly agreed to an agenda proposed by the three western powers, leaving aside the Austrian question.

"If I am not absolutely convinced of Russian sincerity, nothing unless I will consent to your proposal ... we are going to agree on it," Vishinsky told the Big Three.

The Western Powers had entered the meeting determined to carry through the establishment of a federal republic in their zones of occupation, and hoping to persuade Russia to bring the Eastern zone into the arrangement. That is, they were aiming for a united Germany which still would remain under Allied supervision until complete moral and economic rehabilitation had been achieved.

About Face

Vishinsky accused the Western Powers of departing from the principles laid down in the Allied pact made at Potsdam just after the end of the European fighting. He called for restoration of four-power control throughout Germany, as laid down in Potsdam, and for establishment of a German state council with economic and administrative functions.

This would mean a return to the original control set-up which would—in a way—do away with the newly-created German Republic, Vishinsky proposed that the Ruhr be placed under control of the Big Four, and that they be ordering Germany. These countries would include not only the western powers but Russia. The Netherlands and Luxembourg but Poland and Czechoslovakia on the east.

West's Firm Stand

Acheson compared Vishinsky's plan with the idea of a patient trying to run a hospital. Experienced firms restored, being permanded to return to the paralyzed condition.

Schuman argued against turning to the starting point

Five Persons Die By Accident Over Holiday

By The Canadian Press

Five persons died in Ontario of Victoria Day accidents—an unofficial compilation showed by May 24 holiday. In the past eight to 10 deaths have been recorded on the anniversary of Queen Victoria's birth, four other deaths were reported in other parts of Canada.

Stanley Sexton, manager of Asses Gold Mine at Boston Creek, pine, and an unidentified woman from Haileybury, were drowned in the choppy waters of Lake Timiskaming when their boat left Ferguson Bay, when their canoe capsized in a squall.

Melvin (Curly) Holmes, 22, of Welland, suffered a punctured lung when the horses bolted tossing him under the roller. He was a star forward with Welland Falcons who captured the Ontario Juvenile "B" hockey championship in 1945.

Margaret Jennings, 26, sound recordist on Canadian Pacific Railway train at Kemptville was believed to have been struck early Tuesday by a passenger train on the adjacent track.

At Baden, eight miles southwest of Kitchener, Helen Schmidt, 19-year-old bible-study teacher, was killed when the car in which she was a passenger collided with a Canadian National Railways train.

16-POUND BROWN TROUT

Owen Sound, May 25 (CP)—A 10-pound, four-ounce German brown trout believed the largest ever caught in this district, was landed Tuesday by Ernest Holland of the Holland Centre, after an hour-long battle. The fish, caught in Bighead River near Dobie, measured 30 inches in length and 17 inches in girth.

PNEUMONIA FOLLOWING AN OPERATION

One of the several good reasons for "getting up" as soon as one can within three days after major operations is to prevent postoperative pneumonia.

If the patient catches pneumonia (infection with the Pneumococcus) disease will develop after a short incubation period (24 hours or less in most cases), regardless of treatment or "precautions" applied to guard against it. Such treatment or precautions are not effective in the circumstances as similar treatment or precautions would be to prevent development of smallpox or to uphold fever after the patient has been infected with either disease.

Yet there are millions of laymen and, I hate to admit, thousands of physicians who harbor the conviction that "chilling" is the main cause of pneumonia, particularly following a major operation.

Because so many surgeons have accepted this notion in the past most hospital operating rooms and wards and private rooms are kept overheated to a temperature of degrees even when the weather is ideal. The idea behind this overheaviness is the nineteenth century notion that pneumonia will attack any surgical patient who is not kept constantly overheated and more or less in a sweat.

Such practice, excessive heat, as many sensible persons know from experience, causes prostration, is depressing, weakening, debilitating and shocking. It is obvious to any one who has had the opportunity to take a long, detached view of the situation that tempering the heat and admitting fresh air, to operating room, ward or private room, is at least as important for the safety of the patient as any routine technical procedure in the preparatory and post-operative care of the patient.

In the name of common sense, in the name of all that is sensible that the patient be kept comfortably warm at all times. How to accomplish this is best effected by having the operating-table thermostatically controlled to keep the warm covers over portions of the body that are not exposed during the operation and applying artificial heat in one form or another to the feet, hands and chest of the body. Under such circumstances the temperature, humidity and ventilation of the operating-room may be kept within the limits of comfort to the benefit to all concerned.

The reason why this practice of overheating the operating-room and keeping the patient persistently is that a good many physicians and surgeons still cherish the superstition—to dismiss it more charitably—that pneumonia is caused by chilling. Such misguided physicians and surgeons are the greatest obstacles to the treatment of pneumonia.

2. Cold sponging.
3. The usual medicines are favorable.
4. The patient should be thoroughly well ventilated.
5. The patient should not be too much bundled up with clothing.

The physician who has had experience in the open air treatment of pneumonia and the patient who has received such treatment will agree, I am sure, that cool or cold fresh air is far better than warm or hot air for one with lobar pneumonia.

In most instances the "pneumonia" that follows a major operation is not pneumonia at all, but atelectasis (collapse of a portion of the lung) or hypostatic congestion (stagnation of blood in the bases or lower portions of the lungs). In respect to the latter two complications are so often called "pneumonia" for that implies that the victim will not have the benefit of proper treatment or that the responsibility family and friends will suspect that the patient is dying or dead, and through the negligence of hospital, physician or nurse. This is all wrong, but it seems to be the way the old fogies in the profession want it.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Fever, Hay?

Most people welcome approach of June, but in the past ten years it has seemed unwise to me, because on or about the 4th of June I am invariably "a victim" of hay fever. (Mrs. V. S.)

Answer—It is a little late to prevent hay fever this season, but you may find palliative suggestions in the booklet Hay Fever, mailed on written request if you provide a stamped self addressed envelope.

Warm Milk

Mother takes milk from refrigerator and lets it stand in a warm room, in the sun, sometimes for an hour or more before she is ready to use it. Does this harmful bacteria multiply under these conditions? (M. F. C.)

Answer—Not enough to matter. Don't offer me cold milk. It is cooly I want it at least warmed up.

Not So Stupid Now

I have had such wonderful help from the treatment recommended in your booklet "It is Stupid to Suffer from Piles" that am spending twenty-five cents and stamp self addressed envelope for your booklet. The Constipation Habit and Colon Hygiene. (Miss M. E.)

Answer—The pamphlet is available to any correspondent who pays for same by sending 25c (clipping) and enclose stamped self addressed envelope.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

With regard to Russia, there are really two kinds of people in evidence amongst us. The majority is the familiar frowsy, obviously ill-equipped type who is full of that kind of zeal that must have proved so irritating to the early Christians as it is to cause the Romans to use them for lion bait.

The other type of crackpot is at the other end of the pole. Well-dressed, well-groomed, well-fed, he is pro-Russia. What neither of these crackpots realize is that they are equally tiresome to the majority of the sane and reasonable people. For the exact same reason neither of them knows any more about Russia that they can read. And at the rest of us can read too.

It is probable the zealous pro-Russian imagines the majority of us deliberately avoid reading the material he sends. This makes him an authority.

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

Woodland Homes

Bird's nests have always interested me, as they have thousands of others, but I never knew much about them. Apparently it is not intelligence upon the part of a bird that enables it to build its nest. It is more interesting fashion, but pure instinct. Each variety of bird seems to have its own architectural design and never varies from it. The nest of the robin is instinct, nest building is pure genius on the part of the builder, for some are most intricately and perfectly constructed and are lined with the soft set of feathers. Viscount Grey tells in his interesting book "The Charm of Birds" of a second that was kept that showed a little more than genius. The nest was a long-tailed tit, and one of the birds had several plucking its building material from the back of a white turkey.

Mud, moss, vine creepers, moss, horse hair, feathers, dried grass, in many other types of material are used by these wood-land home builders. The robin threads with a small opening on one side. Just a few strings hold it to the limb and I looked for a strong wind to break it—but it stood.

Some birds build hardly no nest at all, as the night hawk. Nature protects the eggs from rolling off by making one end more pointed than the other and more pointed so that the eggs merely roll in one spot Many a bird nest is built upon a swaying reed or limb, but the bird knows how to build, and will not roll out when the winds moves it about.

Nature has left free of its burglars and robbers, any more than man is. Many an animal has chosen as an industrious bird out of his home. The cuckoo lays her egg in a bird's nest, and it is up to the bird in its time in a jail! And even among the birds themselves there are those who are more virtuous. A thrush built its nest in a tree at the entrance to my home. But the red enemies drove it away. A tragedy of nature.

ONE MINUTE NEWS ABOUT JOHNS-MANVILLE

HEAT CONTROL IS NO PROBLEM

Keeping cool may be your biggest problem during the scorching hot days ahead. But even on the hottest day, the temperature will be low compared to the fierce heat of up to 8000 degrees required by industry.

To control extreme temperatures and prevent heat loss, Johns-Manville, through years of research has developed a wide variety of scientific insulating materials. One of these is J-M Insulation to solve every heat problem from 600 degrees below zero to 2,500 above. Today, in every type of industry, from refineries to mines J-M Insulations speed up manufacturing and save thousands of dollars of fuel and (or) fuel oil every year.

If you have an insulation problem, contact, Johns-Manville, 199 Front St. West, Toronto, or see your J-M distributor.

56 Boy Choristers Will Visit City Friday Night

Fifty-six boy choristers from St. Michael's Cathedral "Schola Cantorum" Toronto will be heard at the Belleville Collegiate auditorium on the evening of Friday, May 28th, when they will present a varied program of vocal numbers.

The boy choristers have been heard in many centres throughout Ontario and have won high acclaim from music lovers in all places where they have been heard. In each case the choristers have impressed their audiences with the outstanding quality of the training received at the Schola.

This school was founded in 1936 by Right Reverend J. F. Ronan, D.D., M.C.G. It is not a school for music only but is a regular school with music added as a specialty. The boys attend classes from nine to four, Monday through Friday and follow the departmental course and examinations. Music as well as studies do not impede general school progress, but increases the boys' general talent, giving practical interest in routine school life.

The curriculum of the school includes solo training, choral and solo singing, technique of the bass, soffeggio and eight singing Gregorian and polyphonic church music, as well as piano and organ lessons. Church music is encouraged.

Newspaper reviews of concerts given by the choristers have been high in praise of the singers, as is illustrated by one following a recent concert at the Eaton auditorium:

"The boy choristers from St. Michael's Cathedral under Dr. Ronan, held the audience captive from the first note of their song to the last glorious harmonies of Elgar's "Land of Hope and Glory" which closed the concert. Their sweet, clean, steady, high-pitched note one shivered into a added to another until place school and re-echoed with harmonies of spiritual loveliness. There was never a faltering phrase, nor a half-hearted lead; no string of voices had no fading out through want of breath. Colour was there in shaded loveliness. A solo boy, Stephen Somerville, chanted Agnus Dei."

Ald. E. Liddle, Deputy District Zone Commander

The annual convention for District "F" Canadian Legion held in Legion Hall, Port Perry on May 22nd, 1948; two hundred and fifty accredited and fraternal delegates were present from District "F"; along with many visitors from Provincial Department of Veterans Affairs, Ontario Provincial Command and Whitby. Representing Belleville Branch were Comrades Everett Liddle, A/Zone Commander "F"-3, Elmer Smith 1st Vice President, Belleville Branch 99, Ed. Burling, G. T. Scullion, Jack Cowan and J. Finden carried the colors for Belleville Branch 99.

The purpose of this district convention was for the study of matters dealing with Legion affairs, resolutions that originated at Branches and Zone meetings and if passed to be submitted to the Ontario Provincial Convention at Ottawa, June 14th to 17th. Twenty resolutions dealing with the welfare of veterans and their dependents were approved by the resolution committee under the chairmanship of McIntyre Hood were presented to the Convention and after long discussion were passed by the District body; Comrade Miller of Brighton Branch.

Deputy District Commander assisted the general chairman in presenting the resolutions. Registration took place between 9 a.m. and 10 a.m. and all accredited delegations were given their credentials. The opening ritual took place at 2 p.m. Comrade Frank Threadgold, District Commander "F" presiding. Comrade Jean Wilson of Whitby Branch singing "The Lord's Prayer." The Adjutant of the Salvation Army was also present and offered an opening prayer.

After the morning session, a parade to the cenotaph took place and was headed by a color party carrying the colors of the different branches and a wreath was deposited on the beautiful Memorial by Comrade Threadgold. After the parade the delegates sat down to a banquet that was put on by the Ladies' Auxiliary of Oshawa Branch. The convention opened the afternoon session.

Shortly after the afternoon opening the delegates were entertained for half an hour by an all-girl choir from Whitby under the direction of Mrs. P. Spratt. This choir put on several numbers of all varieties and were much enjoyed by the convention. After all resolutions had been dealt with, the election of officers took place for District Commander, Deputy District Commander and District Sports Officer.

Comrade Frank Threadgold of Whitby was re-elected to the office of District Commander. Comrade Everett Liddle of Belleville Branch 99, was elected to the office of Deputy District Commander and Comrade Ted. Rollins of Cobourg Branch was elected District Sports Officer. Plans are being made to hold a district picnic at Cobourg some time in July. Lindsay was chosen for the district meeting for 1949; invitations were also received from Peterborough and Marmora.

The Mayor of Oshawa attended the welcome from the city and the president of the host branch also gave the delegates the welcome from Oshawa Branch. Comrade Hulse, 3rd vice president of Ontario Command came down from Aurora and presided during the elections.

Forty - three Legion branches made up District "F". The following 3 zones in the district. The total district is made up in the Ontario Command is nine. Albuquerque, N. M. — (AP) — Bob Dogger got two birdies on the sands hole at The New Mexico University golf course.

One of them had feathers.

Dogger teed off for the first hole and the ball smacked a bird in mid-air. He also got a birdie—the golf kind — on the par-four hole.

St. Mary Cray, Kent, England — (CP) — Harry Brown thought he was on something good.

He read in a paper that a nearby firm was selling beer at 1s. (35 cents) a gallon, so he wrote to the brewery ordering nine gallons and enclosed ws.

But the brewery returned the money and politely told Brown that particular beer today costs 5s 6d.

He had failed to read the newspaper heading:

"It happened 50 years ago."

Willingham, England—(AP) — This Suffolk village is being bothered by an old owl that isn't as wise as old owls are supposed to be.

The bird, who has been pecking at unsuspecting passersby on a dark lane, took a sip recently at its own best friend — local game warden Percy Fort.

ANOTHER HOUSING SHORTAGE

Montreal (CP)—Even birds are having housing difficulties here. Two local bird experts recently conducted surveys on Mount Royal. Starlings and common house sparrows have pre-empted most of the best bird houses and blue birds, house wrens and tree swallows are having a hard time finding homes.

Unknown to Father Small Girl Gets Wild Ride on Side of Car

Hamilton, May 25 — (CP)—A three-year-old girl, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Albert Belsey, clung to the running board of her father's car unknown to him yesterday half-a-mile through city streets before being brushed off as the car passed close to a parked vehicle and her feet were caught by it.

Unhurt but badly scared and shocked, the little girl was picked up and taken home by Acting Detective Michael Andrews. He was standing in front of his home, talking to one of his own boys when he was amazed to see the car speed past with the little girl clinging to the running board.

He ran after the car, shouting to the driver to stop but failed to catch the vehicle as it slowed down to pass between two parked cars. The little girl's feet touched a parked automobile and she was thrown to the ground.

Later, it was found that Mr. Delsey thought Barbara was in the house with his wife and the other children, being put to bed. Unaware that she was sitting on the running board, he had driven away. He did not learn of the incident until he returned home later in the evening.

Lawn Bowlers Hold Opening Day Jitney

The Belleville Lawn Bowling Club opened its seasonal activities officially yesterday afternoon when 34 members of the club augmented by two members of the Meaford Club, Messrs. W. E. Connor and W. Samson, who were guests for the afternoon, participated in a 2-game mixed bonspiel three-rink event.

The play, scheduled to start at two, were delayed almost a full hour due to a rain shower shortly after dinner, as a result it was necessary for the jitney committee, headed again this year by Jerry Hyde, to change the original plans of three 15-end games to two 10-end games in order to finish the play and distribute the prizes prior to the supper hour.

The following were the two game winners, Mrs. R. Gerow, Gordon Watkis, Mrs. A. Lloyd, Jerry Hyde, Mrs. G. Vince, Winfred Price, Mary Humphries and George Stewart ranked in accordance with their scores. The high one-game winners were as follows also ranked in the order of their scores—Bill Anderson, Chas. L. Hyde, Harry Martin, Harry Taylor, Bruce Humphries, and Mrs. C. H. McBride.

All of the other participants also received a prize of small value.

It was decided to hold another

Club Activities

HOLLOWAY ENERGETIC CLUB

The regular meeting of Holloway Street Energetic Club took the form of a very enjoyable bowling party at the Bowl-O-Drome on Friday evening.

For the past few months, the various groups have been competing with each other in securing new members with the two winning groups to be the guests of the three losing ones. The winners were Hilda and Ruby Bucks, and Jeanette and Ozzie Oudendyke and their group.

After the party the members met at the church, where a brief devotional was held.

Refreshments were served by the losers, consisting of Clara and Larry Hopkins, Thelma and Lloyd Sprague, Mildred and Alan Hill; Burtt and their groups.

The Twitter was then read by the editor, Dan Fraser, and the meeting closed with the Mizpah benediction and friendship circle.

No Harsh Laxatives in Two Years!

Man Finds Relief With Famous Cereal

If you are nagged by constipation worries, read this anecdotal letter:

"Constipation cost me a pretty penny of money for strong laxatives and diet. But since I started eating KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN regularly over two years ago, I haven't had to take any laxative. Doing fine, feeling fine! Wish everyone troubled as I was could know as I now know the truth." W. J. Riley, Molson, Manitoba.

Constipated due to lack of bulk in your diet? You may find relief from sluggishness and taking harsh laxatives. For natural results, try KELLOGG'S ALL-BRAN every day, drink plenty of water. RAWDON

Mount Pleasant Welcomes Dutch Family of Seven

Rawdon—Over 100 people from the Mount Pleasant Community gathered in the church hall on Thursday evening, to welcome Mr. and Mrs. Jan Bloom and family, to Mount Pleasant.

Bouquets of white and purple lilacs were used as decorations. A long table was filled with gifts of canned goods, groceries, jars of fruit and pickles, potatoes, etc. Family Welcomed.

Rev. H. C. Vaclavik spoke briefly in welcoming the family parents and five children, three boys and two girls, to Mount Pleasant. They are Mr. Bloom and Janke Hulzinga and their children Anna, Klass, Gerrit, Hendrik and Sietske.

Mrs. Marguerite McMullen, led in a round of community singing, with Miss Betty McConnell as accompanist.

Address Translated

Mr. Lindsay McKeown read the address of welcome, which Mr. Visser translated it in Dutch and the pastor read it in English.

Mr. Kenneth Weaver continued with the duties of chairman as the pastor wished to return to Rawdon parsonage to entertain guests.

Miss Shirley McKeown gave a piano solo.

Mrs. Merle Spencer read "Polka" in Dutch, and Mrs. Eric Summers contributed two vocal duets with guitar accompaniment.

Five Dutch friends sang a birthday song for the two youngest months of the year, and everyone in the community wished them their birth month.

Two young ladies sang a couple of selections in native tongue.

Mrs. Arthur Phillips read a poem entitled "Potatoes".

Mrs. Rose Hall contributed a piano solo.

Mrs. Will Jeffs rendered a vocal selection and gave a musical number on the saw.

The ladies served refreshments at the close and those in attendance personally welcomed the newcomers.

St. John Ambulance Cadets Cited For Efficient Knowledge

Belleville St. John Ambulance Cadet Inspection was held on Tuesday last at the St. John headquarters, at 1-3 Front St. Dr. Bell of Toronto, provincial surgeon, Mr. M. Beatty, district superintendent, of Belleville, and Mrs. R. J. McLuskie, divisional superintendent of Belleville, were the inspecting officers.

The cadets were in charge of their officers, Mrs. Lillian Ashley, cadet superintendent; Mrs. Hattie Tice, cadet officer; Mrs. Mollie Reid, cadet officer, and Miss Barbara McLuskie, jr. Officer.

The cadets were highly recommended on their efficient knowledge in First Aid, and home nursing, and looked very smart in their full dress uniforms. Of a credit to the city, and at the present time, the girls are training in Child Welfare.

Former Probation Officer to Visit Native Ireland

Toronto, May 20 (CP)—Motherly Mrs. Agnes Browne leaves for her native Ireland today, convinced that the modern generation is "just as good" as the youth of any age.

After 23 years' service in juvenile-court work and as a probation officer, the elderly, brown-eyed woman plans to make an extensive visit to the land of her birth.

The first woman probation officer appointed under the juvenile act of 1922, Mrs. Browne said in an interview that the great amount of good done by young people of today should not be overlooked "even if they do go barewire."

"Present-day boys and girls are faced with so many more temptations than in my generation," she said, "with cars, movies, roadhouses and the hundred-and-one things to put ideas into their heads."

Now on retirement, she blamed the "careless or indifferent attitude" of parents for the majority of juvenile delinquents.

"And then the first time they go wrong, parents make excuses for them."

"Young people should be made to face an issue," she stressed. "They should not be excused."

SPRING FAIR

The annual Spring Fair held by the University Women's Club has once more been a splendid success.

An increasingly large number of appreciative attendants is an indication that the public interest in such a worthy project is a keen one. The objective of the event is to replenish the scholarship fund. Each year a scholarship of $100 for ties at any university is awarded to a student from city and district, selection being made by the Department of Education at Toronto.

Paintings Featured

The collection of paintings exhibited by Mr. Manly Macdonald, R.C.A., was the centre of interest of the Fair. This year Mr. Macdonald provided a most unusual treat for all lovers of true art in his purest form. The artist excels in reproducing the natural beauty and simplicity of local families' scenes painted in different moods at different seasons. He handles a variety of subjects with equally fine precision and feeling. This year the beautiful painting of a scene on Big Island across from Point Anne donated by Mr. Macdonald was won by Mrs. Linton Read of the city.

The tea room, most attractively decorated with spring flowers was a contrast to its environment of months of the year, and everyone in the city appreciated the use of their birth month.

Two young ladies sang a couple of vocal selections in native tongue.

Mrs. Arthur Phillips read a poem entitled "Potatoes".

Mrs. Rose Hall contributed a piano solo.

Mrs. Will Jeffs rendered a vocal selection and gave a musical number on the saw.

Miss Ruth Sharp contributed a piano solo and Mr. John Mulheron delighted with a Scotch song.

Women's Activities

AIKENS' W.M.S.

3rd Sidney—"Newcomers to Canada", was the theme for worship service and the subject of Aikens' Woman's Missionary Society, held recently at the home of Mrs. Kenneth Jones.

Mrs. Selburn Westover, the president, conducted the worship service. The Scripture lessons were read by Mrs. George Denike and prayers were offered for patience, kindness and true neighborliness for those who are our new neighbors and for obedience in Jesus' teaching "Love thy neighbor".

With this subject in mind, Mrs. Nesland gave a very effective message "What is Our Responsibility?" "Let us look into Europe", she said, "with its shattered cities full of disease and food rations inadequate, with famine having less food now than under German occupation. Hungry people are an unhappy people. It is a tragic thought, the continued, "that many even want war again as there seems no ready hope of relief."

Mrs. Neelands reminded her listeners of the great caravan of homeless, despairing and hopeless people, wandering throughout Europe, with no possessions, no passports, no friendships, and no legal right, even to a grave, and whose only hope now is of immigration.

"Let us", she said, "remember the background of those already here, and of their difficulty in understanding our language. Race prejudice," she continued, "is one of the deadliest foes our society has to face. An extra amount of friendliness is needed, and citizens should become better acquainted with the immigration policy of our government.

"Love thy neighbor", she concluded, "is the acid test of our own Christianity."

Playlet Presented

A short playlet was then presented by Mrs. Fred Moon, the following characters participating which added to the service.

During the business session plans were made for a cooking sale to be held on the market, the last Saturday in June.

Mrs. Carman Grills, supply secretary, asked that the gifts be brought to the June meeting that are to be sent on to the missionaries serving in the northern part of the presbytery, as Aikens' Society is the one for "Bibles, Bible stories and any good books for children."

A joint meeting of the Mission Band and Baby Band members is to be held in July at the home of Mrs. Lee Grills. A letter was read by Mrs. Cyril McMullen, corresponding secretary from Mrs. C. Wilman expressing her appreciation for cards sent while in the hospital.

Mrs. Murney Jeffrey, as program convener, was in charge of a playet "Newcomers to Canada" and was assisted in its presentation by Mrs. Chas. Smith, Mrs. Ira Marchant, Mrs. Lee Grills, Mrs. C. McMullen, Mrs. S. Spafford, Mrs. Ernest Kells and Mrs. Ken Jones.

This very interesting and entertaining playlet, in the form of a play, gave a picture of these people, their customs, their needs and displaced persons. They are real people and the way in presentation the story enacted gave us a vision of what is being done and can be done in the future to give them the true sense of Christian citizenship by the "neighborly" approach in each community.

Delicious refreshments were served by Mrs. Jones, Mrs. Jeffrey and her committee.

UNITED CHURCH EVENING AUXILIARY

Frankford—The regular monthly meeting of the Frankford United Church Evening Auxiliary was held in Rose-Lowery Hall, Friday evening last. The meeting was opened by vice president, Mrs. Preston Chase. Minutes of the previous meeting were read and adopted, and roll call showed over twenty present. The treasurer's report was then given. A thankyou card from Mrs. Charles Bonisteel was read by Mrs. C. Dafoe. In the evening discussion, it was announced that the Board had asked the Evening Auxiliary to be responsible for the service at Batawa on June 8th, and the group decided to do so. The meeting for June was announced by Mrs. Charles Bennett. The theme for the worship service was "Newcomers to Canada". Mrs. Bennett read an article on Immigrants. Mrs. Lackey read an interesting story entitled "Ma Pettie". Mrs. Bonisteel read poems on foreign and community friendship.

Mrs. Mrs. Dafoe was in charge of the program, which consisted of a playlet "Variety Action, readings by Mrs. Harry Fitzgerald and Mrs. D. MacDonald, and Mrs. Lloyd Hanna, a vocal duet by Hazel and Wanda Martin, readings by Mrs. Harry Fitzgerald and Mrs. Budd Patrick, and a duet by Barbara Sickle. A quiz contest was won by Mrs. Arnold Sickle. Mrs. Lackey led in a sing-song, while was greatly enjoyed. Delicious refreshments served by the hostesses, Mrs. Charles Bennett, Mrs. Mervin Dafoe and Mrs. George Montgomery. The hall was decorated with flowers and flags in keeping with Empire Day.

When Children's Eyes Are Bigger Than Their Stomachs...

Unusual is the child who does not get that "stuffed" feeling sometimes. Overeating and overdrinking of rich goodies, hot, hideous, and cold drinks, and the consumption of too much candy and ice cream are the chief causes of children's stomach upsets and sour tummies. Many mothers have found that a dose of Dr. Miles' Children's Own Tablets—made especially for children—helps it in gentle, safe way. Children's Own Tablets are not a laxative. They are a stomach tonic and correction. They correct sour stomach, relieve nausea and vomiting, and help to prevent constipation. Children love them. Only 25¢ at your druggist. Imagine Women If Beauty Aids No Longer Used

BY SAUL FETT

New York, (CP)—Think of United States women minus lips with their own faces and figures but without any of the devices to make them appear beautiful.

How would our civilization, as we know it, reach the sudden removal of all beauty aids?

American women would suddenly pale. The great American boom on many industries, and even, would drop from one to nine inches, and at least 2,500,000 bust would vanish or noticeably retreat. The average female abdomen would drop two inches and the back of the lap would put out four or five more inches.

This is the prediction of the Corset and Brassiere Association.

Every year American women spend an estimated $2,500,000,000 on their outer hair and other items of interest.

They spend about $1,000,000,000 in 120,000 beauty shops, getting permanents, waves, hair styling, manicures, pedicures, face masks, eyebrow dyes, eye lash dyes, hair rinses, to name but a few items.

Between 2,000,000 and 3,000,000 women, it's estimated, buy all or part of their hair. They are the store-bought wigs, transformations, switches, curls, and bangs and chignons.

Cosmetic Costs

They spend more than $1,000,000,000 in perfumes and rouges, dry and liquid powders, lipsticks, depilatories, cuticle cake make-up, eye makeup, hand beautifiers, shampoos, bleaches and dyes.

In 1946, says the Corset and Brassiere Association, another $500,000,000 women spent $425,000,000 on their bosoms, waists and hips. They bought about 41,000,000 corsets, girdles, corselettes and girdle-brassieres, and about 250,000,000 brassieres. The association reports that 5,000,000 less of these were sold last year. It estimates that about 2,500,000 women wear decolletes of varying degree.

What would happen to the American way of life if all this disappeared? Here are some predictions, admittedly speculative.

Dr. Jacob L. Moreno, psychiatrist: "It would produce a great psycho-dramatic shock. Women would have to face a reality they never faced before. But after the initial shock to both men and women, it would start a tendency to seek beauty which is more spiritual and cultural and less physical. Finally, it might after a long time help produce people who are less excitable, less neurotic, less competitive."

Mala Rubinstein, international beauty authority: "It would be simply terrible. An awful shock. These things have done so much for women. They color them. These aids have been a great stimulant, not only for good but to morale."

Dr. Charles Hagley, anthropologist: "It's inconceivable. No such thing has ever been without beauty aids. Women here would select something else to be beautiful—new criteria. In places in India and Bali, the hands are painted."

Dr. Abraham Stone, famed marriage consultant: "It would be an exceedingly fine thing. It would develop our natural latent potentialities to show our sex of charm and beauty without varnishing them over. Women would still find some means of ornamentation."

Most of the ornamentation now is mere conformity to commerce and Hollywood standards. Remove these promoters, and women would feel better, more free to be free, a greater sense of security in themselves."

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am 15 and in the eighth grade.

There is a mystery to me. My mother married a man, there isn't very much he can do but accept the fact.

It may be perfectly true that this girl is still in love with another man, or, on the other hand she may just be using that to let your mother feel bad at her. It's possible that she doesn't want to marry you.

Your wisest plan is to stop urging her for marriage, learn to keep on being thoughtful and considerate and attending to all those other things.

Bring her little presents, and let her know that you appreciate all she is doing for your mother, but stop talking to her about being in love with her and wanting to marry her. This sort of quiet campaign may finally accomplish what you want, when a more determined assault on her affections gets you nowhere. But if, after a reasonable length of time, she still does not respond, be sensible enough to disbelieve her.

Her husband doesn't want her to go out with him

Dear Miss Fairfax:
I am forty years old and my husband is 50. We always used to go away together, but for the past year my husband doesn't seem to care whether I go anywhere with him or not. In fact he seems more pleased if I stay home. He is now going out one or two nights a week by himself and staying for seven or nine hours, and never has any kind of anything to say about where he goes.

I am, wondering if I should push myself and go out with, or just travel with friends when I am invited. I don't understand my husband's attitude toward me any more.

Mrs. M.H.

Dear Mrs. M. H.:
Are you talking about going out with your husband in the evenings or actually going off on trips with him? Perhaps you mean both.

In any event I doubt if it would help the situation very much if you were to insist on accompanying him wherever he goes. I think your best plan is to create your own social lines by going out with your friends and perhaps in time, if your husband sees that you are able to enjoy yourself without him, his attitude may change. As I see it, the only hope a wife has of improving a husband's dull mind is to make herself such an interesting and independent person that her husband will decide she is more fun to be with than anyone else he can think of.

Her sister's child was adopted—how can she tell him

Dear Miss Fairfax:
My sister gave her son up for adoption three years ago because she could not support him. At the time, I was going to school, and my parents were too poor to help her.

Now I am married and have a little girl one year old. Is there any way that I could find my sister's child and adopt him myself? I am sure he would be happy with us, and I would treat him like my own.

Hoping.

Dear Hoping:
I am afraid that if your sister definitely released any claim on the child, and he was adopted by someone else, it would not be legally possible for you to get him back now. Anyhow, I think it would be a great mistake for you to even try.

No doubt the child has made a happy adjustment to his adopted parents and has forgotten all about any other life he might have had, so that it would certainly upset him very much emotionally if he were taken out of an environment to which he has become accustomed, and in which he has been content, and forced to try to adjust himself to entirely new set of circumstances.

If I were you, I would put any such idea out of my mind entirely. If I am sure you would find the whole thing impossible from any angle.

Fashion Flashes

A life saver for the limited wardrobe is the fine but simple one-piece frock of soft woolen. A tiny bird's eye patterned soft worsted in beige-grey makes a slim frock that buttons from the high neckline with its little collar to below the waist. A white piqué over-collar and "make" coil peg pockets add animation to this useful dress.

Just about the smartest coat of the season is the full length flaring coat of silk taffeta —for town wear, of course. Navy taffeta is used for a coat that flares to a very full hem from a narrow sloping shoulder-line. Deeply cuffed sleeves are set into the back in an interesting geometric design. These coats are usually worn over thin silk or chiffon frocks.

The soft shadows cast by big lacy straw hats are most begutiful. One open lacy straw in a bright ginger shade makes a nice big hat that is worn the face and with a wide V is trimmed with softly twisted coils of velvet ribbon in a deeper shade and a long forward-trusting glycerined ostrich feather fancy in very dark grey.

Just perfect for the "little wedding, when something light and lovely in lieu of the traditional white is the order, is a pale but charming suit of brocaded silk satin in either light blue or pale pink. A three piece model has a matching blouse in silk chiffon with all over tucking and a soft self-bow neckline. The lines are perfectly simple, flared skirt, Jacket, cut on softly tailored lines is lined with very thin white silk.

Coming in for both day and evening wear are light backgrounded prints, mostly white, with soft colors, with here and there an accent of black. White etched with lavender, lime and pink black makes a pretty evening print color scheme.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

When a girl goes job hunting

Probably the first requirement of the girl who wants a paying position is to look trim, neat and business-like. The chance of landing a position she likes will meet her living expenses and provide her with money for clothes depends pretty much upon appearance. Her qualities as a worker, her efficiency, must be taken on faith. Even the boss of the works wonders if she is the kind of employee who will fit into his organization, so he sizes up her manners as well as her appearance.

Let no young woman figure that she will land a position at first try. This type has curls dangling around her neck, wears a floppy hat, sports plenty of frills, lays on the make-up without restraint. The smarter, wise user her head will dress simply, have a close, short hair-do, wear no cosmetics and display no sartorial nonsense. She will fit into the business picture.

When she has the job she will take it seriously, knuckle down to every detail and be rewarded with a raise in pay. She will be big boss is grouchy. He has his troubles. This type of worker will make good, she'll get places, and pay building, a suitability for her long suit.

She will soft-pedal on make-up. The lipstick has become an institution; it is expected that a girl will use it. Vivid shades are not so good. Fire-engine red is definitely a no. Use lipstick to make a girl look brittle. Maccara on the lashes is fine for day-time wear. As for eye shadows on the upper lids, they tend to draw the curtain! They are just too, too much. Surprising what a little powder, but no one does. They are an evening indulgence; even when the lights are on, they must be faint and subdued.

The baked-on powder. A neat, tailored arrangement makes a girl appear efficient. Under conditions should be soft and fluid, ringlets limited. Fluffy stuff, as far as the coiffure is concerned, is only for pretty dollies of magazine illustrations, but not for the young woman who fares forth to bring home the bacon and the rent of the groceries.

The aim should be to appear modish, but not overdressed. That, in fact, should be the aim of all the sisters, no matter what their position in life may be. The effect is achieved by using good taste, taking plenty of time when shopping, seeing that one's clothes have good lines.

There is the matter of shoes. An executive who employs many women says that when an applicant comes into his office on checking high heels he is prejudiced against her.

Choosing Complexion Powders

Beauticians say that many women don't know what color powder they have unless they are distinctly florid or sallow. Consequently they have no idea what shade of complexion powder they should use. Often a girl mistakes the professional eye to decide the matter. The beauty customers just pick out a tint that they think is pretty," said an attendant at a beauty shop, "but how do you think about that?

Millions of dollars are spent every year in Uncle Sam's domain for powder. Figures it out in dollars and cents it costs Miss America plenty to powder her nose. Even those who do not attain the flattering, velvety effect that she seeks so diligently, because there are powders of light consistency, others with an oily base. Not all are suitable for all skins.

It costs Miss America plenty to powder her nose.

Removing the shine is, of course its basic purpose, but is an important and definite element in the art of facial make up. One's colors must be right—powder, rouge and lipstick. Eye shadows too, if you indulge in them. There must be color harmony.

The present rage for pinky pink shades continues, especially among the girls who have chucked the rouge pot for and many have. These offerings range from the faintest wild rose to deeper tones that impart a mare decided coloring.

At make-up bars, the array of colors is bewildering to the wayfarer who seeks good-looks. The gamut of shades ranges from white to green, from delicate ivory to mauve, from faint gold to sun tan. They are used for blending, the operators showing mar-

GOOD MANNERS

To wear her attendant's dress to the wedding rehearsal

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:
Soon I am going to attend my husband's graduation from college, and after the graduation there will be an informal dance. A few weeks ago, I acted as matron of honor and wore a yellow rayon faille dress, styled so that it can be shortened. This dress I intend to wear to the graduation dance. (1) Could the alterations be correctly worn with the dress? (2) Also, what hat, if any, should I wear while gloves? (3) Also, is a hat necessary? If so, should it be worn during both the graduation exercises and the dance?

M.F.

(1) Whether you wear the matching mitts or white gloves depends mainly on the type of the dress, particularly on the style of sleeves. The matching mitts might look too dressy, too much like a bridesmaid's regalia. My suggestion is that, if the sleeves come to the elbow or below, you wear short, matching gloves. They are fashionable this season. (2) To the graduation exercises you should wear some kind of hat or even what might be called a head dress, that would be harmonious with your dress. It can be a veiled hat, a flower toque, perhaps fashioned of small flowers, with a fitting veil as added decoration to the brim. (3) A hat (really more of a floral bandeau) is lucky dollars, and it is play bingo at a neighboring tavern. She didn't win.

Mr. and Mrs. St. Laurent —Central Press Canadian

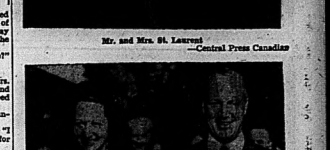
Brighteners

Chicago — (AP) — An armed robber burst into the home of Mrs. Josephine Halpert Sunday and told her to hand over all the money she had in the house.

"You want money from me?" she asked.

"Yeah, all of it," he said.

Mrs. Halper burst into tears. "You want money from me, and I myself need bread. Yes, I need bread," she sobbed.



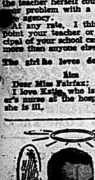
"Madam, are you really hungry?" the gunman asked.

"Bread," cried Mrs. Halper. "I need bread and he asks me for money."

The gunman gave up.

"Okay, okay," he said. "Here's a buck. Get yourself something to eat." Then he fled.

Mrs. Halper, who decided it wasn't lucky dollars, used it to play bingo at a neighboring tavern. She didn't win.



Mr. and Mrs. Drew —Central Press Canadian

Wives of the leaders of the Progressive Conservative and Liberal parties offer a contrast in techniques. Both aid their husbands in the strenuous cross-country tour involving demands on health and nerves that are not unlike those in training. Mrs. Drew, wife of the P. C. leader, assists her spouse by appearing with him on speakers' platforms, frequently receives as much applause as when she addresses gatherings herself. Speaking French perfectly, she has made an impression on French-Canadian audiences that is of great political importance. Mrs. St. Laurent, on the other hand, remains in the background, travelling with her husband assumes the role of homemaker even on a train. She has the power to cause the prime minister to relax, to see humor in difficult situations. They spend as many hours together as they can, drawing inspiration from each other's company.

British Business Men Forecast Era of Competition is Near

London, May 25 (CP) — British business men have a two-fold duty—reducing costs and concentrating on the North American market — Sir Frederick Bain said in an address that marked his retirement as president of the Federation of British Industries.

"The days are fast approaching when we shall have to revise our thinking," he said. "For 10 years we have lived under conditions in which costs have been secondary to production. Now the time is near when we must once again fight for our lives in a competitive world."

Complaints of Prices

Sir Frederick said that on a recent visit to Canada and the United States he heard on all sides complaints against British prices.

In part he blamed governmental bulk purchasing of raw materials and the vast increase in the active element of national objectives or has discarded its national responsibilities."

Sir Frederick a member of the Anglo - American productivity council said a visit to the United States showed British industries had much to learn from that country.

Deputy chairman of Imperial Chemical Industries Ltd, he is succeeded as president of the F. B.I. by Sir Robert Sinclair, Deputy Chairman, Imperial Tobacco Company Ltd.

government expenditure (which) has added to the cost at which we can afford to sell our production.

Discussing the "grave problem of closing the dollar gap," Sir Frederick said:

"It is not an easy decision for any country to concentrate upon selling our goods to the United States and Canada at a time when it is still possible to dispose of our products with less risk in less difficult markets.

"But the brutal fact remains that unless this dollar gap is closed by 1952 we—and indeed western Europe as a whole —will be driven to lower levels of industrial activity and lower living standards."

Sir Frederick criticized government nationalization policies, asking for proof that private industry in post war years has attempted in any way to thwart

Six Aircraft, 50 Men Battle Woodland Fire

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., May 25 (CP)—Six aircraft and 50 firefighters today battled two separate forest fires blazing in the timber dry Algoma bushland northeast of Lake Superior.

Forestry officials warned the fire hazard is high throughout the vast Algoma timberlands. Travel permits were still being granted in some cases but all bush travellers were warned to exercise extreme caution.

A lightning storm was blamed for starting the larger of the two fires, burning over 145 acres at Wawa, 100 miles north of Sault Ste. Marie, Ontario government aircraft rushed 33 men and equipment to the scene.

The other blaze, which broke out 75 miles northeast of Blind river, spread over only five acres but firefighters reported it was blazing in a high hazard area.

Switchboard Operators At Hotel on Strike Settlement Reached

Hamilton, May 25 (CP)—Telephone service in the Royal Connaught Hotel was interrupted for a while on Saturday when six girls, switchboard operators at the hotel, went on strike for, among other things, increased pay.

During their strike, which lasted eight hours approximately, the employees saw two other girls operating the switchboard and promptly pulled out the telephone plugs, preventing the operation of the board.

The girls held a meeting on Saturday evening and, after discussions with the hotel management, a settlement was reached and they returned to work.

TORNADO TOSSES BUS 150 YARDS

A Texas tornado picked up this school bus at Meeker, Oklahoma, and tossed it 150 yards. Children in the bus were injured but not seriously. In other parts of Oklahoma and Texas, one person was killed, nine injured by the twister.—Central Press Canadian.

Grave Losses in Harvest Foreseen as Result of Purge By Russia of Genetics Science

Chicago, May 25 (AP)—A scientist predicts that Russia will "suffer grave losses in harvests" as a result of purging the science of genetics.

Theodosius Dobzhansky, Russian-born professor of zoology at Columbia University, said in a magazine article the Soviet ban was a "monstrous error."

Dobzhansky is one of six scientists whose criticisms of the Russian action of last July 25 appeared today in the May issue of the bulletin of the atomic scientists.

The Russians discarded the genetic test that heredity is controlled by factors called genes found in the parent cells of living matter. They plumped for the theory, championed by the late I. V. Michurin, a Russian fruit grower and authority on the grafting of plants, that acquired characteristics can be inherited.

The purge was sponsored by Trofim D. Lysenko, head of the Lenin Academy of Agriculture. Dobzhansky, once a lecturer in genetics at the University of Leningrad, termed the views of Lysenko "naive" and declared:

"In reality the decision was a monstrous error, most of all from the standpoint of those who made it. They have made themselves a laughing stock to millions of people all over the world, and being laughed at may be fatal to them.

"Having placed a maniac in charge of their agriculture, they are bound to suffer grave losses in harvests, and this for a long time."

Unchaperoned 'Necking Parties' Stir Complaints

Fort Erie, Ont., May 25 (CP)—Unchaperoned "necking" parties by Buffalo teen-agers are causing complaints at two beaches near here, Fulton Chief Percy Marks of Crystal Beach said in a statement today.

His statement was made following complaints of cottage owners over what they described as "wild parties an immorality."

The Chief criticized Buffalo parents who allow their children —some as young as 1—to attend weekend security parties at the beaches.

Long Beach Property Owners Association has written to Buffalo area Parent-Teachers Associations pointing out the conditions and asking their support in overcoming them, the Chief said.

The Chiefs' statement said, in part: "The police here are much concerned about the activities of sororities and groups of girls who rent cottages in the village. It is shameful the way many of the girls, some as young as 14, are allowed to come here in unchaperoned groups. We are often forced to phone parents in Buffalo to come to Canada to take their daughters home."

He said that, in many cases, police could prosecute, but that they tried to avoid that "because of the resulting publicity and shame it would bring to the young people who are making these mistakes."

He said that parents who let their children come to the beaches should see they are properly chaperoned. The youngsters emulate adults and the results are often disastrous.

Buzzards Hover By Hundreds Over Flooded Towns

Rio De Janeiro, May 25 (AP) — Hundreds of buzzards hovered over flood ruined towns along the lower Amazon today as villagers hunted bodies in the swirling debris. There is fear the death toll will mount into the hundreds.

Reports from Belem said the floods — worst since 1918—were sweeping over Maceio, capital of Alagoas state, and other towns, wrecking hundreds of houses, killing cattle and ruining crops.

Governor Silvestre Pericles estimated damage is over $2,500,000. He decreed a three - day mourning period. An air survey disclosed many towns completely under water, with only the tops of palm trees showing.

PARENTS BOTH DEAD AS CRASH RESULT

Granby, Mas., May 25 (CP)—A Couture of Ste. Cecile De Milton, Que., died in hospital Sunday of injuries suffered in a highway accident Saturday when his wife was fatally injured. Mrs. Couture died a few hours after the car in which she was riding with her husband and two young children collided with a Provincial Transport Company bus on the Granby-montreal highway.

S.A. Govt. Will Permit Natives To Build Houses in Restricted Areas

Capetown, May 26 (Reuters)—The South African government is taking steps to allow natives to build their own houses.

The new policy was announced at a national conference on native housing by Native Minister, B. J. Sheeman. He told the meeting a bill is being drafted to permit natives to build their own houses. However, he said, such projects will be restricted to native locations and housing schemes.

Natives will not be allowed to encroach on the preserves of European (white) building trade employees.

The South African Federated Chamber of Commerce, the iron and steel industries, the Federation of Building Trade Employers and the United Municipal Executive, representing local authorities, sent delegates to the conference.

A warning to prospective industries was voiced by E. G. Jansen, Native Affairs Minister. He said any industry contemplating going into business in South Africa should take into account the cost of housing native workers.

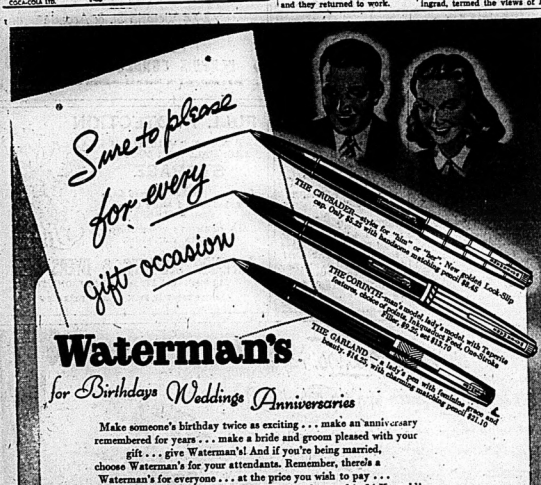
The vast industrial expansion during recent years has brought thousands of natives to urban areas where there is no housing for them.

To some extent local authorities have encouraged it by competing with each other in offering facilities for establishing industries. Expansion has also been aggravated by the unchecked influx of native women into urban areas.

Most employers of native labor have no responsibility for housing their native workers.

"The time has come for employers to assume their fair share of responsibility," Jansen said. "But for the present, at least, responsibilities for native housing will sometimes to rest with local officials.

The federal government has said that no more natives will be allowed to migrate to the cities. Those already in urban areas will be reduced as much as possible.



Two Lose Lives Trying to Recover Lost Fish Tackle

Souris, Man., May 25 (CP)—A boating expedition in the Souris River to recover lost fishing tackle ended in disaster Saturday night when a small craft capsized in a whirlpool, drowning both occupants. The dead are Norman D. Cyril, 45, and Raymond H. Jacobson, 11.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa:

100 Farmers From Foreign Lands Will Have Heavy Itinerary in Canada

(By the Ottawa Staff of the Canadian Press)

Ottawa, May 22, (CP)—In the midst of one the biggest tasks in Canada they've ever had, 100 farmers from 22 nations are going to get a hearty reception when they hit Ottawa.

They are the delegates to the Guelph conference of the International Federation of Agricultural Producers. The conference opens for 10 days on May 31.

Beginning in Halifax May 23 they'll be taken to Windsor where the Nova Scotia orchards begin and Kentville, the heart of Nova Scotia's apple-growing area.

They'll be rushed through New Brunswick and make a two-day tour of old Quebec, become cosmopolitans again in Montreal and then land in the federal capital, planned for them is a government house reception, a luncheon by the federal government and a personal chat with Lord Boyd-Orr, world-famous nutritionist. In the two days they'll spend in the capital they'll see the government's central experimental farm and talk things over with Canada's top agriculturists.

From here they go on a five-day tour of Ontario agricultural centres, such as London, Kitchener, Brantford and Woodstock and after the conference make an extended journey through the prairies and British Columbia.

Ships Strike

Ottawa, May 22 (CP)—Expert observers here think another month will establish conclusively the outcome of the deepsea shipping strike on the East coast.

Developments in the seven-week dispute are not yet regarded here as having settled victory on one side or the other—the Canadian Seamen's Union (T.L.C.) or the ship operators.

Though the winner is expected to be evident in the next month, observers here do not feel that this will mean an immediate end to hostilities. No matter how it goes, the issue will drag for many more months.

One factor may be the future stand of the Trades and Labor Congress of Canada, parent congress of the C.S.U., congress officials, who have been supporting the C.S.U., entered in Cleveland, O., last week with the executive council of the American Federation of Labor, which has given its blessing to the S.U.U.

The A.F.L. undoubtedly recommended to the congress officials that they admit the S.I.U. that would almost inevitably mean throwing the C.S.U. overboard. It has not been made known whether the T.L.C. officers have changed their attitude.

YOU CAN still find people who "don't believe in banks"... who keep their cash in old coffee pots, or hide it in the woodpile, or carry it around.

But most folk nowadays keep their money in bank accounts. They can get it whenever they want it; and they can pay their bills by cheque. Canadians have more than seven million such deposit accounts. In terms of Canada's adult population, that makes it practically unanimous.

The banks, in turn, know they must earn this confidence by giving you the best service they know how.

Today you can take your account to any bank you choose. And what is in your bank book is strictly between you and your bank. It is your own private business.

State monopoly of banks would wipe out competition and would open your bank account to the eye of the state official.

ASK TAMBLYN'S
SHRUBS FOR VETERANS: "I have heard that tree shrubs are provided to veterans for planting around their homes. Is this true? Where should I write?"
Your house is one of those handled by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation. For shrubs and sodding write to W. G. Murray, 105 Fleet Street, Toronto.
SHUT-IN: "Two years ago I suffered a stroke and since that time am a partial cripple. Can you tell me if in Hamilton there are any homes for shut-ins where I could go? My income from the old age pension board is not sufficient to pay my fare to a convalescent home."
We suggest that you contact Miss Marie Watson, Superintendent, St. Peter's Infirmary, Hamilton. She should be able to help you in this matter.
TRANS-CANADA TRAIN: "Is it necessary to make a reservation on the Trans-Canada train from Toronto to Montreal, Saskatchewan? Should it be reserved ahead of time? If the ticket is not purchased in advance, for how long is it good?"
A compartment on a train is a section including an upper and a lower berth. Five days for the full amount, Saskatchewan, would be $51.00 one way, $91.80 return. The compartment would cost an additional $34.00 for one person, $18.00 for two, each way. Reservations should be made about a week in advance, at the time a return ticket is good for three months.
STREET CAR SICKNESS: "My nine-year-old son is troubled with street car sickness and has been ever since a tiny infant. He is all right riding for miles in a motor car. What tablets do you recommend?"
Any tablets should be prescribed by a reliable doctor before any tablets are given him. Although effective, these tablets should not be given to young children unless prescribed by a doctor.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, WEDNESDAY, MAY 25, 1949

Tweed Principal Presented With Desk and Chair

Tweed (Special) — More than 300 friends and former students gathered in St. Carthage's School last Friday evening for a presentation to Mr. T. E. Moffat, teacher at the Tweed High School. Mr. Moffat has been appointed supervisor over the new school area.

Dr. J. H. Bateman of Belleville and a resident of 1929 made the presentation. Mr. John Burns, a teacher of 1929 spoke on behalf of the staff and the members of the Board presented Mr. Moffat with a black walnut desk and chair. In his remarks Mr. Burns spoke of the pleasure of working with Mr. Moffat and the co-operation he had received.

Mr. Moffat was taken completely by surprise, but made a fitting reply and thanking people.

Letters had been sent out to all the ex-pupils of past years, by Mr. F. M. Meagher, who had graduated during Mr. Moffat's years of teaching as a principal. Over 400 return letters were received from all over Canada and the United States congratulating Mr. Moffat. Contributions were received from the pupils and the ex-pupils to the amount of $750.

Pittsburgh, May 25 (AP) — Two veteran employees of the Pennsylvania Railroad yesterday were charged with bulb snatching on a grand scale. The railroad said they stole a quarter-million bulbs in the last three years. The loss totalled $25,000.

Two-Million Dollar Hail Damage Seen In State of Kansas

Garden City, Kas., May 25 (AP) — Hail damage during last week may amount to several million dollars in the wheat fields of eight Kansas counties, farm authorities, damage reports filled here indicate. Crop insurance adjusters were received. Losses ranged upwards from five per cent. Many of them were total.

'BOARD BANS MAGAZINE

New York, May 25 — (AP) — For a second time this year, the Board of Superintendents of New York City's schools has banned the magazine The Nation from high school libraries.

The original ban in June, 1948, stemmed from a series or articles by Paul Blanshard which concluded in The Nation last January. The board held the articles attacked the Roman Catholic religion.

NO PRICE REDUCTION HERE

Oshawa, Ont., May 25 — No reduction in prices of General Motors passenger cars and trucks is contemplated in Canada, company officials said here Monday. They were commenting on a report from Detroit announcing a $10 to $40 cut in United States prices.

MINOR INJURIES

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Trooper J. G. Koneson, 25, of Camp Borden, and Beverley Hills, 21, of Hamilton, suffered minor injuries Tuesday night when their car struck a light standard on the Queen Elizabeth Way at nearby Humber Bay. Hills, driver of the car, said the vehicle went out of control when a tire blew out.

MARKS 50TH BIRTHDAY

Cedar Valley, May 23 (CP) — Rev. John Shields, patriarch of the Latter Day Saints of Jesus Christ in Canada, celebrated his 90th birthday Tuesday in great style. He enjoyed a hearty chicken dinner and then preached a 45-minute sermon in the small church he opened more than 50 years ago.

SETS NEW RECORD

Louisville, Ky., May 25 (AP)— Letty Maury McDermott, 20-year old Louisville pitcher set a new American Association strikeout record of 20 last night in beating St. Paul, 3-1, in the second game of a double header.

The old mark of 18 was held jointly by Dave Danforth in 1915 and Archie McKain in 1934, both lefthanders and both former Louisville hurlers.

Paper Claims Quebec's Labor Minister Over-ruled by Premier In Trying to Settle Strike

Montreal, May 23 (CP)— The Ensign, an English language weekly with a Roman Catholic editorial policy says in a Quebec dispatch in its current issue that "it is known" Quebec's Labor Minister Antonio Barrette has been over-ruled by Premier Duplessis "in several formulae to settle the strike" of asbestos miners in Quebec."

The Ensign's story said:

"The fresh development has been the aid which the church through authorized collections throughout the parishes has related to relieve the suffering of families in the strike-bound districts.

"The brunt of government attack since has been directed at what observers say officials term 'church interference.'"

The dispatch added:

"The right of the Church to interest herself in the social aspects of the case is being bitterly opposed by the government and threats have not only been used but implemented.

"The grant of $30,000 a year to the social study department of Laval University under Father Levesque has to date been withheld. Similar withholding of government grants to the University of Montreal is threatened.

Efforts Futile

"Premier Duplessis even sent emissaries to see some of the highest church authorities and approached other bishops in the hope of obtaining withdrawal of Church interest. All failed in any attitude other than that taken in Montreal and Quebec. His efforts of having a bishop take the matter up with Father Levesque direct were equally futile. Government pressure has also been brought to have certain priests silenced for pleading for aid to the striking workers. All such government efforts were rejected."

The paper added "the stumbling block seems to be the question formulated by the Johns-Manville Company when it declared that 'there now is a growing tendency on the part of the syndicate leaders to preach doctrine opposed to capitalism and upholding a philosophy that is more closely akin to Communism than Catholicism.'"

The Ensign dispatch said "the attitude of the archbishop was clearly defined by Most Rev. Joseph Charbonneau, Archbishop of Montreal, when he stated that the Church cannot stand aside in the face of the human suffering caused to strikers and their families in a situation where the government has abandoned the position of protecting the community as against the interests of a party to the dispute — no stand has been taken on the merits of the strikers' claims as that lies within the realm of a specific action of the state. He clearly defined duty of charity toward suffering souls."

Former Pastor, Dr. C. T. Scott, Dies in Toronto

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—Rev. Dr. Charles Taggart Scott, 82, who served more than 50 years in the Methodist and United Church Ministry, died at his home, 73 Armadale Avenue, here Tuesday. He served in Victoria, Montreal, Toronto, Hamilton, London, Ont., St. Thomas, Brantford and Belleville.

He is survived by his widow, formerly Minnie May White, daughter, Lois (Mrs. Arthur Kneeland of Montreal) and a son, Dr. Douglas E. Scott of Lexington, Ont.

Rev. Dr. Scott is remembered here by the members of Bridge Street United Church (then Methodist) to which he came in July, 1916, and where he served for four years a very successful pastorate.

FOUR - DOLLAR GOLD ORE USED IN PAVING

Reno, Nev., May 25 (AP) — Douglas and Lincoln Alleys in the gambling district have been paved with concrete bearing $4 a ton gold ore. As the concrete set, it looked just like any other concrete. Someone suggested that signs could be put up telling visitors about the gold underfoot. But the city council said nix to that idea.

Ont. Historical Society Will Meet in City

The annual meeting of the Ontario Historical Society will be held in Belleville — the city hall on June 2nd and 3rd, members of city council were advised Monday evening by Mr. William Mikel, K.C., who addressed council on the importance of the meeting.

Delegates from many parts of the province will attend the meeting which is to be addressed by Dr. Gabriel Lanctot from Queen's Park, Toronto.

In stating that the Ontario Historical Society was one of the oldest organizations in the province, Mr. Mikel urged that local citizens should be made aware of the meeting to give them the opportunity of attending.

The speaker regretted that the teaching of fiction books was a prevalent who so little attention was given to history. He said it would be a good thing if history had a stronger place in the people's reading habits.

"I am not criticizing the reading of fiction," assured Mr. Mikel. "Fiction reading is quite okay if done in moderation."

In conclusion Mr. Mikel stressed that the holding of the annual meeting of the Ontario Historical Society here was a splendid opportunity for publicity for this city.

DREW OUTLINES PARTY POLICY TO GRAIN GROWERS

Says Farmers Should Have Opportunities to Decide on Marketing

(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Prince Albert, Sask., May 25 — (CP) — George Drew, Progressive Conservative leader, said Tuesday night his party believes "producers should have an opportunity of deciding how they want their food products marketed."

Visiting wheat and grain producing centres during his coast-to-coast Federal election campaign, Mr. Drew gave an outline of his party's agricultural policies and said the Progressive Conservatives would leave to the producers themselves the decision how they wanted their agricultural products marketed.

The party's platform urged that the Canadian Wheat Board now the sole marketing agency for wheat, be returned to "the 1935 status as a marketing agency. The party also believed that there should be a study to handle voluntarily coarse grains sold by western farmers.

Mr. Drew said his party believes in the principle of marketing boards, but "unlike the Socialists, Mr. Drew said he hopes every responsible newspaper in Canada "will point out that we were denied the opportunity" of examining the government's record in detail before parliament was prorogued and an election called.

Victoria Day Marked in Canada As Traditional Outdoor Holiday

(By The Canadian Press)

It snowed in the Northern Ontario gold mining town of Timmins and rained during the forenoon in Toronto but the Victoria Day weather had little effect on Canadians' celebration of the traditional outdoor holiday.

Montreal, Vancouver and a few other cities basked in the sun's warmth but elsewhere the skies were overcast and stiff breezes chilled celebrants who were usual spring clothing on their outings.

Despite heavy traffic almost everywhere, the toll of accidental deaths for the day was low. Only nine Victoria Day deaths were reported in all Canada.

Numerous fires were caused in a number of communities by high winds. The Toronto fire department extinguished about 20 minor blazes, none of great consideration. A boy in Windsor, was hit in the eye by a stray Roman candle.

Indians feasted on free cheese on the Six Nations reservation near Brantford. Traditionally, the cheese is distributed on the anniversary of Queen Victoria's birthday.

Sports events drew crowds totalling 65,000 in the Toronto area. Attractions included soccer, baseball, horse racing and automobile races.

Many persons opened summer cottages for the season. Almost everywhere, golf links, tennis courts and amusement parks were crowded. A few hardy souls tried the water for swimming, but most found it too cold.

In French Canada the Victoria Day celebration was combined with rallies commemorating the gallant but losing stand The Governor made against the Iroquois at the Long Sault Rapids on the Ottawa River more than 300 years ago.

Newfoundland, too, had a double-barrelled celebration. In that province, May 24 is "Trouling day" when practically everyone goes fishing. Special trains were used again to handle haunts

Winnipeg Boy Scouts staged an all-day "rally-o" with varied events and sports.

Goderich, Walland Woodstock watched boy canoeists in age-old derbies with home made miniature automobiles. Thamesford, in eastern Ontario, celebrated its fifth annual community day.

Legion Plans All-Out Drive To Get All Canadians to Vote

Ottawa, May 25 — (CP) — The Canadian Legion wants all Canadian voters to cast their ballots on June 27 and plans an all-out campaign to see that they do.

In a declaration of war against political indifference, the Legion said Tuesday that its 250,000 members will wage a steady campaign right up to election day to get every Canadian qualified to vote to cast his ballot."

Lt.- Col. D. M. Baxter of Winnipeg, Manitoba president of the Legion, said 28 per cent of the eligible voters stayed home in the last federal election. Apathy, the enemy of democracy and democratic institutions, "deeply entrenched in Canada today."

His statement was the first shot in the Legion's fight.

He said the Legion is "completely non-political and non-partisan, but is vitally interested in the maintenance of democratic principles." It is "concerning itself the Canadian public about the dangers of a nation whose citizens become indifferent to their democratic responsibilities."

When the majority of people become apathetic about freedom "some well - organized, well - financed minority snarps the power that rightly belongs to the people as a whole.

"Apathy has permitted the establishing of small highly - organized groups of citizens, especially every community in Canada."

Col. Baxter urged every voter to find out about election issues and party platforms, to pick a candidate and to vote for him.

"This is the only way in which people at large can share in the government of the country," he said. "Only by expressing their will at elections can they determine their future and maintain the principles of democracy."

Order 15 P.C. Cut in Spending Marshall Plan

Washington, May 25 (AP) — Washington, May 23 (AP) — The House of Representatives appropriations committee today ordered a 15-per-cent cut in Marshall plan spending for the year starting July 1.

Overriding a sub-committee recommendation, the full committee voted to cut $629,750,000 from the $4,190,200,000 President Truman had asked for the European recovery program's second year of operations.

Hasn't Tried to Control Common Colds--Drew

Metcalfe, May 25 (CP)—Talking of controls, George Drew said here Wednesday night there's one thing the government can't control and that's a common cold.

The Progressive Conservative leader came to this village 20 miles east of Ottawa with a voice that was the hoarsest since he began his election campaign two weeks ago.

At one point his voice faltered. "Boy," he said, "this really is a beauty of a cold I have.... only thing the government hasn't tried to control in the last few years."

ROGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

"You know very good and well up at Christmas, Mom, I wanted to join up," Gargie put the blame on her. "Anyway, I did. I sold off a few things we didn't need and added that to our Christmas money and bought the clothes we had on."

In reply to Molly's exclamation, he said that the clothes were new when they started out. "And," he continued, "we struck out for a southern route because they're warmer. We hitchhiked quite a few rides, got as far as South Carolina, but it was awful slow going. We weren't going to leave enough money to eat on, at that rate. One of the hobos told us we . . . Oh, how!"

"Hobo! . . . Freights!" Molly gasped.

"Sure Mom. They're fun. We couldn't find any recruiting office we who'd accept us. We had to keep going. We thought maybe down South they'd take us. We got to Macon and the MP's picked us up. Thought we were deserters. . . . See," he added proudly, "we look old enough . . . But they let us go and then the cops stopped in. Looked like the chain gang, for us . . . . Oh, how!" he reflected.

"Would a-been, too," Hank supplied. "If we hadn't stopped off at that jungle the night before."

"George patted his pocket. "This saved our hides," he said importantly.

"What!" Major asked.

"I'm coming to that," Georgie nodding wisely. "First, I'll finish my story." Food and clean clothes had restored his confidence. "The cops took it up to court."

"Runs in your family," Robbie commented.

Georgie winked at him. "The judge asked could we prove we weren't vagrants—that we had a place to go. We proved it," Georgie said, tapping his pocket. "He let us off, but we had to be out of town in an hour. The first train out was hauling manure—"

Molly shrieked.

"Lucky, too. It gets cold in Georgia. We burrowed into that nice warm, soft bed, and baby, did we sleep!"

While he dwelt privately on the charms of a nice warm, soft bed, Hank said, "That car was headed for Denver. We rode her the whole way."

"With nothing to eat!" Molly exclaimed.

"Sure, we ate," Georgie said. "Every time the train stopped, we sneaked out and loaded up with a sack of hamburgers. We ate real good."

"Those filthy hands!" Molly began.

"Go on. Then what?" Major interrupted her, recalling Gargie from his loving memory of the ride.

"Hopped a freight out that night. Not so good. This'n hauled coal. Awful hard."

"Dirty!" Molly exclaimed.

"Not as dirty as the other stuff, Mom," Georgie corrected her, "nor as warm," he added loyally. "And now, Dad, before we get to the reprisals, gift a look."

Georgie reached into his pocket and hauled forth a piece of crumpled and well worn newspaper. He pressed it out on his knee before handing it over to his father.

We were all breathing down Major's neck as he read the large black headline:

ARMY MAJOR SENTENCED TO THREE DAYS IN LOCAL JAIL FOR SPEEDING.

"What'd you get this?" Major demanded, hastily crumpling the paper back into a ball.

"A friend."

"I said where!" He glanced suspiciously at Molly, but she was as interested in Georgie's answer as he was.

"Oh . . . This is what made it lucky we stopped that night in the jungle," Georgie said, apparently relishing keeping his father's curiosity unsatisfied, for he looked around the circle to make sure he had our attention, and licked his lips as though he found the going good. "A bo from up this way had a newspaper on it, and he let us look at it. He's the one who identified us to the judge, the next day."

"Hadn't a-been for him," Hank broke in excitedly, "we'd a-been wearing chains."

Well, it was nice, as my friend had said, to have settled, mature, responsible people living at our house. . . . Georgie fouled up the washing machine by attempting to clean his grimy-with-coal-school clothes (all of the dirt from the long journey, plus soap and hard water amalgamated into a hard scum which had to be scraped out of the tub with a putty knife); but he was useful, for Roger returned to town and found no room at the Inn.

Therefore it was with consternation that I learned Mal-e was being transferred immediately to Memphis. "Don't be a stinny," Bibb said. "You don't like her. Roger live here. It's our house."

Ah, Der Tag, I thought. Looks like this time - we're going to throw in together.

The Capners got a good early start on their journey, and so did Roger. A jeep stopped at our door. Out jumped two officers.

"It's Roger," I stage-whispered to Rob. "And a friend."

"So what!"

Here it was again; Rob had changed his mind and without so much as a hand signal. We were forever piling up on issues because of that obnoxious habit of his. Just when I thought we were in cahoots, I would be left holding the sack.

I thought of the time I simply had to accept an invitation to the house of accountant Rob from the unbearably boring. He warned me to get him out of there by nine o'clock at the very latest. Either that, or he wouldn't go. At 9:45, I began to lay the groundwork for our leave-taking. I had things under control and went up to get my coat. As I came down the stairs, Rob looked up in surprise. Instead of eagerly springing to his feet as I fully expected him to do, he held his seat and demanded to know where I was going. When I gave the old line about the headache, he called on the world to not whether these ever had been such a spoilsport before. Grumbling and complaining, he did go home with me.

When I upbraided him for leaving me out on a limb, he admitted he had forgotten asking me to get him out of there, and even said he had been having an unexpectedly pleasant time.

No, I wasn't entirely unprepared for Rob's change of heart toward Roger. But I'd had a change of heart; I was on the other end of the see-saw. I had grown tired of him. The novelty of watching him empty our pockets had worn off. He was more trouble than he was worth; his entertainment value had dropped below par. I didn't want him to move back in.

• • •

Roger sailed into the house without stopping to ring the bell. He presented Colonel Hartwicke and said they had been up working most of the night, were in need of a shave and shower, and he could think of no more pleasant place in which to have them than in our house.

"'TWAS A GOOD STUNT 'EAD THE LIGHTER WORKED

Telling Paris police he was an Egyptologist, Mario Fabre, 21, got an authorization from them to climb inside the obelisque—the needle in the centre of Paris' Place Concorde. What's more he persuaded French firemen to send along a ladder truck to help him and his wife, umbrella in the summer. The structure, which is a part of the temple of Ramses II, given to King Louis Phillipe in 1831 by the Mahomet Ali Palace. The photo on the left shows Fabre wry up at the top of the monument, "studying" and at the same time conversing with a companion on the ground by means of a walkie-talkie. When it was discovered that he had done the whole thing as a publicity stunt for a new cigarette lighter just being launched on the French market, firemen went up the ladder and "re-" lighter just being launched on the French market, firemen went up the ladder and "re-" directed the gagster to come out of the clouds as seen in the centre picture. The photo on the right shows Mona. Fabre, still clutching his umbrella reaching the truck and somewhat embarrassed. When he was about halfway down he tried to light a cigarette with the new lighter—which simply refused to work.—Central Press Canadian.

"The Capners just left," I interposed, as though Roger didn't already know that. "I don't know if you can undo them or not."

"After B.O.Q." Colonel Hartwicke laughed. "I'm sure they will seem glisteningly pure."

Roger and Rob's pooling of resources would fall to pay up to them; I went upstairs to see to fresh towels, soap, and a hasty setting to rights of the Capners' rooms.

During the front windows, I caught sight of Roger and Colonel Hartwicke carrying valises, golf clubs, and musette bags up the walk toward the pen front door.

"Roger!" I called sharply. "You can't move in here." To support my authority, I added, "We aren't going to rent rooms any longer." That sounded like safe ground; Rob had once suggested it.

He slowed down long enough to look embarrassed for me. "How can we shave and bathe without equipment!" he asked in his tone of sweet reasonableness.

"Oh," I backed up, "that." But my brain wasn't fooled; it knew I was on thin ice. In fact, it spurred me to run down the stairs and meet the gentlemen.

With an air of indulging a trying child, Roger set down his load and motioned Colonel Hartwicke to do the same. They removed shaving things and clean duds—all for Roger, I noted. Colonel Hartwicke was evidently not going to change. All I saw was shave and maybe shower. I stood like a watchdog until the bags were closed again, and then I retired to the garden room to sputter to Rob as Roger took Colonel Hartwicke upstairs.

"He's not a bad guy," Rob said. "Frankly, since it's your idea not mine, mind you—to let people round here, I can't see any reason for you to discriminate against Roger. Throw out the whole kit and kaboodle if you want to. That's the risk with me. But if you're going to let any of them stay, you might as well let Roger."

"You're crazy," I spluttered. "I'm fed up with being his flunky. It isn't enough he eats all his meals here as though they were his due, but before he left last time he was grousing at having to dump the garbage. And there hasn't been a drop of hot water since he moved in. He lies in his tub and lets the water run in and out until it comes ice cold from the hot side. Take the tank an hour was warm up again."

"Cut out," Rob barked.

"And he'd get completely over drying the dishes. Always important documents to study, or tired from a tough day, or if I'd just take it easy and let these ride until he felt like helping, he'd be glad to. And all those dinner parties he stuck me with. I'm through. He can't live here," I said emphatically, thumping the table.

Thwarted as a person trying to slam a swinging door, I flounced out to the kitchen to mix up the butter spread: a pound of oleomargarine at eight red points and a quarter of a pound of butter at twenty, mixed together with a pinch of salt and yellow coloring.

It must have been while I was in the kitchen that Roger unpacked his bags; for when I returned to the garden room, there he lay, stretched out on my chaise longue attired in his terry cloth robe and slippers, with a highball in his hand. "Hi, there!" he greeted me cordially. "Just in time to referee a little game of pinochle."

That was another thing about Roger that irked me; he played pinochle as rummy or pinochle and cribbage very ably. Robbie was easy pickings and I'd estimated that Roger had won back every dime, maybe more, that he'd paid for rent. "That burns me up." I told Robbie. "I don't see why," he answered. "I like to play cards and it's a lot easier to sit here evenings and take Roger on than to go out looking for a game." "I know," I said, "but he always wins." "He plays better than I do," Rob said. "Well anyway," I took refuge in womanly philosophy, "it's the principle of the thing". Rob shrugged quickly, being allergic to misrepresentation. "You know it's for money that you're out," I was; too. I was sick of being taken in every way by Roger.

I heard the cause of my frustration say, "Colonel Hartwicke decided he'd like to return upstairs. He left messages of appreciation." I wondered why Roger made colonels and generals jump through hoops at strategic times for his cover-up or benefit, though why, after the antics he got us through, I should question his ability, I can't understand. Since he was now dressed for dinner, I realized he intended to stay for a while at least, and I edged my way to the front hall to spy on the state of his luggage. It was no where to find in the vestibule strung with clothes hanging from door knobs, light fixtures, and the usual place in the closet.

• • •

"Fooled you," he taunted, as I returned to the garden room. "You thought I'd moved in upstairs."

"You unpacked—"

"Only temporarily," he cut in. Then, as though it hurt him to be forever calling my attention to obvious niceties, he explained he had unpacked because his uniforms were just back from the tailor and in a good state of press and he couldn't very well afford to allow them to lie folded and become wrinkled. That left no feeling as though I'd tried to pick his pocket. And disgusted, too. Disgusted enough to make a grave tactical error; I got in the car and drove away to spend the afternoon.

When I returned; my progress through the vestibule was not impeded by clothing, valpac, foot locker, or musette bag. Believing I'd won, I galloped to the garden room, where Robbie was still engaged out relaxing.

"Whoopee!" I exclaimed. "I worked it."

"Hush." Rob signaled. "Roger," pointing toward the kitchen, "is getting supper."

"You double - crosser!" I ex-

Hollywood, May 25 (AP) — "Diapers," snarled Humphrey Bogart, "they're outmoded."

The tough mug spoke like a veteran of the nursery.

"What's the use of all those pins?" he compialned. "You're always sticking the baby.

"I think they ought to throw away all those diapers and let the kids wear real pants. You know—like those "soakers" things.

"Say—maybe I ought to go into the pants business!"

Lately the parent of Stephen Humphrey Bogart (with an assist from Lauren Bacall), he has his own notions about rearing a child. Such as:

"Just let the kids grow — like Topsy."

Asked if he had honed up on child care books, he replied, "Read 'em all!" (he may have been kidding) about new-fangled theories, he commented:

"You can't teach an old dog new tricks. We grew up without all that stuff and turned out all right.

"All that parents can do is tell their kids what's right. Teach them the facts of life early and then leave them alone.

"One thing in particular a father shouldn't do: Plan a career for his son."

So Stephen Humphrey won't be an actor unless he wants to.

Reflecting on infants, Bogart had one final comment: "They sure need changing often!"

Good bridge players do not worry themselves into an early grave wondering when to try a squeeze. They work on it whenever no obvious play seems sure enough for their purpose.

Sleuthing takes first consideration. But a squeeze is tried if no other play has a chance of winning.

If the opening lead from west is not his singleton diamond, the establishment of hearts is your plan. After ruffing two hearts, Bill's south club on the fifth dummy heart.

But suppose west leads that diamond at his. One of the needed entries to dummy is gone too soon. By the time hearts are set up, dummy will not get in to take use of a fifth heart.

The plan then is to squeeze. Take trick one with diamond ace and ruff a heart. Return trump. Take two top hearts and ruff a third. Your last two trumps and you have a trump and three clubs.

Keep in dummy a heart and a diamond and the king with one club. You must hang onto heart queen and three of his best clubs. Now lead your last trump and west is squeezed.

If he sheds heart queen, sluff a south club on dummy heart. If west coughs up a club, you have three club tricks. This is how an experienced player would probably operate.

Of course some kibitzer will smirk and say: "Brother, you sure went to a lot of fancy trouble for nothing. You could have let the heart jack for an easy finesse the way the hearts happen to be."

This irritates you into saying: "You could see the opponent cards and I didn't have that long a neck." But by that time he is out of earshot. They will do it every time.

40-INCH PIKE

Toronto, May 25 (CP)—Mrs. Arthur Burns is mighty proud of her husband today. He landed a 40-inch, 20-pound pike Tuesday at Jackson's Point on Lake Simcoe while trolling for lake trout.

But, Mrs. Burns confided, he wouldn't have been able to handle the struggling pike without the help of a friend.

Jackie Robinson Takes West By Storm, Starring at Bat, In Field as Dodgers Move Up

BY JOE REICHLER
(Associated Press Sports Writer)

Brooklyn's Jackie Robinson, in the midst of the greatest batting spree of his career, is taking the west by storm.

The Dodgers' second baseman in eight games has ripped out 15 hits in 34 times at bat for a .441 batting average. He drove in 17 runs to boost his league leading total to 32. His season batting mark now is .318.

His hops the circuit with 18 extra base swats which include 11 doubles, two triples and five home runs. He also leads in stolen bases with six. In the field, he is playing a near-flawless game.

Robinson whacked a pair of home runs and a single Tuesday night to lead the Dodgers to a 6-1 triumph over the Pirates in Pittsburgh.

Backed by a 13-hit attack, Ralph Branca rolled to his seventh successive triumph without a setback. He allowed six hits.

The victory, coupled with St. Louis's 5-1 triumph over the Braves, put Brooklyn into the runner-up spot, leaving them trailed the third - place Giants by a game and a half. The climax of Tuesday's opportunity to take over the lead when they were beaten by the Cubs, 8-5, in Chicago.

The fourth - place Reds went 11 innings to nip the Philadelphia Phils, 4-3, in a night game at Cincinnati.

Joe Dimaggio Sidelined Again With Sore Heel

(By The Canadian Press)

Joe Dimaggio, sidelined New York Yankees outfielder, pleaded with Manager Casey Stengel on Tuesday's game with St. Louis to let him play. Dimaggio's heel has been "hurt the most."

"I'll be out there if it didn't hurt so much," he said. Joe did not put on a uniform.

Philadelphia Phils not played at inning all season, worked out at Shibe Park at night in order to open with the Reds. It was his first "test" since a "hot shot" sent him to the sidelines with a bone bruise in Texas on the trip home from spring training.

At Philadelphia, Bill Veeck, president of Cleveland Indians, announced Tuesday opening day attendance at Philadelphia in Cleveland Friday night before the first game of a long home stand was 78,484 persons. "It is a full house," the colorful owner said.

Chapman Ohio State will baseball game opponents as the "new" season begins. Bands will play, Governor Frank Lausche will throw out the first ball, and Coach Sam Willaman will hand baton in carnival style.

The Indians' disastrous road trip so far has resulted in eight defeats in 10 games for the world champions.

At Kitchener, some 18 records went at Tuesday at nearly 400 athletes from Western Ontario Secondary Schools competed in the 10th annual WaterOo College Invitation track and field meet. Guelph Collegiate and Owen Sound Collegiates tied with 26 points each for the team honors. Each school's Brantford won the relay.

At Cincinnati, sharp - shooting Ken Raffensberger of Cleveland Monday night left - jabbed his way to championship by the National Boxing Association as American light heavyweight champion with a unanimous decision over Holman Williams, Cleveland Negro.

At Trenton, Oxford Lad, owned and driven by B. McKane of Kingston sped to a straight heat triumph in the free-for-all Hambletonian event on the holiday harness racing card here Tuesday. Oxford Lad won the first two heats of the five-for-all honors, standing off Tom Baldwin in the first and third heats for driving wins.

Art Johnson, 18-year-old Houtling Rambler from Toronto, Tuesday won the Andy Stuling Trophy, when he finished first in the 100 yard dash at the end of the Ontario bicycle event at Toronto. He did the distance in the time of 2-5. Arnold Hughes of the Ramblers was second with a time of 1.08-5. Jack Whitty of Windsor was 3rd. Piper, both of Oshawa, finished in a dead heat for third place.

At Buffalo, Fizzie Pruden, 146½ of St. Catharines, Tuesday night knocked out Al Higbers, 145, of New York at 1:40 of the third in a scheduled eight-round bout.

In another bout over Cardinal, 150½, of Oshawa, took a technical knockout over Tony Di Paolo, 149, of Buffalo at 1:32 of the fifth round.

CHIPS OFF THE SPORTS BLOCK

By GEORGE B. CARVER, Sports Editor

Gunner Wellman, yesterday, refused to be drawn into the controversial turkey shoot with me. By it, I mean that is. The saying was, the boss will be in charge of the turkey shoot at Wellman's Corners this day and that Bill Easton's crew from Bakers, taking part in the shoot, saying "nuts," sitting up on their hind legs and all that kind of business. The boss was to be in charge of the shoot and the Bakers' crew came to a sunny town called Oshawa to shoot it out with the boss' crew and incidentally to get a load of his victory.

Then it happened. The Bakerites took over matters and before the Gunner could kick his board out of the way, they stuck his head into the head three times and the next thing we knew the pride might to the determent of the crowd and the baby victory dance.

Being child at heart believers in things pitiful, especially the surrender of a child shot, shall read about the Penn masterminds retiring Eddie Murphy tossed a practically one man team into the fray at the suddenly-deemed Brooklyn. The brash youngster who dislikes them up from the fuzz field, however was not daunted at the fire and brimstone that emanated from Baldwin Stadium.

At early as a ray entitled to a reward under the management sweetness of the Jeremiah Tax office, Tommy Harris' pass was presented to umpire Al Barlick at the Polo Grounds. Barlick was not impressed with the Baldwin first, but said the balls that Harris threw were so wild that the Brooklyn manager could hide their hidden shame. He (Harris) was sent to the first base coaching box and in the ninth (Harris) was sent out but when he took over) retired the side with two hurled outs and a long fly to Mize. Mize hit, and Mize was the first batter he struck out. Mize, Sockalexis and Kiltalis in order in the ninth to call it a day. Neat chuckin', Hoot?

Batavia Bobbins proved costly and the Peterborough batsmen affected the Bobbins' downfall. Batavia were at one point in the Polos with supper in it but only a well-balanced squad artists bat and field combination with the break of the game. However, in spite of their errors the Batavia fielders at times came up with some sparkling plays especially Peacock who stole a base, scored a run and batted one home for a triple in the eighth. Bridgeman committed a brace of costly bobbins and was taken from the game in the eighth.

Tecumseh the Kirkwalls fashion play their first home game in the City Park this afternoon when Parkdale meets on the Trenton Town squad. The team will be at full strength with the exception of Bill Hamilton who is out for a few weeks with a broken finger sustained at Peterborough on Saturday.

Peterborough Defeats Batawa For Second Consecutive Time Winning Holiday Fixture 7-5

Faced by the potent blastings of third baseman Dalton, the Peterborough Maroons fought their way to a 7-5 victory over Batawa Royal Canadian Legion Central Ontario baseball league fixture at the Fair Grounds Tuesday.

Dalton led limit hitting mates with four hits out of five one of them a two-bagger. Lowery, Petes centerfielder, banged the Dalton lad with three for five including a lusty three-bagger. Batawa used eleven pitchers on the offerings of two Batawa pitchers in a game that features itself tossing, pointing and some stanky kicking of the ball by the bloodsox.

Gardner Whitehall, veteran Petes hurler, had trouble from the first inning going out of his hand for six and one third innings letting them get semi timely hits in the second run, that being the result of the only Peterborough tallies which were clustered in the second frame.

But the Batawa bludgeons finally got to the veteran in the seventh. Five hits combined with setting into the wild blue yonder and before the Petes pastime minded had decided to remove the veteran four Batawa runs had crossed the plate.

Toothpick Sleeps Early

But the rally died as quickly as it was born. For Dalton, heretofore a mouth of tender dining ago was called into the breach and he southpawed the Batawa bat into a helpless shamble.

With four runs over and five hits chronicled, Peterborough early took up the task. Where the Batawa fielders had not only retired the first two batters but held the Shoemen hitless and scoreless for the first seven of the game. As a matter of fact, just for good measure he retired the side in order via the strikeout route in the ninth.

Start Early

The Petes started early to get set; Gardner Whitehall who pitched a grand game in Peterborough on Saturday, when the Batawans bowed to a 2-0 defeat was rushed into the flinging breach, when Murritt started during the Batawa 5th inning. Lowery reported late for duty. The Petes switched Smith, who caused a pain at Oshawa for last his stay with us, to serve a double play fall to the fully.

Murritt who took over on the second innings, proved no pickle to the Peterborough bats for they picked him for nine hits and six runs and the signs indicate some. Two snappy double plays helped him out of holes, but by the same token costly boobies by his mates got him into both the third and fifth innings. Batawa marauders got set twice and was stopped both times, the game ending with Junior "Mouse" Bush taking over the spot.

The Petes hit and scored consistently throughout the game getting one in the first, one in the third, three in the fifth when the Batawa infield started to kick the pill around and two more in the sixth.

It looked like decisive curtains for the mesh of Skelton up to this point. Then they swung into action. Five hits rattled off their bats in the final seventh going for four runs. It brought them within striking distance of the Petes and one swing like it but ten Dadson took over the chucking and ended the game.

While Dalton and Lowery accounted for seven Petes hits, Lowery, Cross, Skelton and Whitehill helped the cause along with singles. All of the Batawa team hit safely with the exception of Johnny Aquino four times and did not have a turn at bat. Mac Watson got the only Batawa extra base hit, a double in the 5th, seventh that drove in a brace of runs.

Better Golf

By Sam Snead

Pictured is the correct address of players who slice, pull up and left, pushing the ball with a heavily cupped right hand. Note my left hand, with a heavily cupped palm. My right hand is behind the ball and lined up with the hole. My left arm is ready to take the correct address for a No. 7 iron.

As you'll observe in the right picture, his shoves his right foot straight forward and pointing it at about right angles to the intended line of flight. Then he opens his left foot sharply. You play the highly lofted clubs from a higher close up to the ball. Your clubface from the ball is determined by selling the club and then taking your stance from the short wills the clubhead is pulled. Autumnal No. 11 the highly lofted club you make a three-quarter backswing. But on the backswing too, you are given an almost automatic control because with the open clubface it's impossible, unless you're a rubber man from elbow to swing the club back much beyond the three-quarter position. Further, a definitely open stance like this automatically forces you to use the fairway-right swing. The mechanics of golf are pretty picky; wrong stance, wrong swing. The right thing if you'll only follow the guides. When you try to overthrow them you usually have to pay it.

The boys in the locker room will remind you.

Newcastle Scores 8-2 Win Over Ontario All-Stars

Toronto, May 25 — (CP) — A big seven - goal second - half splurge gave Newcastle United, first entry in English Football League club, an easy 8-3 decision over Ontario All-Stars Tuesday. The United trailed 2-1 at half time.

The game was played before a 17,000 crowd at the Exhibition Sports Field in the Canadian National Exhibition grounds.

The game was the first sports event held in the new $3,500,000 grounds of the Canadian National lake shore.

Newcastle, which ended the English League season in fourth place and now on an 11 - game tour of Canada and the United States, made it look easy in the final 45 minutes.

The score would have been much higher except for the brilliant goal-keeping of Dick Arends of Toronto Scottish.

Jackie Davidson and Tommy Wallace, both of Toronto Canadians, netted for Ontario.

YESTERDAY'S STARS

(By The Associated Press)

Batting, Jackie Robinson, Dodgers—Hammered two home runs and a single to lead Brooklyn Dodgers to a 6-1 victory over Pittsburgh Pirates.

Pitching, Harry Brecheen, Cardinals — Hurled a five hitter as St. Louis Cardinals defeated Johnny Antonelli and Boston Braves 5-1.

Willie Turnesa, Frank Stranahan Rule Favorites

Portmarnock, Ireland, May 25 (AP) — The British Amateur Golf championship is an "old man's tournament."

If young shooting is the 'in' and have a yen to tangle with the world's best almost - pure golfers, this is the place to be.

True, United States amateur king Willie Turnesa of Elmsford, N. Y., who was 33 in January, and defending champion Frank Stranahan of Toledo, Ohio, who won't be 27 until Aug. 8, ruled co-favorites at 5 to 1 to cop the title at they entered today's third round play.

But some of the old men are keeping up with them and will be out there in today's competition which was to trim the field to 32.

One of the real veterans is J. Ellis Knowles, 63, of New York. He has thirteen British appearances and may be around a couple of days more if he can match, one outward nine he did in par 37.

Robert A. Stranahan, just one year younger than Frankie, is stringing along, too. The spark plug amateurs believe he is trying to earn enough golf reputation to keep the Irish from calling him "Frankie Stranahan's old man."

Two former United States Open and Amateur champions Francis Ouimet, 56, of Boston, and Charles (Chick) Evans, Jr., 54, of Chicago lasted just two rounds.

Tuesday, Brig. - Gen. Alfred Critchley, 58-year-old London golfer, held young Stranahan even for nine holes before bowing, 4 and 3. Turnesa won over D. P. Chopra of England, 4 and 3.

The Honorable Michael Scott, at 55, won the cup in 1933. He had been runner-up in 1905 and kept plugging.

So it thereby still life in the old dogs, spring in your instep and a golfing gleam in your eye, you've never too old to take a stout crack at the British Amateur.

U.S. Club Layout Expected to Take Terrific Beating

Richmond, Va., May 25 (AP)—The 5,877-yard Hermitage Country Club layout was expected to take a terrific beating today as 134 of the finest pro golfers in the United States teed off in the 5th annual Professional Golfers' Association meet.

But Jr. (Dutch) Harrison, travelling pro for the host club, isn't expected to know, for the first time in my life I was crying . . . I never did see that fight. I was there, but I couldn't look . . . I guess I liked the guy too much . . . I used to say prayers for Cora Gelfilo because he gave Braddock his comeback start . . . like Bill Daly carries Bonovino's picture around in his pocket because of what he did for Lee Savold."

Fine Ass

Johnny Attell, the Ridgewood Grove ref reporter, broke in: "It was only a couple of months before that the commission turned him down as an opponent for Walter Cox . . . he had a tender hand and had gone back to Philadelphia where he was booking Mario Bellina for Jimmy Hilippe Gates and he used to come around and ask me to put Bellina in a preliminary for $50 to get him working. I told him I said Cox was living off him too . . . I had Wessell signed for a fight and he didn't want anybody but Braddock . . . so finally the commission turned Braddock down and I gave Paul Damski (Nemirovsky's manager) a list of names and he picked out Nate Brown . . . Nate wasn't fighting either. He was terrified from then, but I put him in shape to fight and he got a draw . . . on the strength of that Brown got two fights with Joe Louis" . . . of things started to happen," he concluded. "And they much . . . I used to say prayers before being around there were some real old guys in them days."

Not Me

John Clark of the Thoroughbred Record relays this explanation: "The last man on any horse pack always drawn a big crowd. When I was in Nevada all they've won; the losers bet all they're carrying."

Little Benny's Note Book

Pop was shaking his head at the headlines in the paper, and ma said, I want to ask you a question.

If I know the answer, my dear, I'll let you have it promptly, pop said, and ma said, Well, it's about a woman.

Anybody I know? pop said, and ma said, No, just a problematical woman. Now suppose a man wanted to marry her. One was a millionty man, handsome and dashing and romantic, and she was tempted to marry him for his money.

I dont believe she did, though, pop said, and ma said, Now William, you have nothing to judge by yet, so please listen. The 2nd man was rich and brilliant and worldly, and she was tempted to marry him for his money and social position.

She didn't marry him either, pop said, and ma said, I wish you'd wait till you get the facts. The 3rd man was a struggling young artist, so bashful and awkward that all he could do was bring her flowers and stand there tongue tied, and her like a man in a dream, and she just pitied him and wasn't tempted to marry him at all.

But she did, pop said. He was just the goofy guy she married, he said, and ma said, That's true, but how do you know?

Because she's a carsteer in a movie, there was nothing else for her to do, pop said, and ma said, Why William, how could you guess I was talking about a picture.

I must be sykick, pop said, and ma said, anyway, I'm glad you agree that she'd act that way, even in a movie, because it gives me a better opinion of the picture.

My opinion remains unchanged, pop said, and ma said, But William you never even saw it.

I accept your congradulations, pop said, and ma said, Oh, I wish you'd talk sense sometime.

Being the end of the subject.

Council Recommends Pension Plan For Employees of City To Commence on October 1st

City council at their regular meeting Monday evening gave the right flag for setting up a pension plan for employees.

For the present it is intended to include members of the fire department and the police department and city hall employees in the plan, the employees of the public works department to be included at a later date, however, the date for the commencement of the pension scheme would be October 1st, according to Mayor D. L. Storey.

Although approval of council to the plan was given, details will be worked out later by a representative of the annuity branch of the Dominion government and the finance committee of the city. Under the scheme employees will pay five per cent of their salaries, while the city will contribute five per cent. There is no provision for back payments.

Asked to Investigate

Mayor Storey and the city solicitor were instructed to investigate the possibilities of including certain taxes from the public utilities of the province in the fire department pension fund.

Services rendered for which it agrees that the city should be recompensed included fire and police protection, law enforcement, street lighting, snow and ice removal, drainage, sanitation and waste removal.

Again, after two weeks consideration of the matter by a special committee, council failed to agree on the site for the proposed incinerator plant.

Two weeks ago the committee recommended the incinerator be placed on the city owned stone quarry north of College Street and immediately west of the Moira River. Last night the committee recommended against this, stating the city could not spend money outside the corporation.

Matter Referred Back

But council as a whole would not go for the committee recommendation that the incinerator be placed on Zwick's Island as had originally been intended. Ald. Jas. Hyde speaking to the committee recommendation, stated, Zwick's Island was the natural place for the incinerator, that the island would be improved by the location of the incinerator there.

Mayor Storey did not agree. "The whole area would be ruined for any park purposes if the dump was placed there," he said.

The matter was referred back for further consideration.

Council voted to call for tenders for the alterations at the city hall which would result in all city offices, including the police station, being located in the building. Plans for the proposed alterations have been drafted by W. A. Watson, local architect.

Under Police Department

Maintenance of parking meters and collection of the meters will be brought under the direction of the police department, it was decided by council. Council was informed that the former maintenance man had resigned his position and that for the present collections would be made by members of the city market clerk.

Council agreed to the hiring of another man for the police department to look after meter collections.

No action was taken by council on the recommendation regarding that unloading zones be designated in each city block.

Neither was any action taken on a recommendation regarding the payment of a gratuity to one of the appropriation for the planning board. It was explained no provision for the amount had been made in the budget. The matter was referred back for consideration.

Not Effective Till June

Alderman H. J. Clarke, rose to his feet to make a statement from the public utilities, that the Commission did not have to come to the city for authority to approve extensions of rural services in adjoining municipalities.

To prove his point he quoted an amendment that the public utilities act, but was told by Mayor D. L. Storey that the provisions of the Street Act at the MacDonald Ave. intersection, a portion of which part Werner-Allemile playing field will be utilized to ease the turn curves at point.

Street signs for the two new sub-divisions, Bonnycastle Heights and Churchill Heights were approved by council, as was the agreement between the city and Bell to comply with respect to crossing of ages over the county old people's home.

The city engineer will prepare specification for sidewalks in Churchill Heights and Bonnycastle Heights and will call for tenders for the construction of the walks.

Construction of veterans' rental houses by Central Mortgage and Housing Corporation on the former county owned property south of Dundas Street again came up for discussion when it was moved to accept the plan for the subdivision.

Ask Fee Changed Plan

Due to the fact that the terrain of the property was 12 feet below the highway, the plan of the sub-division called for the rear of the building lots to face the highway. In the event, councillors disapproved of this plan, but voted for approval of the 100 houses on the location provided the plan was changed.

Alderman Allin urged that at least part of the property be reserved for preferred industry and introduced an amendment to the recommendation calling for 50 houses to be constructed on the site and 50 houses on some other location.

The amendment was defeated with only Aldermen Allin and Lemmaire supporting the motion.

The recommendation calling for the 100 houses to be constructed on the property was carried with Mayor Storey and Aldermen Allin, Armstrong, Brown, Duffy, Hyde, Lattimer, Liddle, Thomas and Tice approving, while Aldermen Allin, Clarke, Lloyd, Lumsden and Wilkinson opposed.

Police Station Condemned

When the recommendation to call for tenders for alterations at the city hall came up for consideration Alderman Lloyd, as chairman of market and city property, stated the move was necessary as the city police station had been condemned. This building would be repaired and used for a market.

Alterations to the city hall to enable all city offices and police station to be included will cost the city money. But it would be money well spent" he assured.

Alderman Allin agreed but pointed out there had to be a limit to city spending some time. "We have got to retrench as we are nearly at the end of our rope," he said. "I think the taxpayers should have some voice in the matter."

Alderman Hyde said he was no spendthrift but he still thought the proposed alterations to the city hall would be good business. While Mayor Storey pointed out that money would be saved in maintenance.

Alderman Thomas did not think tax payers would approve of the move. "For the betterment of the city the alterations should be proceeded with, but so many of our taxpayers are so tight fisted they would still vote against it," he said.

Recommendation Approved

Alderman Lattimer pointed out that the recommendation merely asked that tenders be called for the work; that it did not mean the work would at once be proceeded with. The recommendation then carried unanimously.

The offer of the Mayer Construction Company for the purchase of lots facing Bridge Street on the county home sub-division between Bridge and Dundas Street, was accepted. Under the agreement Mr. Mayer will pay $1,000 per lot for the 10 lots, upon those which he had previously agreed to take up.

Alderman Armstrong in recommending that Mr. Mayer be given a site plan stated he advised council that although the city had the right to refuse to sell the lots for sale to the public there had been only a few serious inquiries and no lots had been sold.

If they were not sold he said the city would have to pay the cost of services for all the unsold lots.

The aerial ladder fire truck which was demonstrated in the city last week and later in front of the city hall was recommended purchased at a price of $11,000. Alderman Allin, Clarke, Lloyd, Lumsden and Wilkinson opposed.

Motion Again Defeated

A recommendation tabled by Alderman Brown calling for council to revert to the former procedure of Thursday evening committee meetings was defeated.

Under inquiries Alderman Liddle asked regarding the complaint of a Bonnycastle Street resident of a cottage being moved next his property. He was told that the building inspector had estimated the cottage could be worth $300.

Alderman Tice wanted to know if the city was still hiring a bulldozer and was told that they had paid out in rental an amount sufficient to purchase the machine. He was told the city could not purchase a bulldozer of another type, as there would be some duplication.

Alderman Clarke asked for the report of the tree committee. As a member of the committee Alderman Hyde said all trees to be cut had been marked and that no trees had been cut which were dangerous.

To this Alderman Allin replied perfectly sound trees had been cut on North Front Street.

Chairman Complimented

Alderman Lloyd referred to an industrial writeup concerning Belleville in an English industrial magazine and complimented Alderman Allin as chairman of the industrial commission. Alderman Allin said the article had been written by the industrial chairman for the Canadian Pacific Railways.

Alderman Duffy asked something be done to alleviate the traffic congestion at the Front and Bridge Street intersection and also asked that school guards be hired to direct traffic at the Up-per Bridge when school children crossed. He said firemen at the present time were doing this but with more than half of the department stationed at the school fireball firemen acting as school guides would leave the station short handed.

Question of the East Bridge Street watermain installation was brought up. Mayor Storey replied the contract had been let some time ago, but that the Port Hope Construction Company for some reason had not undertaken the work.

There was a spirited discussion regarding which bank the city would borrow from to provide $130,000 for the Board of Education to construct the new Yeomans Street School. It was finally decided to borrow the money from the Bank of Commerce, the bank in which the Board of Education account is kept.

CCF FAVORS

Centralization of industry with control vested in large combines and monopolies cause 5% for attack by Mr. Coldwell who stated that basic Canadian industries should not be controlled by absentee owners.

Referring to the recent strike at Asbestos in Quebec, the speaker said that there should be some labor laws which would demand decent working conditions throughout Canada. Co-operative societies and trade unions would eliminate the menace, he said. Co-operative Ownership Urged

Co-operative ownership was the best form of social ownership, according to Mr. Coldwell. Big business, he said, was run by irresponsibles, however, and institution of co-operative taxation, passed by the Liberals and supported by the Conservatives, was doing its best to cripple the co-operatives.

"They say that only co-operative profits are taxed, but co-operatives do not have profits," pointed out the speaker. "A co-operative is a group of people banded together to do business for themselves."

Mr. Coldwell assured there was no need for a CCF dictatorship over all industry and business. He said his party would provide ownership only where there was danger of a monopoly. Every business in Canada, he said, should become a monopoly less a place in the British economy urged by the C.C.F., he said.

The C.C.F. fight for the betterment of conditions in Canada has seen some success with the Liberals being forced to bring in CCF measures.

C. C. F. Successes

He claimed it was the Liberal party's wish for the support of the C.C.F. back in 1927 when relief was given to the unemployed, ing in old age pensions. In fact the Liberals had brought them in for fear of contradiction, he said, that practically every advance in social legislation in Canada had been due to the threat of C.C.F. successes.

"It is a funny thing how we get all these good things in Canada on election" stated Mr. Coldwell as he referred to the recent legislation by the party in power giving the C.C.F. was going to do on election" stated Mr. Coldwell as he referred to the recent legislation by the party in power giving the C.C.F. was going to do on election,"

Home-Breds Prep For 90th Running Of Plate Classic

Toronto, May 23 (CP)—A field of crack Canadian-bred three-year-olds will break on May 29 in the 90th running of the historic King's Plate, oldest continuously-run turf classic in North America, with its purse of 50 guineas and $10,000 added.

A dozen or so of Canada's finest will be prodded on by an expected record of some 50,000 fans as they thunder over the gruelling mile-and-one-eighth distance at Woodbine Park in search of the Dominion's richest racing prize.

A purse estimated at about $18,000 awaits the winner of the blue-ribbon event, which climaxes a pathetic two-year-pack-training period.

For western Canada stock the balmy breezes of adjacent Lake Ontario have apparently been agreeable since the trophy was first presented in 1860 in honor of Queen Victoria.

Again this year, optimistic railbirds have given the green light to another product of the Bert and George Cullagh's Speedy Isles.

Whether the son of Swift and Sure will duplicate the 1949 performance of the Cullagh's colt, Last Mark, when he shattered the speed record to enter the charmed circle of Plate winners, nobody's guess.

Last Mark did the course in 1:53 to break Uttermost's record of 1:53 4/5 that stood since 1945.

Good Comeback

If Speedy Isle comes through it will be a sweet victory. Just a few weeks ago he was given virtually no chance when he developed a cold in the kidneys while in training. He was entered over long distances, the brown colt has already served notice of his importance.

Speedy Isle recently put in an impressive time when he breezed six furlongs in 1:09 1-5, while still showing slight effects from the kidney trouble.

However, the horses that have moved into the "potential challenger" class can be found in E. P. Taylor's Epic, John Stuart's Bunty Lawless, Willie Mortimer's Gem Thief and Steve Chris' Bolaris.

The foremost of the Canadian track events was established in 1860 as the Queen's Plate and run as such until 1903 when it was changed to its present name.

The purse of 50 guineas has been presented every year though rules for the classic have changed. Originally the race contested among various Ontario centres but in 1783 it was established permanently at Woodbine Park.

The famous Seagram stables is leading in plate winners since Don Rose first won for the inaugural running at Carlton, Ont. The Hatch and Coddings Stables follow the yellow and black silks with five apiece.

In its uninterrupted 89-year-old history, the race has been held at Toronto, Guelph, St. Catharines, Hamilton, Whitby, Oshawa, Kingston, Barrie, Woodstock, Prescott and Picton.

LABOR SAVING

Regina (CP)—Don't feel disturbed because you leave the cellophane wrapping on your lampshades. You are not alone. A lamp manufacturer said on a visit here that 75 per cent of Canadians do the same.

Ont. Amateur Baseball

(By The Canadian Press)

Veteran Frankie Liscombe takes his seventh baseball to-day also likes to square himself after committing one.

The steady third baseman, Tuesday-night followed up an error with a triple and a home run that netted five runs as his Guelph Maple Leafs defeated St. Thomas Legionnaires 9-6 in a senior intersquantic baseball association game at Guelph.

In other senior intercounty games, Brantford Red Sox defeated London Majors 7-2, and Waterloo Tigers walloped Stratford Nationals 18-3.

Kitchener Legionnaires had a good day as they beat St. Thomas 11-2 in an afternoon game and they defeated Galt Terriers 12-11 in 12 innings in a night game.

In a Niagara District senior tilt, St. Catharines Stags took over first place by beating Niagara Falls-Welds 11-4.

In the Central Ontario League, Brockville Braves beat Oshawa Merchants split a doubleheader at Brockville, Oshawa winning the first game 4-3 and taking the second 1-0. Peterborough Marines edged Batawa Shoemen 7-5 in a game at Belleville.

At Guelph, Liscombe's error in the seventh inning was costly. It enabled St. Thomas to stage a four-run rally for a 9-3 lead.

The Leafs entered the ninth inning leading 6-4 and with two men on base. Liscombe smashed one of relief pitcher Lefty Gordon's pitches to deep right field for a homer.

Get First Victory

Martin Philip was on the mound for Guelph and got his first victory of the season. Elmer Cook started for St. Thomas and went well until the ninth inning, when Garton took over.

At Brantford, the Red Sox collected their two runs in the third inning by Burnside and Lockington. McFadden was credited with an error for London when he let Hilbert's ground ball roll through his legs.

The Majors left two men on base in the sixth frame and three in the seventh.

At Waterloo, the Tigers rolled to their fourth straight victory as they batted in seven runs in the first inning, three in the second and then got 11 runs in the last seven innings. Stratford got one run in the sixth and two in the ninth.

Waterloo combed three Stratford hurlers for 15 hits. Lefty Allan started for the Nationals, allowing seven runs and three hits in 1 1/3 innings. He was charged with the loss.

Had Little Trouble

Kitchener had little trouble defeating St. Thomas. Roy Tredgett paced the Legionnaires with two triples and a single for two runs. The Legionnaires collected three runs in the fifth and another three in the sixth.

An error by shortstop Al Pickard in the eighth inning gave the Legionnaires their break against the Terriers. They batted in four runs and in the ninth on another error by Pickard they got three runs to tie the game.

In the ninth inning Galt left fielder Jackie Forbes offered a fractional book home when hit by a ball tossed by Bobby Schnurr.

At St. Catharines, the Stags nipped pitcher Jack Worrell for eight runs in as many hits in the first five innings and then got three off relief hurler Gord Johnson in the last three frames.

Joe Petrick smashed the first home run for the Stags in the seventh inning.

Only one game is scheduled in the Intercounty loop tonight. Galt travels to London for a night game.

Brockville Memos Gain Even Split With Oshawa

Brockville, May 23 — (CP) — Brockville memos and Oshawa Merchants split a Central Baseball League doubleheader Tuesday, Oshawa won the opener 6-4 and Brockville came through with a 1-0 victory in the nightcap. The two are tied for the lead in the Central Ontario Baseball League race with Peterborough just two points behind by virtue of their 2-0 win over Batawa Friday night.

Rallying in the seventh inning of the opener, the Oshawa squad pushed across three quick runs and added another in the next frame to hold the 6-4 lead for the remainder of the tussle after having trailed 4-3 during the early part of the game.

Brockville had knocked their starting hurler Glen Ochsa from the box in the fourth when Ron Blaziak and playing manager Johnny Doran blasted home-runs in succession to take the 4-3 lead.

Jim Michaels came in to put out the fire for the Merchants and held the Memos to three hits for his five - inning stint. John Rowe pitched steady ball for the locals limiting the winners to six hits.

Gordie Atkins, Brockville shortstop, put the local squad on the victory trail in the second contest when he stepped up at the first batter and blasted a homer over the left field wall. His run proved the deciding factor as the game turned into a battle of pitchers.

Dogged Defence Of Lower Soochow Creek Collapsing

Nationalists Run Up White Flag Atop Shanghai Bldg.

By FRED HAMPSON

Shanghai, May 26 (AP)—Nationalist troops today ran up a white flag atop the Shanghai post office, and it appeared the dogged defence of the lower Soochow creek was collapsing.

The Communists crossed the Szechwan bridge and began rounding up Nationalist prisoners. The Garden bridge was evacuated by the Nationalists but still was under fire from the nearby Broadway Mansion, 17-floor apartment, where a number of foreigners are trapped. The Communists had not tried to cross the Soochow.

It seemed to be only a matter of hours before this tough knot of resistance, which has delayed Communist occupation of north Shanghai, would be wiped out completely.

Get Behind Bridge

The trick was turned when the Reds got a flanking column behind the bridge defenders and made a simultaneous attack in front.

The whole city breathed a sigh of relief for the thousands of Chinese civilians who had been trapped since early Wednesday. They had endured all sorts of fire.

The British and United States consulates were trying to intercede with both sides for a ceasefire order to enable trapped foreigners and other non-combatants to escape.

In the almost 24 hours small Nationalist forces had kept the Reds from crossing the bridge.

The battle area embraced some of Shanghai's finest modern buildings north and south of Soochow Creek. These include the consulate offices and the British and Russian Consulates.

Cooped up in these and nearby apartment buildings were hundreds of foreigners, including Americans, Portuguese, Netherlanders, French — and many Chinese.

Rifle and machine - gun fire splattered against some of the structures. A few bullets punctured them. Two bullets landed in the bedroom of Walter Calvert, United States Consul General, in the Chinese building.

But so far the only known foreign casualty was a British subject, R. P. Vaughan, wounded in a street near the American Consulate.

This was the pattern of the Battle of Shanghai on the second day of the new Communist occupation.

The last nationalist defenders had the bridges and had guns and snipers in many buildings.

Reach Peking Road

Communist advance workers were inching forward on the south side of the creek. Some places they had reached Peking Road and the approaches to the bridges.

The Nationalist hold was incredible. Sooner or later they were certain to be flanked from up-stream. Behind these Nationalists, the garrison evacuation con-

Rehabilitation Important Phase Medical Treatment

Toronto, Ont., May 26 (CP)— Many persons who weather the crisis of severe illness have difficulty in fitting themselves back into everyday life, especially if after-effects bar them from returning to their normal occupations.

But something is being done to help them.

The rehabilitation problem now is being looked upon as one of the important phases of medical treatment, Dr. Howard A. Rusk, Professor of Physical Medicine at the University of New York, said Wednesday. Addressing the closing general session of the Ontario Medical Association convention, he said:

"We have been focussed on the acute problems of chronic illness, rather than upon the possibility rehabilitation. I am convinced that we have lost a lot of patients due to neglect of this aspect.

"We have done much to add years to life; it is our responsibility to add life to years. The only way we can meet this problem is to accept it as a social and medical responsibility."

Dr. Rusk said the opposes bed rest in treatment of the chronically ill. He said he found in a recent study within six weeks of confinement to bed, blood volume decreased five to 15 per cent.

Dr. G. C. Brink, Ontario director of tuberculosis services, said it is expected that by the end of this year, all hospitals in Ontario will have compulsory X-ray chest examinations on admission. He said 66 hospitals in the province now provide this service.

Dr. G. S. Williamson, Ottawa dermatologist, said that during the last six years, penicillin has become the No. 1 treatment for syphilis. He said there was little evidence of development of a syphilis virus resistant to penicillin.

Five Residents Of Canada, U.S. Draw Favorites

Dublin, May 26 (AP)— Five Canadian and United States residents today drew tickets on Royal Forest, 9-to-1 favorite in the Derby, for the Irish Hospitals' Sweepstakes.

If Royal Forest wins the Derby at Epsom Downs June 4, the 12 holders of tickets drawn on the favorite will collect £25,000 ($100,000) each; will get £10,000 ($40,000); and if Royal Forest runs third, £5,000 ($20,000). If the favorite fails to show in the money, each ticket holder on him will get £131 ($524).

No names or addresses of the lucky ticketholders were given.

The fund, announced this morning just before hospital parade began drawing the sweepstakes counterfoils, of £6,017 more than the Grand National payoff last March.

The first counterfoil drawn was J.E. 40342, bearing the nom de plume of "Windsor" and ion the horse Second Sight. Since the horse will not run in the Derby, the holder of the ticket will be a Canadian or an American—will get the non-starter's prize of £131. ($524).

Hospitals Fund of Republic of Ireland will receive £.381,965 from the sweepstakes fund. The Irish government got £67,407.

The total intake for the sweepstakes was £1,424,000, slightly less than the £1,467,657 worth of tickets sold for the Grand National sweepstakes.

Western Powers Demand Russia Relax Her Grip On E. German Industries

Under Soviet Control

Paris, May 26. (AP)—A British diplomatic source said today the west is demanding assurances from Russia that her promise to end Berlin-blockade restrictions will be carried out to the letter.

The Foreign Ministers, who went into their fourth meeting of the current session on Germany, are reported being kept fully informed of developments in Berlin, particularly western authorities charge Russia has started a new type of blockade by refusing to coordinate 12,000 Berlin rail strikers.

The Garden bridge was evacuated by the Nationalists but still was under fire from the nearby Broadway Mansion, 17-floor apartment, where a number of foreigners are trapped. The Communists had not tried to cross the Soochow.

If necessary, Russia is ready to end the Berlin blockade by herself, the source said.

The British informant said that unless the Russian administration in Berlin gives "satisfactory" assurance that "continuing difficulties" will end, the western Foreign Ministers will call on the Soviet representative, Andrei Y. Vishinsky, to intervene.

Diplomatic informants say the west will demand that Russia relax her grip on East-German industries as a condition for ending the Berlin blockade.

Dean Acheson, United States Secretary of State, told the conference of Foreign Ministers, Wednesday about the "great industries" in the Soviet zone of Germany are owned by a Russian holding company. "Some of some key industries, he said, are under Soviet control.

Informants said the western delegates intend to loosen this grip was reached in three-power talks between United States and French exchanges here immediately before the Big Four meeting of the Foreign Ministers, a plan for German economic and political unity.

Andrei Y. Vishinsky, Soviet Foreign Minister, has demanded control of the Ruhr industries and Control Council, and has assailed western plans to integrate the West-German republic's constitution to the Ruhr, as a new attempt to take all of Germany. The Westerners declare Russia is "on the retreat" to the Potsdam agreement.

Informants said the Western powers had expected Vishinsky to counter with proposals for a five-point program embodied in the Soviet-German pact last June by eight Eastern-European countries.

That declaration in effect called for conclusion of an early German peace treaty, creation of a central-German government, to be followed a year later by complete withdrawal of occupation forces.

Flight Instructor, Two Students Die As Planes Collide

Miami, Okla., May. 26 (AP)—A flight instructor and two student fliers were killed yesterday when their planes collided in the air and crashed in flames six miles west of here. The instructor was George T. Dunnill, 23, of Miami. The students were identified as Dewyong of Muskegon, Mich., and Jack C. Seaman of Chicago.

Radio-Active Atoms Show Body's Reaction to Illness of the Mind

Montreal, May 26. (AP)—Radioactive atoms today gave their first discovered use of some things happenings in your body when you're mentally ill.

These atoms were made in the Oak Ridge, Tenn., atomic pile or reactor. They are radioactive iodine, a form of iodine, mixed in sulphur-like chemical element, chlorine, to the rays of atomic bombs. Iodine normally turns into iodine.

They were used at the University of California Medical School and Langley Porter Clinic, San Francisco. The results were reported today by Doctors Karl M. Bowman, Earl C. Miller, Morris Dailey, Alexander Simon and Berdeen Frankel and Genevieve Lowe.

The radioactive atoms, given in small amounts, showed the human body's response to illness is similar to the thyroid gland, and its power as a hormone. Thyroxin, which

Easing Tension in Europe Due To Faith in West, Economic Revival, Says McCullagh

Montreal, May 26 (CP)— The easing of the tension of war in Western Europe is due to the faith the countries of western Europe have in the fact that Britain, the United States and Canada mean business, George McCullagh, publisher of the Toronto Globe and Mail and the Toronto Telegram, said here today in a speech prepared for delivery before the Kiwanis Club of Montreal.

Mr. McCullagh recently made a tour of the British Isles and western Europe.

He said the easing of tension in western Europe also was due to the Atlantic pact and the "remarkable" improvement in the economic situation throughout Europe. This had had a most comforting effect on retarding the spread of Communism within countries outside the iron curtain.

In an 8,000 word address, the publisher said that he came back to Canada with the "definite conviction" that war is far less a possibility today than ever since the cessation of hostilities.

The Russian is more hated than feared, and Britain's and America's moral prestige was never higher. The war threat has eased off decidedly," he said.

Mr. McCullagh warned, however, that at some point in European recovery, when the physical and psychological situation is favorable, Marshall aid will cease to be an asset. In fact, it could well become an impediment to recovery. In his noblest conception, it was only intended as a crutch by whose assistance Europe could be helped back to economic health.

It was the duty of authorities and administrators of the aid program to decide when it should be tapered off in the best interests of the beneficiaries themselves.

Pilgrimage of Peace to Rome Urged as 1950 Holy Year Proclaimed by Pope Pius

By GEORGIA BRIA

Vatican City, May 26 (AP) — Pope Pius today called on the Roman Catholic world to make a pilgrimage of peace to Rome during the 1950 Holy Year.

In a Papal bull officially proclaiming the Holy Year, the 72-year-old Pontiff implored that "peace finally return to the hearts of everyone, within domestic walls, in individual nations, in the universal commonwealth of peoples."

A gray-haired prelate read the Bull in the great portico of the Basilica of St. Peter according to ancient custom. He will read later in the Basilicas of St. John Lateran, St. Paul and Saint Maria Maggiore in Rome.

The Pope himself did not appear at the public ceremony attended by some 2,000 persons.

In the bull, he also warned pilgrims, expected to pour into Rome by the tens of thousands beginning next Christmas Eve, not to come for a good time.

In Spirit Only

"These pilgrimages must not be made with the mentality of those who travel for pleasure," the Pope said, "but in the spirit of piety which animated the faithful of past centuries who, overcoming obstacles of all kind, often afoot, came to Rome to wash away their sins with tears of sorrow and to implore of God peace and forgiveness."

Roman Catholics who make the Holy Year pilgrimage to Rome and confess claims to be the first to receive a plenary indulgence — full remission of temporal punishment to due forgiven sin so that no further expiation is required in Purgatory.

900-Pound Safe Robbery Nets Thieves $70 to $80

Peterborough, May 26 (CP)—A safe weighing approximately 900 pounds and containing between $70 and $80 was stolen Wednesday night from the American News Company. When the news agent's shop was opened up early today the safe was missing and the back door had been broken.

A truck stolen from a cleaners company, found by police at Lakefield, is believed to be connected with the safe theft. City Detective Sergeant John Stevenson and Detective William Clarke are investigating today.

Provincial Police said the Canadian National Railways house at Lakefield was broken into during the night.

CONSERVATIVES PLAN TO DELAY PASSAGE OF BILL

Propose Amendment To Iron, Steel Bill

London, May 26. (CP)—The Conservative Opposition House of Lords has given the labor government's key highly controversial iron and steel nationalization bill second reading. However, it has labelled the measure with a great big "but".

The opposition has declared its intention of introducing an amendment when the bill reaches the committee stage that would postpone the enforcement until after the general election, scheduled for the Summer of 1950.

Last night the Lords passed the bill without voting on second reading. But—and this is the biggest but of the current parliamentary session—the Conservative peers force through the amendment which would delay the denationalization of Britain's vast dollar-earning iron and steel plants at least to 1950 in the event 1950 it might mean nationalization will never take place.

The general election must be held by that date, mid-summer next year,—when Labor's five-year term, under the Parliament act, ends. The iron and steel issues is sure to be one of the hottest of the election campaigns.

Winston Churchill, Conservative Party leader, opened with the fire department inhalator, and Detective-Sergeant Michael Andrews to the house.

Dead For Some Time

Nothing could be done to save the children or their mother, however, and police reports today indicated that they had been dead for some time before Constable Reid arrived home.

Mrs. Reid had a deep wound underneath a scarf that bound her head. A large knife lay at about length away from her on a dresser. It was covered with clotted blood.

Beside the knife lay the family Bible, and with some words, written on it. The words "tired" and "love" were written in Sandwriting identified as Mrs. Reid's.

The two children were in the half-finished bathtub, dead. The older boy was unclothed and floating on his side but the younger was still dressed in a small shirt.

Constable Reid lives in a house on Dundas St. Reid, who lives in the apartment above the younger Reids, and he summoned police and what help he could. Dr. J. Heurner Mullin, M.D., was also called and informed of what had happened.

This morning, he said that investigations were being conducted by the Ontario Provincial police. He could not say yet whether an inquest would be held.

Seemed Quite Normal

Wednesday morning the elder Mr. Reid had taken Constable Reid's son, Thomas, for a walk and he told police Mrs. Reid had seemed quite normal then. Mrs. Florence Foster, her mother, said that she had talked over the telephone with her daughter about 9:30 o'clock. The younger woman had said then that she intended to do some ironing that evening. Police said they found no signs of it having been started.

Constable Reid was on duty from 4 o'clock to midnight Wednesday.

He has been with the Hamilton police department for about one and a half years and previously served with the R.C.M.P. in the First Provost Corps.

SWEETER PROSPECT

Oslo (CP) — Strictly-rationed Norwegians have a sweeter prospect due for an increase. If there is no sharp upsurge in the demands of the government's monopoly, rationing may be lifted altogether.

Hamilton Officer Finds Family Dead In Apartment

Reports Indicate All Had Been Dead For Some Time

Hamilton, May 26 (CP)— After a night-long search by police, Wednesday night, Constable Earl Reid found his two baby sons drowned in the half-filled bathtub and his wife lying on the bed with her throat cut, an open Bible and a bloody butcher knife on the dresser beside her.

The 26-year-old Mrs. Margaret Reid and the couple's two infant sons, Kenneth old George of David and 17-months-old Thomas Frederick.

Constable Reid went off duty at midnight last night and arrived at his 48 Summit Avenue home at about 12.30.

A few minutes later, Constable Stan Edge, on duty at Central Police Station switchboard, received an incoherent call from the constable, telling him what had happened.

The police immediately despatched the police wagon, a car with Constable Don MacRae, the fire department inhalator, and Detective-Sergeant Michael Andrews to the house.

Mother's Hope Son Still Alive Is Abandoned

The last lingering hope, nurtured for seven years in the heart of a mother that her flyer son "reported missing" was still alive, died the other day with the official communication that his grave had been identified in Europe.

Reported missing since 1942, Flight Sergeant Spencer Evans, RCAF son of Mrs. Mabel Evans, formerly of this city and now of 599 Annette Street, Toronto, was shot down while on a bombing flight over Germany.

Since that day Mrs. Evans has fondly cherished the hope that he might be alive, and some day would journey back to her.

The other day she received an official communication from the government that her son's grave after years of search, has been identified in a British War Cemetery in Kiel, Germany.

Accompanying the thought photographs of the grave and of those of the two flight sergeant's comrades.

Flight Sergeant Evans was born in Cornwall, England and came to Canada with his parents while residing in Belleville, he was associated with the Bridge Street Shoe Store. He lived at 197 Foster Avenue. A brother, Lloyd Evans resides on 9 Hilton Street.

Doctor Says Suit 'Filed for Revenge And Easy Money'

St. Louis, May 26 (AP)—A Pennsylvania doctor said Wednesday that a suit against him was filed of fathering a child and blilling the woman's husband for divorce and that they were "filed for revenge and some easy money."

Dr. Paul A. Blackburn was named in a $50,000 suit filed at Butler, Pa., by Mrs. Betty Fitzsimmons, who alleged the doctor was the father of a son born to Mrs. Blutzer after the latter's husband also charged Hinchberger sent a check to him for $125.00 for the delivery.

The doctor told he had not sent the check to pay "a single cent" for delivery of the baby.

Masonic Rally Will be Held At Collegiate

Detailed information regarding the proposed construction of a new Masonic Temple in Belleville will be made available to Belleville and district Masons at a Masonic rally to be held at the Belleville Collegiate auditorium on Tuesday evening, May 31st.

Masons from the Belleville lodges, and from centres in the surrounding district, including Trenton, Napanee and Picton will be invited to attend the rally which will be a preliminary to the commencement of a campaign to raise funds for the construction of the new Temple.

One of Canada's outstanding after dinner speakers, Captain, the Rev. Norman Rawson, minister of Centenary United Church in Hamilton, will address the gathering.

The purpose of the meeting is to acquaint Belleville and district Masons with the constructional details of the new Masonic Temple and is not being held as a fund raising meeting. There will be no collection nor solicitation of funds at the meeting and all Masons in the district are invited to attend.

MAGISTRATE RULES AGAINST LAWYER

A Peterborough lawyer was fined $2 and $1 costs for failing to insert the city's parking meters on Wednesday afternoons. The lawyer claimed that Wednesday being a half holiday, he was not obliged to pay, as the meters stated that no parking expected on holidays.

The magistrate ruled otherwise.

City Students Win Scholarships

Announcement of awards of scholarships, to undergraduate students in the Faculty of Medicine, Queen's University, made yesterday, included two prize winners from Belleville, W.W. Near and Susan Near Scholarship of the value of $80, for standing first in Anatomy.

Campbell Glen Cameron, third year, won the Peak Scholarship in Anatomy.

Pass list of students in the final year of the medical course included David Morris Marcus, Harold Williamson and Thomas Woodley of Belleville.

Oshawa Merchants Appealing By-Law

More than a score of Oshawa grocers, led by ex-alderman Ras Hallisey, are appealing the early closing by-law as it affects grocers.

Under the present by-law grocers close Wednesday afternoon, and at 1.00 p.m. each evening. Those dealers carrying a line of fruits and vegetables or confectionary items, can evade the intent of the by-law, it was pointed out, and thereby gain some unfair competition.

That Oshawa "grocers" want is a definition of the word "grocer."

Neck and Back Broken by Fall Of Piece of Timber

Cornwall, May 26 (CP)—Knocked down by a piece of timber, Alex. Flaro, 22, of nearby Maritnown, Wednesday suffered a broken back and neck. He was rushed to hospital in Montreal where an emergency operation was performed. His condition is reported critical.

Flaro was working in a cellar of a home at Lancaster and was one of two men removing a piece of heavy timber when it fell. Part of the timber fell, hitting Flaro in the back and knocking him over.

ROAD PROGRAM TO COST $159,000

The Oshawa City Council has approved a road improvement program to cost $159,000.

U. S. GOLFERS WIN

Portmarnock, Ireland, May 26—(AP) — Willie Turness of Elmford, N. Y., today defeated Robert Walker of Scotland 5 and 3 to enter the fifth round of the British amateur golf championship.

The little American champion was three up at the turn after going out in a par-breaking 36 and was two strokes under even fours for the six holes needed to close out the 27-year-old Scot on the back nine.

Stranahan, the defending champion from Toledo, Ohio, crushed G. A. Loveday of Britain, 7 and 6.

Cadets Enjoyed Fine Sailing Weather on 24th

In keeping with the custom of inland sailors of small craft, the Sea Cadets turned out on Victoria Day on the waters sailing in the ther. For many, the 24th, is usually the start of the sailing season, however many of the cadets have been out many times this year.

A number of the older cadets with L/S Richards as P. O. of the day, sailed the whaler to Massassaga Point, where they had a picnic lunch. After lunch they again hoisted sails and made their way to Point Anne, where they stopped to enjoy a half hour of swimming. With a steady breeze and clear skies the crew made a good run from Point Anne to the Ship (training establishment). For those who like a challenge, which all hands are looking forward to with keen interest, this Saturday is being held to give all hands a chance to relax and enjoy themselves over that the annual inspection is over. The cadets may will be assembled at the ship and this Corps was the first one in the No. 3 Area to be ready for inspection. It is an inspection in about four years. A good display of manned drill and sailing were other highlights of the inspection, which was over all very successful and were to be held in Belleville.

Many of the cadets agreed with the inspection officer and stated: "It is regretful that the Corps is not in the city, turned out to see the cadets, who have studied and worked so hard to make this Corps an asset to the community."

Bowlers Enjoy Jitney Tourney At Local Greens

Despite the strong wind and cool weather a large turnout was present at the bowling greens on Wednesday it being the occasion of the regular jitney play. Six greens were in operation and competition was exceptionally keen for so early in the season. A number of new bowlers were on hand and a most enjoyable afternoon was enjoyed.

Mrs. A. Cress, Mrs. G. O'Connor and Mrs. Harry Thompson were two-game winners each with a point score of 30. Mrs. Cress from the Wonnacott, Mrs. Norman Edwards and Claude D. Tice go into the same class with a score of 29, 27, and 26 respectively. One-game winners were Mrs. Middleton, Mrs. N. Kyle, Mrs. Wilfred Price, Mr. Earl Ash, Mrs. Irene Ward, George Stewart, Joe Hoffman and Mrs. Joe Black. Mrs. H. Humphries, Mrs. Cyril McBride, Jerry Hyde, Norman Edwards, Wilfred Price and Mrs. Carm Mott.

Those who had no game win were Mrs. G. Gerow, Good Campbell, Lorne Feever, Mrs. A. E. Wendt and Mrs. Ed. Bateman. Lloyd and Mrs. D. L. Storey. Competition in the various tournament throughout the district will start next Wednesday and from then till the season closes bowlers will be active. The culmination of the season for the Belleville Club will be the Corbin Gold Cup tournament which will be held on Civic holiday, while the British Columbia bowlers will this meet a picked team from the district here on August 16th.

Carrier Boys Ready for Trip To Toronto

Preparations are nearly completed now for the second group of Ontario Intelligencer carrier boys and girls to make a trip to and Toronto as guests of the Ontario Intelligencer.

The group who went last week consisted completely of boys but this week there are to be three carrier girls who will be making the trip. A special car is being used to drive the girls to Toronto and they will be accompanied by a member of the staff of the Ontario Intelligencer.

The trip last week was a decided success and it is hoped that the trip this Saturday will be even better still. Last week the boys went to Riverdale Zoo and to the Royal Ontario Museum and then to the ball game in the afternoon between the Toronto Maple Leafs in action. This week the ball game is scheduled for the afternoon and the zoo will be taken in after supper immediately before returning home. Dinner and supper will be eaten in Child's newly remodelled restaurant on Yonge St.

Leave Early

Those making the trip this week are requested to be on hand at the Ontario Intelligencer office by 7.45 a. m. on Saturday so that the whole party may have time to get settled and leave at exactly eight o'clock. Cameras will be taken along and it is would also be a good idea to take along an extra sweater or jacket for the girls left in the bus. It is not likely that they will be used during the trip but there is a very cool breeze blowing off the lake into Maple Leaf Stadium. The party is requested to have a good breakfast before starting the trip.

If anyone is unable to go this Saturday they are asked to advise the office as soon as possible. The carriers are also reminded that they must make application as they have someone deliver their routes while they are away.

So far only the following sixteen carriers have qualified for this week's trip: Ken Seaman, Jacqueline Day, Sally Ann Young, R. Jeffrey, G. Crake, D. Anderson, J. Carr, C. Ryan, K. Lewis, R. Wilkins, B. Payne of Point Anne, D. Hogarth, Sabine, D. Kingston, J. Ashley and L. Green.

Night Latch Taken From Children's Playground

Charles Street parents who several weeks ago were responsible for setting up a new children's playground in the west end community are now wondering just where a night latch from the street gate has disappeared.

To provide a playground where their children could play safely the parents took the initiative and set up the playground on a vacant lot. The lot was fenced, equipped with slides, sandboxes and swings and even placed a night latch on the street gate to prevent the kiddies from running onto the street.

But over the holiday the latch disappeared from the playground gate.

Dr. R. T. Potter, whose interest was responsible for getting the playground underway, pointed out that the night latch was placed only for the protection of the children.

He says he would gladly donate a lock to anyone needing it so badly that it was found necessary to remove the catch from the playground gate.

COMMON TRAINING

Calcutta, India (CP)—Boy scouts' and girl guides' associations in India are to be merged into a new association. A unified system of training will be adopted by all merging organizations.

Maj.-Gen. H. D. Graham, vice-chief of the Canadian General Staff, went last year to represent Canada at the five-day "Exercise Britannia". The conference in Britain and the Commonwealth will highlight discussions.

Headquarters, Ottawa, Ont., Mal. -Gen. Graham will return home soon after the sessions end May 28.

MARMORA

Home & School Annual Meeting Elects Officers

Marmora—The annual meeting of Marmora Home and School Association was held in the public school on Wednesday evening, with the president, Mrs. W. G. Chrysler (re-elected) in the chair. Mrs. B. G. McKenzie; Treasurer, Mrs. R. T. Fraser, Mrs. Ernest Bateman, F. Grant, E. C. Prentice, A. F. Fraser, A. Cunningham and D. F. Mills.

The report of the Publicity Committee was presented by W. J.Cottrell.

The recording secretary's report was given by Miss E. Sercon, followed by the treasurer's report by Mrs. R. E. Neal, which showed a creditable balance on hand.

E. C. Prentice gave the report of the Program Committee and Mrs. Hogarth Sabine as convener of the Social Committee gave the report for the Tea Season. Installing Committee was accepted as submitted. Mrs. J. H. Rennie was elected as recording secretary and later in the equality of said president, carried out the installation of officers.

The re-elected president thanked the executive for their splendid assistance for the year just closed, and adjournment was made.

County Police Court

Charges against offenders of the Highway Traffic Act predominated the weekly county magistrate's court in Belleville as a total of 28 charges being listed on the docket. All but a few of the cases were either settled out of court or arranged to be heard at a later date.

Four truckers paid fines for overloading fines ranging from ten to twenty dollars, plus costs.

One motorist paid a fine of ten and costs for failing to register his automobile with the Highways Department. He had bought a car but was driving it home when he was apprehended.

A city cleaning trucker paid a total of five dollars for driving a truck without Pin and Number bearing on the side of the vehicle as required by the H.T.A.

"If police charged all truckers who violated this section of the act there would be a great many more in court," observed Magistrate F. Wills, as he assessed the minimum fine.

A commercial traveller charged with speeding fish, paid $25 and costs out of court, while a charge of grappling against another fisherman was withdrawn when the same inspector could not locate the accused.

Harold Crawford, Sidney township, charged on two counts of forgery and uttering false documents, was remanded until Friday in the magistrate's court, when he will appear on an additional charge laid by the city police. Charges laid by city police include passing bad cheques, and the additional charge of car theft.

Vandals Topple Over Nearly 50 Tombstones

Fort Erie, Ont., May 26 (CP)—Vandals entered the Greenwood Cemetery on the westerly outskirts of Fort Erie somewhere Tuesday night or early today and toppled over nearly 50 tombstones, it was learned here. A cemetery custodian discovered the vandalism when he reported for duty at the cemetery this morning.

"Many of the stones are broken. I cannot give an accurate estimate of the damage, but will run into hundreds of dollars. The vandalism was apparently the work of a gang, as no one man could singlely push over so many stones; some of them quite large," Mr. Hall said.

The Greenwood Cemetery is owned by the town of Fort Erie, and is operated by a municipally-appointed committee. Police are working on the case, but have found no clues. Many plot owners journeyed to the cemetery today to inspect their stones.

100 Capsules Of Heroin Seized

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Police seized 100 capsules of heroin here Wednesday in one of the largest drug hauls in Canada.

They arrested Frank Watson, 30, on a charge of illegal possession.

Police said Watson was an ex-convict. They said a recent large-scale drive had landed most of Toronto's known drug peddlers in jail. As a result of this "big shot" dope operators who have been smuggling into Canada have had difficulty getting agents here.

They said that the "big shots" were recruiting new peddlers from among ex-convicts on their release from prison.

400 RETURN TO WORK

Toronto, May 26 (CP)— Four hundred employees of the Fuller Electric Co., striking since May 18, agreed to arbitration today and returned to work.

The employees, members of the United Electrical Workers' Union (C.I.O.-C.C.C.), struck over the dismissal of six employees for failing to work overtime as requested by plant officials. They were asked to work two hours on two nights last week.

OBITUARY

LEO COURNEYEA
(Tweed)

Tweed, May 26 (Special.)— Leo Courneyea died suddenly here on Tuesday. He was born 61 years ago at Stirling, all his life was passed in this district. He was a soldier by trade. In religion he was a member of St. Carthagh's Roman Catholic Church.

Surviving him are two sisters, Mrs. Frances Courneyea and Miss Annaliena Courneyea.

The funeral will be held on Friday morning from the home of his nephew, Kenneth Courneyea, at Sloco to St. Edmund's Church.

Illegal Possession Of Drugs Brings Fine

Toronto, May 26 (CP)— Arlene Mary Neglia, 32, was sentenced today to two years less a day and six months indefinite and a $300 fine for illegal possession of drugs.

It was her fifth offence in four years. She was already sentenced to 18 months and a $300 fine on the fourth charge.

Detectives testified they had trailed her for almost two hours last Feb. 24 before arresting her and a companion, Percy Brandell, 27, in a downtown Toronto hotel. In the fight that followed 100 capsules were found on the hotel room furnishings.

THREE SEAMEN INJURED

Vancouver, May 26 (CP)— In a furious shipboard battle, three seamen aboard the strike-bound S.S. Tribesman were injured today at the West Indies dock in north Vancouver.

Police reported axe-wielding raiders scaled bow hawsers of the ship, broke in a cabin door and attacked the men in their quarters.

Injured are: George Hunter, 20; Frank Moss, 19, and John Hunter, 21, uncle of the two. All are Victoria.

Presbyterian Church Moderator Delivers Dedication Sermon

Picton, May 26—Dedication of the new St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church was carried out here last night with impressive ceremony) under the direction of the Kingston Presbytery. The sermon was preached by Rev. R. Ross C. Hitchie Bell of Montreal, Moderator of the General Assembly.

With the congregation filling the church to capacity, the historic service opened with the ancient custom of the minister, Rev. R. J. Bell, B.A., knocking at the door, symbolic of God knocking at the door of the human heart. Admitted, the minister, with a large gathering of clergy, proceeded up the aisle singing the Psalm "Ye Gates Lift up Your Heads on High."

The whole congregation was included in the service of dedication, with the Moderator officially declaring the church dedicated. The invocation was given by Rev. J. G. Hornsby, St. Andrew's Church, Belleville, the Old Testament lesson read by Rev. G. C. Heacock, Trenton. The choir, under the direction of Mrs. Harold Ostrander, organist, and Mrs. G. Madden, leader, gave special music. Rev. Dean Johnson, Brockville, read the New Testament lesson.

Many Articles Dedicated

Many articles of church furniture were dedicated. Rev. R. A. MacDonald, Cobourg, dedicated the baptismal font; Rev. H. V. Walker, Bloomfield, the communion; M. V. Heaslip, Madoc, the Communion table; Rev. R. E. Kerr, Amherst Island, the offering. The organ was dedicated by a Picton native, Rt. Rev. John McGillivray, D.D., of Sarnia, a past Moderator of the Presbyterian Church.

Other clergy assisting included Rev. J. S. Conning, Secretary of the Board of Sabbath Schools and Young People's Societies of the church, Rev. E. G. Moore, of Finch.

Following the service, a social hour was spent. On Sunday, at the opening service, Prof. Daniel W. Hay, M.A., D.D., of Knox College, Toronto, will preach.

The new church is a beautiful fine edifice, in which the minister and congregation have personally put long hours of hard work into erecting.

Built of Limestone

The church is constructed of Credit Valley limestone with architectural style of imitation gothic. The interior is finished in fir and oak, and presents a very attractive appearance. The chancel window is especially fine, being one from a former Presbyterian Church in Belleville.

In the basement, there is a modern dining room, kitchen and built and furnished by the women's organizations. The congregation itself can accommodate more than 25 persons. Seating capacity of about 300, and when it cost $46,000 to build, many thousands more having saved due to the work done by members of the congregation.

The new church replaces one destroyed by fire nearly two years ago, just after it had been redecorated.

Six New Records Set at Albert College Meet

Six new records were set at the Albert College annual track and field meet held on the college grounds on Tuesday, May 24th. The events were evenly divided between the boys and girls with Sylvia Jackson leading the way with two. But it was Keith Nicholson's record breaking jump of 20' 3½" in the running broad jump that was outstanding as that record was set in 1942.

In the meet standing the Baker House tie for championship title with DeRoche, Graham and Bishop following them.

Liquor Board Holds Decision On Application

Toronto, May 26 — (CP) — Judge W. T. Robb, chairman of the Liquor Control Board of Ontario, said today the board had reserved decision on an application from Wilfred Peters for a license to sell beer at a lodge near Bobcaygeon, 16 miles northwest of Lindsay.

(The Canadian Press reported in a Lindsay dispatch last night that the Peters application had been granted).

Judge Robb confirmed a report from Lindsay that the board had ruled that the village of Vernalam, in which Bobcaygeon is located, is "wet." The residents had long considered it a dry area but the board had ruled that it is wet because no local option vote had ever been held there.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, May 26 (CP)— Prices moved irregularly in dull trading here today. Base metals showed signs of tightening in early dealings but bogged down in midsession. Industrials firmed while a few golds eased.

Wednesday's declines were halted as selling pressure ran out but the market couldn't cook up enough steam for any recovery movements. Base metals were caught between reductions in price by Canadian consumers and announcement by Prime Minister St. Laurent that new producers would be given the same help given new gold mines.

A few base metal stocks tightened but relaxed as the session progressed. Consolidated Smelters dipped $1 to a new low at $94.

Utilities eased in a quiet industrials list while a few scattered issues tightened. Junior gold producers were lower in very dull activity.

TORONTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Trading on the local livestock market this morning as reported by the Dominion Marketing Service:

Good to choice weighty steers brought $22-$23.50. Medium to good light steers sold for $21-$22. Good heifers brought up to $21.50.

Calves were steady at $24-$25 for choice with plain to medium lightweight sellers downwards to $16.

Hogs were steady at $31 for grade A and $30.60 for grade B1.

PRODUCE MARKET

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Produce prices on the spot market here today follow: Churning cream unchanged. No 1, 58 cents fob, 63 delivered.

Butter prints unquoted.

The egg market is steady and prices are unchanged. Country shipper's quoted graded eggs, cases free: Grade A large, 44½-46; A medium, 43; A pullet, 41; grade B, 40; grade C, 36. Wholesale to retail: Grade A large, 48-49; A medium, 47-48; A pullet, 45-46; grade B, 44-45; grade C, 39-40.

HOGS

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—Hog prices at Stratford today were: Grade A, $34.25 from farmers and $31 from truckers.

Mayor Reaume Tells of Hospital Financial Setup

Windsor, May 26 (CP)—Mayor Arthur Reaume today told a Royal Commission that the administration of the board of governors at Metropolitan General Hospital was done to "take the affairs of the hospital out of the hands of politics."

The Mayor has been named as the person who paid most of the bills for a Detroit "girl" in a Detroit hotel suite on Feb. 18, attended by four nurses from Metropolitan Hospital.

Mayor Reaume was the first witness today to testify before Judge Eric Cross, one-man Ontario Royal Commission inquiring into administration of the city-owned hospital.

The probe resulted from the resignation in February of Mildred Maybee as superintendent of nurses at the hospital and reports of wild parties involving the nurses at Detroit.

Improvement Noted

Asked by George Mitchell, counsel for the Commission, if he thought the setup of the board of governors is now improved, Mayor Reaume said he thought it was.

Formerly the board of governors was appointed by the Board of Health which in turn was named by an elected body, the Windsor Utilities Commission. Under the present system council appoints four members of the 15-man board.

Mayor Reaume said the deficit of the hospital for the years 1938 to 1948 inclusive was more than $400,000.

Referring to construction of a new nurses home, the Mayor denied he had anything to do with Gordon Fuller obtaining the contract.

"I didn't even know who tendered until they were opened," he said.

Mr. Fuller, named as one of four Windsor men on a Detroit party with Metropolitan police, testified Wednesday his bid was approximately $11,000 lower than the next lowest.

Heroic German Doctor Risks Life To Treat Briton

Shanghai, May 26 (AP) — A heroic German doctor risked his life today to treat a wounded Britain — well known foreign casualty in the Battle of Shanghai.

Dr. Ernest Schneider ran and crawled up Peking road, a no-man's land between communist and nationalist lines, to reach the United States Consulate.

The wounded Britton, F. P. Verenberg, crept through a creek — fire in the Concession — after being struck by machine-gun bullets during the fighting for the bridgehead across Soochow Creek.

Earlier, consulate officials said Verenberg, who holds a British passport but comes from the western sector of occupied Berlin, probably would die if medical aid were not available.

Violent Life of Jake Bird Nearing His Final Hour, Cheated Gallows 18 Months

Walla Walla, Wash., May 26 — (AP) — The violent adventures of Jake Bird appeared to be nearing their end here today.

Unless the Court of Appeals at San Francisco grants him a stay, the convicted ax - slayer will die at 4:30 a.m. EDT (tomorrow on a gallows he has cheated for a year and a half.

Behind him, if and when he goes, the Negro leaves an almost incredible story of bloodshed, guile and brazen.

During his imprisonment, officers say the 47-year-old transient has confessed involvement in or knowledge of four slayings. He was sentenced to die in connection with the bludgeon killing of Mrs. Bertha Khadt and her daughter Oct. 31, 1947, in Tacoma, Wash.

During his battle to escape the noose, Bird fought his case twice before the United States Supreme Court, three times before the Washington State Supreme Court, once before a federal district court and a half dozen or more times in State Superior Court of Appeals. He has delayed executions set for Jan. 16, 1948, and Jan. 14, 1949.

Famous Hex

When he received his first death sentence, Bird told Superior Judge E. D. Hodge:

"Wait and see. All of you who had anything to do with this case will die before I do."

This was the famous Bird hex.

Judge Hodge died a month later of a heart attack. Three others died during the next few months: Undersheriff Joe Karpach, Court Clerk Ray Jones and Deputy Sheriff Lyons and Lawyer J. W. Selden, who defended Bird.

Bird said Wednesday, however, that the hex "is a lot of hooey."

Bird mailed his petition to the San Francisco court Tuesday night after he failed to win a stay of execution through a petition — and two hours of argument in his own behalf — in district court here.

Forced He Was Forced to Confess

Bird's plea for clemency is based on his contention that he was forced to confess to the Kinds slaying because of third - degree methods by Tacoma police.

He awoke in the prison cell Wednesday with a yen to talk with all who would listen. He wanted to talk, in particular, about two cases—one of which he claims took place in Iowa 30 years ago and another in Chicago. Warden Tom Smith told Bird to put it on paper and the document would be turned over to the proper officials and the press after the execution.

Warden Smith, said that 800 persons have submitted requests to see Bird hang. Most have been denied.

PILGRIMAGE OF

In ancient time Holy Years were proclaimed every 50 years. Later this was shortened to every 25 years. The Pope, however, can proclaim an extraordinary one at any time he may desire for special reasons. Pius XI proclaimed one in 1933 on the anniversary of the death of Christ. The last ordinary Holy Year before that was in 1925.

The Pontiff summoned eight points to be held in mind by the faithful during the 1950 Holy Year.

Acquire Christian Virtues

He exhorted them to reform their customs and acquire Christian virtues.

Secondly he said: "It is necessary to ask God insistently that the faith due to the divine redeemer and to the church by him, be kept by everyone with inflexible spirit and strong will."

The Pope asked the faithful to pray that the rights of the church be guarded against "conspiracies, hatred and persecution"; that "all those who have not yet attained the light of Catholic truth or err from the right way, and that the haters or deniers of God, illuminated by supernatural light and moved by grace, be led to obey the precepts of the gospel"; that "everywhere, but especially in Palestine, tranquility may return as soon as possible, through a just settlement of the problems"; that "the various social classes, their hatred spent and their disagreements overcome, may unite in justice and fraternal harmony"; that "the multitudes of the needy obtain the wherewithal to live honestly from their labor or receive from the liberality or charity of those better off the necessary and opportune relief."

Finally, the Pontiff called for universal peace.

DOGGED

tinued northward from Hongkong. All last night the Communists kept their big guns pounding against this escape corridor that fringes the Whangpoo River like the way to the Yangtze and the sea.

From the heart of Shanghai, the northern horizon was aflame. The Nationalists blew up oil, gasoline and ammunition dumps.

Inside and outside of Shanghai it was a night of fighting and blasting like none during the seven-week siege of the city.

While the fighting went on, the Communists hastened their entrenchments in the north, west and southern section, which they occupied Friday without struggle. Red soldiers supplemented the civilian police who carried over from old jobs under the Nationalists.

Shanghai's English-language newspapers appeared today without any indication of censorship. They carried news dispatches from the Associated Press and other foreign press associations.

Correspondents filed outgoing reports by censorship. This practice was handled as usual by government radio stations.

One new point made its appearance today. It was the Peoples Daily's first public exhibition in the Chinese language.

POST-WAR IDEA

Bickhamsworth, Hertfordshire, England (CP)—Agents offered a $12,000 ($48,000) house for sale here and said it has "one of the best air-raid shelters in the country." Said the agents: "We suggest it could be used as a table tennis room or garage."

INTEREST IN REFORESTATION

Interest in forest conservation and reforestation is growing across the country, in this district and elsewhere, like the pebble thrown into the pond, the impact of which sends out ever-widening circles of wavelets. So it is with the entire community because of the future forests created but these new forests will help to conserve moisture, raise the water table, prevent surface run-off and flooding and maintain a more constant all-year-round stream flow those areas to the southward through which the streams flow will be improved is supplied to the northerly forested regions.

This subject brings up the matter of the interdependence of people in forested and agricultural lands which like the relationship of forestry to agriculture is too often overlooked. Farm, country and other reforesting and conservation projects are exerting an influence and educating more and more people, especially the young people, to this important fact. Young folks look around them to the slopes and the valleys and they see that there are too few trees to provide for their future economy and welfare, recreation and sport. They want to see these barren portions of farm lands and highlands along the watersheds well treed.

One cannot overestimate the importance of this influence on the younger generation, since it is one of the greatest opportunities for those who are grown up to see that strong reforestation measures are taken. They have had the rather bad example of their forbears, who denuded and burned much of the land and it is only right that the natural heritage of the rising generation, the sons and daughters who will be the future citizens of Ontario, should be properly restored. This is the policy which faces the people of today when interest is developing in this worthwhile and essential cause.

Meanwhile the young people are doing a great deal themselves. School forestry competition sponsored by the Ontario Horticultural Association in co-operation with the Department of Lands and Forests has led to impressive results. Sixty-two elementary and public schools are conducting planting projects in this competition this spring. Five of the projects are on school properties and the others are on private lands near the schools. Here is a practical example of how the future may effectively and inspiring be shaped to achievements which will far exceed their expectation in results. Next fall will see the impressive result of this work and interest when the zone forester and his assistant set out to conduct the judging of these many planted woodlands of the future forests. It is of note that survival of trees in these projects will be a major factor in judging.

A very healthy sign is the spirit of enthusiasm the children are showing. At the same time members of the parent-teachers association, boards of education, school boards, inspectors and teachers are co-operating splendidly co-operating. Every pride the boys and girls are showing is manifested in every way about the care of these plots. In the Bird's Creek plantation, each school has a sign to indicate that a certain plot was planted by the students of their school.

It is for not only the people in the immediate districts to manifest an interest for what is assuredly calculated to benefit every person in every community but also for the urban dwellers to see this impressive movement which is absorbing so much interest of people in the plantation areas and of the boys and girls growing up in these locations on the farms and in the villages. They lend their support and enthusiasm to the good work that is being accomplished to maintain and revive these great national resources for the work is one of the most important undertakings in which citizens young and old can be engaged in helping nature.

"HEAVING IT OUT"

One of the advantages of having Newfoundland as a province of Canada is that it is adding many a descriptive phrase to our vocabulary for Newfoundlanders have a pungent, salty note of vernacular.

As for instance, after listening to one of the election candidates who was orating, a farmer from an outlying settlement observed: "He certainly can heave it out him."

Evidently the Newfoundlander meant this as a compliment. It's just as well that he made clear.

He alone is an accurate observer who can observe minutely without being observed.—Lavater.

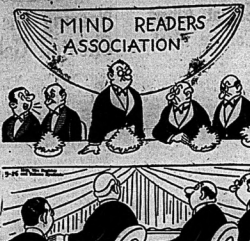
MONEY WASTER

The highest price he always pays;
Buys quantities beyond his means.
He has the most expensive ways.
The rule of thrift he never heeds.



He gives no thought to mounting debts;
Takes money from his foes and friends.
The promises he makes, forgets.
And more and more each year he spends.

For one man's task three men he'll hire;
Lets others do the pay roll stay;
Pays more for rubber, nails and wire
Than any business man would pay.

Why tell this money waster's name
Whose squandering leaves all wallets thin?
All politicians do the same
As soon as they are voted in.

Mr. John Hayes was home from Toronto to spend the holiday.

Miss Irene Baker has returned to Toronto after visiting her parents in this city.

Mr. and Mrs. Amos Moyse of Oshawa spent the weekend here with friends.

Dr. R. M. Ward of this city is visiting the dental convention in Toronto and is stopping at the King Edward Hotel.

Mr. Murray Bonnycastle was home from Toronto to spend the holiday.

Miss Gussie Hill was home from Toronto to spend the holiday.

Miss Bess Jeffery of Toronto, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Jeffery, Victoria Avenue.

Mrs. Kenneth Dyson spent the weekend with her parents at their home on Victoria Avenue.

30 YEARS AGO

May 28th., 1919.

A parking by-law was passed at the last meeting of the city council which prohibits automobiles being left in the centre on Front Street and parts of Campbell Street and Victoria Avenue for a longer period than 30 minutes. The merchants who do a large volume of business with out of town people who come in by motor cars complain are of the opinion that some provision should be made for the parking of cars belonging to persons from out of town. The most convenient place for parking would be the market square and the civic authorities could arrange to have this space set aside for the purpose with a caretaker in charge. During evening is the only time when the congestion of automobiles becomes a serious problem and arrangements could be easily made for the use of the market square for that evening for parking purposes. All the trade which can possibly be attracted to Belleville will result in the general good and out of town buyers, who come here in their motor cars, should be encouraged.

Lieut. Reginald Elliott will leave shortly to reside in England.

Mr. William Leslie has returned home from Toronto where he spent several days on business.

Miss Mae Eustace has returned home from Toronto.

The annual gift of $100.00 from Sir Gilbert Parker to the Belleville Public Library has been received by Col. Ponton.

Roy Bell, formerly of this city, ran third in a four mile half mile race in Montreal on Victoria Day. There were over 100 entries.

50 YEARS AGO

May 28th., 1879.

Bridge Street Methodist Church had a narrow escape from conflagration this afternoon. Shortly before three o'clock lightning struck the north west corner of the tower and followed a course to the south wall. At the eastern entrance to the gallery on the south side was situated the reading desk used in singing and off the lighting apparatus. This machine was smashed to fragments and many of the pieces were thrown across to the north gallery. Here all trace of the electric fluid is lost. The plaster was torn off for a considerable space; some large stones displaced and the pews and boards were splintered. The interior of the building was filled with a blinding light and the smoke was dense, although there was no sign of fire. The damage was considerable. Prof. Hunt, the organist, was practising a pupil at the organ when the flash came. The pupil was stunned, but soon recovered.

Mr. John Johnston, School Inspector for South Hastings is in Madoc today.

The schooner yacht Skylark, owned by Mr. H. Corby, is being put in shape for the season.

Strength for the Day

DR. EARL L. DOUGLASS

Ordeal of Fire

Daniel Defoe has left the world a picture never to be forgotten of the plague which broke out in the City of London in the year 1665. He says that in such numbers that the well people of the city working night and day could scarcely get them buried. It was said that no sound was heard in the street but the rumble of wagons as the burying of the dead went on. The terrible plague attacked old and young, rich and poor alike.

Suddenly the great fire broke out. It seemed as if this was the last extremity of desolation. But what medicine and water and good care could not do to rid the city, which now lay in ashes, did for the disease burned up like tinder. Two great results followed. The plague stopped almost immediately, and a new City of London became one out of the ashes of the old.

It sometimes takes the ordeal of fire to cleanse the life of a man, as the great fire cleansed the life of London. A great fire is an appalling experience, but very often it proves to be a cleanser.

THE PACKSACK

OF GREGORY CLARK

In recent months there has been quite a campaign to promote good will towards truck drivers. As a result there has been a considerable improvement in the public attitude towards what the public relations men describe as "truck operators." There is, however, still remains that, among truck drivers you find good ones and bad ones the same as in all other kinds of drivers.

If you get into a collision with a truck driver, the important thing to remember is that you are up against a professional. Don't waste any time. Get your witnesses as fast as you can.

A lady of my acquaintance, approaching an intersection with a signal light, saw a large transport truck — one of those high-cabbed ones — stopped at the intersection awaiting the change of lights to make a left-hand turn. It was stopped, actually, for her; because there was no car in front of her. As the lights in the intersection, the yellow light came on. She proceeded across, properly.

Just as she passed the transport truck, it started. It barged in her left rear fender. It is as plain as day that the truck driver let her, instead of watching, start was craning out to look to his right, so as to get the jump on the new crossing traffic when the lights changed from red to green. He didn't give the lady proper clearance before he tramped on the gas.

But did he admit it? Ah, no. He properly accused the lady of having crossed into a red light. Apparently he was one of those truck drivers aiming at driver of his record. The lady gave him her name, address and license number, the truck driver gave only his name, saying he did not know the truck license number, and that the lady would have to go and find out. The truck driver was down the block copying down the truck number of the driver of the next private car. professional. There are all kinds.

Letters to the Editor

Extends Good Wishes To Old Friends

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

To many of us who have a warm spot in our hearts for Belleville, it is always a pleasure to drop a kind word now and then on account of some of the events of all times. It may relate to the passing of an old friend, whose memory should be kept green, to the joy at hearing of the recovery of someone who has been seriously ill, and here, I refer to your well known citizen, and my fellow esteemed friend P. Smith and everyone who knows Everett is really thrilled to see him around and about again.

And so, at this particular time I should like to add a friendly thought, and sincere wish to the other "Belleville Old Boy" in the person of Edward Brown, of Dufferin Avenue, who celebrated his birthday on May 30th.

As a constant visitor for over forty years, I have seen Eddie grow up from a very small boy, who used to run errands for the garden gate, to manhood, and have ever been proud to be known by him, for he is a credit to the city of his birth.

And to say those of us who appreciate talent in any form, and whenever Eddie Brown's name is mentioned, for God gave him a voice, and his singing, especially in Church work, has charmed and enjoyed many years and in many places.

So to Edward Brown, citizen of Belleville, may you live long, and may you know that he who is Ruler over all, give you a large measure of health, that your voice may bring enjoyment to those who have the pleasure of entertained it.

Your old friend in Montreal,
E. C. Eady.

Wants Larger Type In Maps of City

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer.

I have just received a map of the streets of the City of Belleville. The old map issued in the year 1914 was really a guide to strangers and many tourists entering your city, from time to time at the Chamber.

Commerce would need a powerful magnifying glass to use the map, plus patience to read the names of streets. Please have the next maps printed in larger type.

A Stranger but a lover of your beautiful city.

Thinks Circumstances Partly to Blame For Britain's Troubles

Editor,
Ontario Intelligencer

I read with interest the letter Mr. Malcolm Robb published in the Ontario Intelligencer of May 20th, but I think in some respects at least it is misleading and unfair to treat Britain. In the first I would point out that I have little or no sympathy for the Socialists and their principles and their policies and restrictions played a considerable part in forming my decision to emigrate to Canada. All the same, I don't think the British Labour Government is entirely responsible for the position in which Britain finds herself at present and the financial policy of Sir Stafford Cripps, Chancellor of the Exchequer, often finds more support from the Conservative opposition than from his own Labour back benchers. In more detail, the Snowden's pound Sterling built, the multi-billion's pound war debt, the Dawes and Young plans, the Labor back benchers. Ancient Sodom Is Reoccupied

RALPH McGILL
(In Atlanta Constitution)

Potash, soon will be moving from the plant at Sodom, at the southern end of the Dead Sea, 1,302 feet below sea level, the lowest body of water in the world. It is somehow fitting that Sodom, destroyed for its iniquities, should be a great potash producing center.

The scientists who died in the consuming fire, mingled with the ashes to form a great deposit of chemical materials, to which the constantly evaporating sea adds its many salts.

When the war came to Israel the plant was cut off and became a fortress. The salt caves also were employed as defensive storehouses and bombproof shelters.

New caves were dug into the salt hills. This caused me to wonder if, perchance, one of these hills yet to be found, have always had a sympathy for her and sort of contempt for Lot. He often used to belittle his daughter when he was in trouble and it has always seemed to me that he leaned forward as a man to respect. His whole family, save for Mrs. Lot, is regarded as a sort of Judas family of Genesis, and I have long entertained a fine regard for Mrs. Lot was the best of them all, and looked back on my purpose. At any rate, she became a pillar of salt, and is remembered as something useful. That is more than one can say for Lot and his daughters.

Sodom is believed to have been destroyed by burning asphalt. The Scriptures say fire and brimstone. It is the presence of asphalt at the Southern end of the Dead Sea, which locates the site of Sodom, although there is argument about it.

One of the things which convinced almost everyone who went to see what was happening in Palestine, was the industrial development of the Dead Sea. Neglected since the destruction of Sodom, the Jews had taken the potash and minerals, developed them there and built it into an important one. Potash, used for fertilizer in mine and explosives in war, is there in great supply.

The plant at Sodom, on the North end of the sea, was isolated for six months when captured by the Arabs. It was badly damaged, but it is expected to be back to production almost at once. It produces salt, potash and other valuable chemicals.

When capture was near the workers and their families fled southward to Sodom. The road to Jerusalem was cut and there was no other means of escape. Jordan was in their favor. To attack the Arabs had to approach across three miles of salt flats and were open to mortar, artillery and small arms fire. The people of Sodom were supplied by an Israel air lift and by occasional motor convoys which fought their way through.

Deep in the desert the plants obtain water on a commercial scale from the Arab town of Asfi. It was piped into the plants. This supply may be resumed now that Israel and Trans-Jordan have signed a truce, but even before war came the Israeli people were planning to bring water in from their own sources. The plan of development, which called the Negev is a daring but practical one.

Girl Correspondent Becomes Year-round Santa to Boys, Girls of War-Ravaged Land

Somerset, Penn., May 26 (CP) —A German child asked for a piece of chalk—and Peggy Reiley started her combined career as a foreign correspondent for a small-town newspaper and year-round Santa Claus.

During the war Peggy, attractive, 39-year-old blonde, served with the Red Cross. In Germany she became interested in the plight of children in the war-ravaged country.

Child's Modest Request

One day, as Christmas approached, she asked a little girl what she would like as a present. The child thought it over, then answered her wistful decision.

"A chalk stick."

Peggy says she then realized children in a wartime world had other things to decided to do something about it. That was in 1946.

When she returned to her job as women's editor—her father the newspaper, the Somerset American, has a circulation of about 3,000, she immediately began planning for a return to Europe.

Enlisting the aid of the 4-H Club—similar to the Junior Farmers Clubs in Canada—she started collecting old dolls. The club members spent many evenings fashioning wardrobes for the dolls. Other groups contributed toys and candies.

With the money she bought clothing—and let Somerset children wear it. For a couple of hours so it could be shipped duty free as "used clothing."

Then Peggy received permission from the United States army to enter the American zone of Germany as special correspondent for the Somerset American. Laden with boxes and bundles she arrived in Germany.

She visited hospitals, homes, youth centres, dispensing dolls and clothing. Often the German Youth Association would suggest a town where there were needy children. She would ship a couple of boxes to the town, then pack a suitcase and hop off to supervise distribution of the gifts.

Christmas is over.

At Christmas, Peggy gave a party in Frankfurt, her headquarters, for 100 children ranging in age from one to 15. In a way it was a children's party—there was no noise.

"These kids were so excited they didn't make any noise," Peggy recalls. "There was just that look of ecstasy as they ate the ice cream and candies and received their presents."

Assault Charge Laid After Man's Death

Kitchener, May 25 (CP)—Leslie Dolson, 24, is scheduled to appear in court tomorrow on a charge of assault occasioning bodily harm in connection with the death Monday of Sylvester Dolhalmps, 60, in a sidewalk scuffle.

The charge against Dolson, a former Sudbury man who lives in Waterloo Township, but outside the Kitchener city limits, was laid Tuesday. He was remanded without bail until today.

Police Chief Hilbert Schedlowski, of Waterloo Township, said an autopsy report indicated that Dolhalmps's death was due primarily to a heart condition, with violence as a contributing factor. He said the man had been treated for the heart condition as recently as last December.

Witnesses said Dolhalmps collapsed and died after a scuffle with a man outside an apartment house in Waterloo township. It was thought at first that he had been choked.

Dolhalmps slumped to a grassy boulevard and died at the feet of his daughter, Mrs. Mary Kish, who said that he made his home while an attempt was made to revive him by artificial respiration. Mrs. Patten said she quarrelled a few days ago with Mrs. Elsie Volz, an sister of the accused man. She said Dolshane, a packinghouse worker who has no conviction in St. Catharines, returned to waterloo township "to try to straighten things out."

Police questioned 10 witnesses, most of them neighbors of Dolhalme and Dolson.

FRANKFORD

Major Ketcheson Addresses Club

Frankford Lions Club held their bi-monthly meeting in the community-memorial hall Wednesday evening last. The club was greatly honored by the presence of the distinguished representative of the Carling Conservation Club, Major Ketcheson. Major Ketcheson spoke briefly on the conservation of soil, and natural resources in Ontario. Lion Lou Loucks thanked Major Ketcheson for his inspiring talk.

Following the meeting, members retired to the main auditorium, where Major Ketcheson showed three Carling productions, filmed in technicolor. These proved very entertaining and educational. Major Ketcheson gave a brief talk before presenting the pictures, on conservation of game and fisheries.

Couple on Motorcycle Hurled 60 Feet By Impact With Car

Woodbridge, May 26. (CP)—Seriously injured when their motorcycle collided with a car one mile west of here on Tuesday, Ralph Brown, 23, and Marion Allen, 18, of Toronto, lay beside the road for several minutes for one-hour-and-a-half before being moved to hospital. Woodbridge is 12 miles northwest of Toronto.

Brown suffered a fractured hip and facial injuries and Miss Allen suffered a fractured left leg.

The couple was hurled 60 feet from the road with the car driven by Clarence Helman, 45, of Niagara Falls, Ont. Mrs. Helman, who was riding in the car, suffered a bruised leg.

THE BITER BIT

Cardiff, Wales (CP) — Kitty, a terrier, walked into a fox's lair and dashed out with the cat detecting on to her nose. Hard behind her came vixen and four cubs. The foxhunt in reverse ended when David Price and family beat off the foxes.

STIRLING

STIRLING W.I.

Stirling.—Mrs. M. Megginson was hostess for the May meeting of Stirling Women's Institute, on Thursday. The President, Mrs. H. Cooke, presided over the meeting, and business. Mrs. Wm. Bates, Mrs. Fred Bates of Bristol, England, Abbott's Lefaig, Lighting Corp. Ltd., have received the parcels of food from Stirling W.I. members.

It was decided to send fruit boxes to Mr. W. Grover, sad to Mr. C. Cordaniser, who are ill. The secretary-treasurer gave a report of the Dominion Board for year, showing a substantial bank balance on hand. The District Annual will be held on June 13th in the Stirling Community Hall. The Roll Call was answered with a verse on "Mother" as this was a mother and grandmothers' meeting.

The election of officers took place and all were re-elected for another year with the exception of the second vice president, with Mrs. W. Lake being chosen for this office. Mrs. H. Rodgers, convener, took charge of the program. Mrs. Lake gave a reading "The Wrong Train". Mrs. Louis Megginson sang a solo and was followed by a reading by Mrs. Gordon Bird. A vote of thanks to mothers, was given by Mrs. Bird.

The hostess and committee, served refreshments and a social hour was very much enjoyed. Mrs. Megginson was presented a hearty vote of thanks.

Key Club Holds Installation

On Monday evening approximately 75 Key Clubers, their parents and friends attended the third annual Key Club installation night. The evening began with a supper at the Kiwanis Centre. During the supper each lady present was presented with a rose by the Key Clubers.

Following the supper the retiring officers of the club were introduced. They were Pres, Harry Cook; Vice-Pres, Bruce Doolittle; Sec., Don Rose; Treas., Kevin Doyle and Directors, Bob Barber, Albert Shoemaker, Bernard Hart and Brock Stackhouse.

Mr. G. Currie principal of the Belleville Collegiate expressed his delight in the work that the boys had been doing in the school. He said that Key Club was a fine organization, and that he would do everything he could to help the boys.

Pin Presented

Past President of the Belleville Kiwanis Club, Ted Schwab, presented Harry Cook with a Key Club past president's pin. In accepting the pin Harry stated that he would always remember the fun that he had had while serving the president of the club. In closing he paid tribute to the advisor of the club Charles Carder by presenting him with a gift on behalf of the members.

Members of the Kiwanis Club then installed the new Key Club executive. President Bruce Rose was installed by Mr. N. Edwards; Vice President Kevin Doyle was installed by Mr. Kinsler; Secretary L. Marcus installed by Mr. M. Vanner; Treasurer Albert Shoemaker was installed by the staff advisor of the Key Club, Mr. J. Musgrove; the directors are: Larry Buskard, John Hagerman, Donald Liddle and Bernard Mclan.

On taking over the meeting Don Rose presented Harry Croil with a gift on behalf of the boys.

The guest speaker for the evening was Major Graham of the Salvation Army. Major Graham spoke on "Problems Confronting Us Each Day." The speaker introduced Mr. Ivy Howard Hart and was thanked by Roy McMillan.

The meeting was then adjourned and a dance was held. At the dance the Key Club played host to the Belleville Hi-Y Club.

DRAUGHTS FOR WARMTH

Polstead, Suffolk, England (CP) Tenants of new council houses sit with doors open if they want to keep warm. Complaining to the local council that their fires would not burn properly, the tenants were told that when the doors and windows were closed the houses were too draught-proof.

WEDDINGS

KENNEDY—MATTHEWS

Amid a setting of Spring flowers in St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, on May 10, at 3 o'clock, Annie Marguerite, youngest daughter of Mr. Roy Matthews, Moira Street West, Belleville, was united in marriage to William Joseph Kennedy, son of Mrs. John Beale, and the late William Kennedy, Toronto. The Venerable Archdeacon Arthur Hutchinson officiated. Mr. Ernest Wheatley at the organ.

The bride was given in marriage by her father and wore a suede brocaded satin gown with fitted bodice, sweetheart head dress embroidered with seed pearls. Her only ornament was a triple strand of pearls, the gift of the groom. She carried a spray bouquet of red roses.

Miss Doris Matthews, sister of the bride, was maid of honor, and was gowned in gore taffeta, with matching headdress, and Miss Dorothy Matthews, bridesmaid, was similarly gowned in blue taffeta. They carried nosegays of red roses, contrasting shades.

The best man was Mr. Carson Wiseman, brother-in-law of the groom, the ushers were Mr. Clifford Matthews, brother of the bride, James Matthews, brothers of the bride.

After a reception, held at the Acres Inn, the couple left on a motor trip to the United States.

On their return Mr. and Mrs. Kennedy will reside in Belleville.

Rita Hayworth, Prince Aly Khan To Wed Friday

Cannes, France, May 28 (AP).—The wedding movie star Rita Hayworth and Prince Aly Khan will be off on schedule Friday—thanks to Communist Mayor Paul Denigou's disregard for official red tape.

A delay in the ceremony was feared because the Prince didn't want to go through with formalities normally required for French marriages, but frowned on having a notice of intention to marry posted for 10 days on the city hall door of the village of Vallauris. He also didn't want to wait for a notice of intention abroad.

Mayor Denigou of Vallauris decided he could himself sound official word that those formalities had been waived. In fact, they have been waived, but official word has not filtered down through government channels.

The Mayor ordered a hurry-up wedding Job of the marriage chamber in the city hall. And he's making a quick canvas of the community to find dealers willing to lend some furnishings to brighten up the room.

Dermatitis of Hands May be Caused By Cleansing Agents

London, Ont., May 26. (CP)—In many factory trades exposure to get dermatitis of the hands through contact with cleansing agents as cleaning compounds, soaps, bleaches and waxes, Dr. G. S. Williamson of Ottawa said before the Ontario Medical Association here today.

Such skin inflammation caused by fungi infections "is very uncommon". There is wide variance in skin sensitivity, and that is why everyone does not develop dermatitis by contacting the same irritant.

The 69th annual convention of the O.M.A. closes today. More than 800 doctors have attended the sessions.

In the panel discussion on common skin conditions Dr. N. M. Wrong of Toronto, said he believed that the increase in hand dermatitis of housewives is greatest among young women who worked in factories during the war, and then after marriage found they didn't want a lot of the time.

The best treatment, he said, is to attack the source and to protect the skin from housewife's hands. Even top grade rubber gloves often are the cause of rubber dermatitis.

'Blossom Tea' Held by Energetic Club of Holloway St. Church

Spring time, with all its vernal freshness and fragrance, bloom in the tables, decorating the social rooms of Holloway Street United Church, on Wednesday afternoon, when the Energetic Club held their "Blossom Tea," the event attracting mingled lilacs and apple blossoms filled the air, as the door, bearing the theme of the afternoon, greeted with purple lilac petals. was opened to the guests' entrance. Everywhere the eye turned, lilacs and apple blossoms met the delicate lily-of-the-valley. Tall vases of white and purple lilacs graced every window ledge, while on the platform were more basketfuls of lilacs and apple blossoms, and here and there about the room, dainty tall pedestals, each bearing its basket of fragrant blooms.

In the centre of the room were the tables, each seating four, each with its lace-edged cloth, centred with a small silver holder containing tiny sprays of white lily-of-the-valley, and purple lilac, and each place marked by a silver card, engraved every window ledge, while on the platform were more basketfuls of lilacs and apple blossoms, and here and there about the room, dainty tall pedestals, each bearing its basket of fragrant blooms.

Mrs. R. Adams Mrs. A. McMillan, Mrs. N. Meldrum, Mrs. H. Hughes, Mrs. B. Gander, Mrs. F. Wilson and Mrs. L. Dougherty, those who replenished from time to time were, Mrs. G. Ackerman, Mrs. G. Oram, Mrs. G. Wager, and Mrs. T. Riley, and those who were in the kitchen were, Mrs. J. Taylor, Mrs. L. Buck, Mrs. D. McIver, and Mrs. C. Bell. Mrs. C. Brethour, Mrs. R. Dryden, and Mrs. R. A. Fraser.

The treasurers for the afternoon were Mrs. D. White, and Mrs. H. Bonter and the soloists, who rendered delightful numbers lovely by their charming renditions were Mrs. A. Daniel, Mrs. J. Scriven, Mrs. G. Ackerman, with their accompanists Mrs. Ketcheson and Mrs. C. Bird.

Much appreciation is extended to the convener of the blossom tea, Mrs. D. T. Fraser, and to her committee, Mrs. R. A. Wyatt, Mrs. J. Grills, Mrs. W. Vanderwater, Mrs. L. Grestrix, and to each and all who helped in making it such a thing of beauty, and an outstanding success, as well.

STIRLING

Bride-to-be Honored by Kitchen Shower

Stirling—Last Wednesday evening about 25 girls, friends of Miss Lorna Blanchard, gathered at her home in honor of her coming marriage, and presented her with a red and white kitchen shower.

The room was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers and bows and a large pink and white bell in the centre of the room.

The evening was spent in community singing, contests, piano and vocal selections.

While Lorna was entertaining at the piano a beautiful table filled with red and white kitchen gifts was carried in by two of the girls and the guests were called to order. Lorna was given the seat of honor, while Bill Scott read an appropriate address and Lorna was asked to open the gifts that were on the table.

Lorna graciously thanked her friends, remarking that she appreciated the words to express her heartfelt appreciation for the lovely gifts, and invited all present to a social time in the basement.

The evening was brought to a close with dainty refreshments which were enjoyed by all.

STIRLING

Miscellaneous Shower Given Bride-Elect

Stirling—Last Thursday evening Mrs. J. Whitehead entertained some 25 friends at a miscellaneous shower in honor of Mrs. Wm. Morton.

The evening was spent in games after which the bride was presented with numerous gifts.

Mrs. Morton voiced her sincere thanks and appreciation to her friends for their lovely gifts after which refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by her sister, Mrs. Fred Rutherford, of Campbellford.

W.I. Completes Most Successful Year of Branch

The president of Phillipston-Zion Women's Institute, Mrs. Delbert Howe, and the 44 members have just completed one of the most successful years in the history of this branch. The final meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Clifford Ketcheson with an attendance of 38 ladies, and several children.

The secretary, Mrs. Percy Ray, reported that $837.73 had been raised during the year. The recipe books and euchre parties as well as the birthday box, and group system have contributed largely toward this achievement.

Miss Beasie Sills was appointed as convener of Junior Institute activities, and Mrs. Billa Ketcheson as convener of resolutions. Twenty-five dollars was donated to the "Save the Children Fund." The program committee will meet in Thursday, May 29, at the home of Mrs. Simmons, and the June meeting will be held on Thursday, June 5, with Mrs. Ray.

After the business period, the new president, Mrs. Murney Simmons was asked to preside. Mrs. Simmons chose as her theme, "Mother's Prayer," and a reading pertaining to Mother's Day was given by Mrs. Billa Ketcheson.

The guest speaker of the afternoon was Mr. W. J. Musgrove, vocational guidance teacher of Bloomfield, Prince Edward, who spoke on the timely subject "Juvenile Delinquency," bringing the following thought- provoking facts to the attention:

What Standards?

"We should not be shocked by the juvenile delinquents, but at the standards which we, as adults, have today. The youth of every past generation have not only measured up, but exceeded in complying with the standard set for them. The home, the church and the school, these three agencies are responsible for these standards and must do their best in their efforts of setting them, observing them and policing them. There is room for improvement and the law is constantly alternating either for better or worse.

No Fixed Pattern

"We are responsible. Today we find there is no definite, fixed pattern for behavior, either for parents, or for children. Our normal life is wobbly, and we wonder "What is normal behavior?" Children today are not farther from God than their fathers, but other generations have been. Parents have always worried wondering for it, since they see on every hand people apparently living in opposition to God. They have no sense of pride in private ownership, and pay little heed to the call of dignity. For these three reasons they are misguided by our present day standards.

"No one has ever proven that there is such a person as a born criminal," said the speaker. Our children are learning from association and as a result of environment. It is our responsibility Home and School organizations are needed with a participation with the church, in which there are free discussions of the very important subject of not only child, but adult "unrest."

Afternoon tea was served by Mrs. Ketcheson and her assistants.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Eye Shadows Add to Glamour

Women who have used lipsticks for years and years still find them exciting. Other beauty fads have come and gone, but the crimson lip pencil remains a fast friend. What it does to boost morale only a woman knows; men could never understand such a cosmetic miracle. The world accepts ruby lips, the idea of which a century never produced, and why not, if they make the elderly happy, make them feel younger?

If one wants an even greater, good-looks thrill, one should experiment with eye shadows, though they're cosmetic dynamite. A bit too much, and the game is up. They call for artful manipulation. You can't monkey with them. You have to select the right color, know just how much you can use.

The Lipstick remains a fast friend

This step may cause considerable commotion in the family circle. A* assures that it is most likely to tell the little woman to go wash her face. Of course, no man should talk like that, but some of them have pet peeves and express them. The maddest make-up is all right on somebody else's wife. After all, a woman must live her own life. The men had their turn the bob set the world on its ear. They growled about red nail polish; some of them still do, the old dodos. But the beauty parade marches on.

The reason why many women have spent money for shadows, then never have worn them, is because they had difficulty in applying them so that the effect was flattering. The thing to do is to seek professional instructions. Any facial operator will give a customer a lesson in this form of decoration.

The skin surface must be conditioned. There are eye creams compounded for the purpose. Only the lightest film is necessary. It is a sort of fixative for the pigment.

Those smarties who have turned the trick get charming effects, carry a lovely, mysterious look. They find it convenient to use a magnifying mirror placed in a strong light. These are the days when artifice does not shout its presence.

Shadows come in many colors —various shades of blue to match all shades of blue eyes, browns and bronzes and golden tints for those who like them. There are faint greens that make pretty redheads alluring.

Blue have long been the favorites for blondes, brunettes and the betwixt-and-betweens. For the white-haired woman with delicate fair skin, light mauve is adorable.

When applying, start along the line of the eyelashes, work upward, do a fade-away. Never let the pigment extend beyond the far end of the eyebrow.

ADVICE to the LOVELORN

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Mother Objected to his Marriage at 16

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am 16 and have been going with a girl five months. About a month and a half ago I asked her to marry me, but my mother objected. So I thought it over and called the marriage off, but I still see this girl and go down to her house pretty often.

I have promised her never to go with another girl, for I love her too much, and she has told me that she loves me.

Should I keep seeing her and being true to her, or should I go out with other girls? I know you always say not to think about love so young, but I can't help it.

A.R.C.

Dear A.R.C.:

I realize that if your mother had given her consent, instead of objecting to your marriage, your state would permit you to be married at 16. But I think it is far wiser that you have given up the whole plan. Your recollection of what I have said on various occasions on the subject of teen agers being in love is entirely correct. I feel that from many points of view it is much more sensible for boys and girls so young to be entirely free to have many friends and be interested in many different kinds of activities before they assume any such serious responsibilities as those that go with marriage.

If you want to see this girl occasionally, I see no reason why you should not do so. But I advise you not to consider yourself committed to her and to go out with other girls too for a long time yet.

Says she doesn't give him the "right kind of fun."

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in love with this fellow and we go out once in a while.

One night I asked him why he didn't ask me to go steady, and this was his reply: "There are some things that make a girl popular. One is looks, another is a pleasing personality, but you lack the third thing and unless you change, I'll never go steady with you." What he meant by that was that when he takes a girl out he kisses her and has fun, but he said that with me he doesn't have the right kind of fun. We fool and kid each other but that's as far as it goes.

Should I change to his way or stay the way I am?

Unhappy

Dear Unhappy:

Don't think for a minute of changing! You are right and this boy is wrong, and some day you are going to be quite sure of it.

Just remember no boy really thinks very much of a girl who allows him to take liberties with her. Many of them will try to make you believe that it is the thing to do but don't listen to them. You may be a very sorry girl if you do.

Sooner or later, when a really nice boy comes along, who treats you with decency and respect, you will be glad that you held on to your standards.

Fashion Flashes

Very much preferred are the delicate blonde ones this season, some women working out a head-to-toe blonde color scheme. As a nice blonde touch with black, brown or navy, shoes and handbag of blonde calf get a good vote. Handsome is an all-over shirred dress of deep blonde chiffon worn with deep amber costume jewellery.

It's wonderful to find such a variety of easy-to-wear, ever-so-smart shirtwaist dresses. Paper-thin gray taffeta with white polka dots makes a handsome dress with shirtwaist bodice, medium length sleeves and tapering shawl collar. The skirt is full and has hip pockets with extended flaps.

Biggest news in the blouse world is the increasing use of nylon in various weaves. Some nylon blouses have everything of nylon—fabric, bindings, down to the label. A good idea is a sleeveless blouse and cardigan of nylon jersey. The blouse has double fabric at the rounded neck and cap sleeves. The cardigan, with nylon grosgrain binding is worn tucked in the skirt, with darts to shape the waistline.

A new twist on the polka dot theme is a frock of navy chiffon worn over a white polka dotted navy crepe slip. The chiffon top is cut on soft shirtwaist lines, with groups of tucks, wide at the neckline and narrowing on the skirt.

The big joke about summer mink doesn't seem so funny now that mink has smarked itself into the spring fur program. Even on a warm day one sees women wearing handsome stoles and jackets of mink in various tones that range from deep inky almost black brown to almost white. A handsome jacket of light mink, cut on loose lines, has a rolled cardigan neckline, rounded front panels and an ample, four-ripple back.

Won't be long now before the beaches are thronged again and you'll see plenty of printed jersey stoles, shawls and skirts, for wear over swim suits.

How to answer a formal wedding invitation

A formal invitation to this church ceremony does not require an answer, unless — of course for some special reason, a reply is requested).

But when you receive a formal invitation to the wedding reception or wedding breakfast, you must write a formal answer. (You must also answer a formal invitation to a house wedding or a wedding in a hotel or hall or club.)

An invitation should be answered "in kind" therefore to a formal invitation, you should send a formal reply.

A formal invitation is worded in the third person, therefore your answer must be worded in the third person.

Write your acceptance or regret on the first page of double-sheet writing paper of good quality. You may use either letter-size or note size . . . plain or with a monogram or address . . . preferably white.

Your answer, although written by hand, should be spaced similar to the form of the engraved invitation.

The writing should be in the centre of the page, with fairly even margins on all sides.

To accept the invitation you write:

Mr. and Mrs. John Adams accept with pleasure

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson's kind invitation for Tuesday, the seventh of June at five o'clock.

To regret the invitation you write:

Mr. and Mrs. John Adams regret that they are unable to accept

Mr. and Mrs. Robinson's kind invitation for Tuesday, the seventh of June (Very easy, isn't it . . . to write 6 simple lines for your acceptance and 5 simple lines for your regret.).

When you accept the wedding invitation, specify the hour as well as the day and date. By separating the hour, the possibility of a mistake or misunderstanding may be prevented. A regret requires the repetition of the date only . . . therefore there is no need to repeat the hour.

Write your answer promptly. And address it to the person or persons in whose name the invitation is issued . . . usually the bride's parents. Use no abbreviation, please, except "Mr." and "Mrs." Correct form for the envelope.

Says Housewives Hold Peace Key

Vancouver, May 25. (CP)— Mrs. Kate Aitken, newspaper columnist and world traveller, believes that ordinary housewives could abolish the threat of war.

Summing up her experience, Mrs. Aitken said in an interview here that an interchange of views among housewives "is what the world needs."

"In the past international meetings of women have been between the professional and club woman, whose social tends to the academic. Ordinary housewives have not had the opportunities of contact or of exchanging viewpoints.

"It's the ordinary women—the mothers—could really get together and talk things over and solve difficulties the threat of war would vanish."

Feminine opinion in the countries she visited was that the United Nations organization was too cumbersome and could not work out in the long run.

Mrs. Aitken covered 25,000 miles by air, visiting Japan, China, Siam, India, Egypt, Palestine, Germany, England and other countries.

In India and Pakistan she voiced a distributed schoolmarm but was somewhat edged by highly conscientious civil servants who also found a closeness of feeling with the Commonwealth.

German women, traditionally sentimental and romantic, are now devoting time, thought and energy to politics. Soon they will hold explanatory talks with a group of 100 German women on how to avoid war, Mrs. Aitken expects to be the only non-European present.

...OGER THE LODGER

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

Dithering and dodd...ing I attempted to keep pace while she ...ked me questions. She said, "Mother's friend . . ." so I interrupted her to say, "Yes, yes, go on." Then she added, "Mother's friend . . ."

Claudia didn't have to wait much breath taking me how she and Mickey, he was "plot" to be bonded' group—and then transferred here and could find only an unheated, barrel-cabin to live in, without modern plumbing.

I extinguished everything but one to show her the most room which still contained my double bed but which I was now glad—nay, eager, — to give up to her and Mickey. Nonetheless, I promised them all the clean linen they wanted, the use of the whole house; my spike heels, my fur coat, my electric curler cover, a bedside radio, $2000, and the privilege of Hedley's pet mouse in and stay.

Mickey came that evening to look us over. He was as fine-looking as Claudia was fair, as gangling as she was svelte, as faded and wiry haired as she was silky and glowing, and as quiet and unpretentious as she was gabby. Goodness, I wondered

By Elizabeth R. Roberts

It was in disillusionment and bitterness of spirit that I left the washing Monday, and when the back door bell rang, I didn't rush up to answer it, but stood at the foot of the stairs and called out in a short voice, "Who is it?"

"Oh, sweet, gentle voice replied, "Are you Mrs. Roberts?" It was plain that she considered there might be a mistake about that, and called out more pleasantly that I was.

"I want to talk to you," the angelic voice went on. "I rang the front door chimes but no one answered. I knew you were home so could hear you."

"Anything," I said bluntly, determined not to encourage this Lorelei. "If you care to wait, while I carry up the next basket of clothes, I'll see you."

I'd be glad to," she chirruped, as I took up my time, nothing with grim satisfaction that I was dressed like a Fairy (I have a fiction in the subject of not being able to work in a decent, clean dress) and that my appearance alone would discourage any aspirant for a room.

Eventually the clothes basket was filled and I trudged up the basement stairs with it.

In a flash the back screen door opened and a young creature relieved me of the heavy basket carried it out-of-doors to the clothes reel, and began at once to shake out the washing and pin it to the line. She stood there slattering dress and shabby shoes and lifted the ground with each open and swallow motion for this girl was young and beautiful, with it made a young creature clear skin, and large gray-green eyes, full mouth that had a jolly expression, white teeth as even as beads, regular features, and a perfect figure. She was also smartly dressed. More than that, she had a personality which reached out and shook me by the hand—and that was the size of my foot. I was experiencing love at first sight. I was dippy over that girl.

Dithering and doddering, I attempted to keep pace while she hung up the laundry. When she said, "I'm terribly tired," I at last interrupted her to say, "Yes, yes, I'm sure." I wanted to know her flowers.

Claudia didn't have to waste words with me. She considered I knew and Mickey—he was a pilot in a commercial company—had been transferred here and could find only an unheated tourist cabin to live in, without modern plumbing.

I sighsumphed upstairs top speed to show her the great room which still contained my double bed but which I was now glad—nay, eager, to give up to her, and straightaway she was svelte, as faded and wary behind a mask of cheap and glowing, and as quiet and unresponsive as the well-behaved.

"Not a bad go-down," he said to Claudia. Directing her attention to me, he added, "I'm sure you'll be comfortable here, Mrs. Roberts," he added, "It's not the drugstore. If they'd just move in and start—"

Mickey came that evening to look us over. He was as freckled as Claudia was fair, and grinning as

Harry Bridges, Two Top Aides Are Indicted

San Francisco, May 30. (AP)—Harry Bridges, left-wing Labor leader, two of his top aides were indicted Wednesday by a federal grand jury on perjury and conspiracy charges stemming from Bridges' citizenship hearing in 1945.

The United States Immigration Service immediately filed a civil complaint seeking to revoke Bridges' citizenship. The action declared Bridges was a Communist at the time he became a citizen and still is.

Many newsmen observers interpreted the double-barrelled action as signaling the start of a third government attempt in 10 years to deport the 47-year-old, Australian-born leader. He is president of the International Longshoremen's and Warehousemen's Union (C.I.O.).

Indicted on counts were J. R. Robertson, first vice-president of the I.L.W.U., and Henry Schmidt, member of the longshore Coast Labor Relations Committee and former president of Bridges' Local here. Bail for each was set at $5,000.

The Union assailed the indictments as a "political frame-up" by the government and an attempt to put the union out of business.

One count charged the three men conspired against the immigration laws by fraudulently obtaining naturalization for Bridges on Sept. 7, 1945. Another count charged Bridges with perjury in swearing that he was then, or ever had been, a member of the Communist party. The third count charged Schmidt and Robertson with testifying falsely that Bridges had not been a member of the Communist party.

Conviction on the charges carries a possible maximum penalty of seven years in prison and $15,000 fine.

Sheet Steel Seen New Home Builder

By HOWARD W. BLAKESLEE

Ithaca, N.Y., (AP)—Thin steel is a new prospect to reduce the cost of homes.

This new stuff is sheet steel that comes out of rolling mills in mile-long lengths. It is easy to bend and form into box-like shapes that are strong, yet light in weight.

The machine that does this is a steel-sheet press brake. It is as easy as stamping letters from the mail, but the variety of forms is almost endless. The sheets acquire channels, dents, bumps, square-cornered bends.

All this adds up to just one thing—steel that is pliable enough to bend with your hands to form, so into shapes that are rigid and almost unbreakable.

Instead of nails, the builder uses an electric welding torch. He spot welds, and the result is no longer than driving a nail—often less time.

Yet new building projects are described in the Cornell Engineer, a college publication by Professor George Winter, who is making thousands of tests of the new steel techniques.

"Most of us," Winter writes, "still live in hand-made wooden buildings of a type that has not changed, fundamentally for centuries.

"Residential and commercial construction is way behind the general growth and rise of the living standards of the nation."

Deserted Villages

(Windsor Star)

Throughout Ontario there are deserted villages. Some of them are mere wayside corpses; others have one or two buildings as relics of the past. The world, with the coming of the motor car, left many of nearby towns or the route of railways or highways has passed them by.

For instance, Colbeck up in East Luther Township of Dufferin County. Once a thriving cross roads community, not long ago boat what passed as a hotel. Six years ago its general store was burned, and they was so little business it never was replaced. Then the church was closed, its bell sold and shed sold, and now the post office, in operation for more than 70 years, has shut its doors. All that is left is a school.

Some of these villages became surplus to the needs of the community. In the old days, when men walked or drove a team of horses, it was handy to have a village store, nearby, a church, chopping mill, blacksmith shop and, before local option put a lot of the mouth of business, a hotel. The same division doesn't prevail today.

Ontario, of course, still has a large quota of villages and small towns. Where they serve a purpose, they remain. Some merely mark time, offering a pleasant, quiet life for those who inhabit them. Others develop, some slowly by some rapidly, and have ambitions to become cities or larger towns.

Even in the older settlements of the province, this still is a young country. And, even in a young country some of the original villages have reverted to plain country crossroads.

OSKENONTON IS LONDON BOYS' FAVORITE

Little boy's heroes are much the same all over the world. Cowboys and detectives "rate," but Indians have always been in a class all by themselves. Little Geoffrey Edward, eight, stopped Chief Os-Ke-Non-Ton, last chief of the Mohawk nation, and succeeded in getting an autograph. The chief is in London to produce and sing in an authentic Indian version of "Hiawatha," with a cast recruited from his reservation in Ontario. Incidentally, the chief was out for his morning canter along London's Rotten Row.—Central Press Canadian

Color Schemes and Health

That color and color schemes have a definite effect in relation to health or otherwise, on some people, is revealed in an article "Industrial Color" by Darcy S. Catton in Industrial Health monthly publication of the Health League of Canada. Mr. Catton is with the Canadian Paint Varnish and Lacquer Association.

He says the business of applying color to industrial plants is no longer a haphazard, hit-or-miss process but is worked out on a scientific basis with established principles and formulae. Industry which once applied color in free and easy manner because management or staff members were particularly fond of certain colors, is now relying upon science to select the right colors for the specific job.

Science has documented the problem to the point where there can be no question that color is a vital factor in the health, welfare and performance of the industrial worker. The reaction to color is usually a subconscious one and people have been found who are allergic to colors, that is in the presence of color to which they are peculiarly sensitive, they become violently ill.

The writer instances the experiences of girl workers which have found that air-sickness is induced by a predominance of browns and yellows in the plane interiors. This condition can be overcome by the use of greens and blues.

Mr. Catton tells of an 80 per cent increase in output being achieved by one manufacturer merely by changing the color of the assembly tables on which girl workers assembled tiny, hard-to-see parts. In another case substitution of green shipping boxes for black brought about satisfactory results in the shipping department of one firm. To the worker, the green boxes seemed lighter and caused less muscle strain and less fatigue—although they weighed as much as the original black ones.

Old Country Letter:

Taxation Strikes at Core Of Aristocratic Britain

By DON GILBERT
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, May 25 (CP)—The tax collector takes his cut out of every British purse but it's the owners of Britain's stately mansions they are calling "the new poor."

Not that the difficulty of maintaining large country estates, country places is a new story. In the years between, the years many slipped from control of ancient family dynasties.

But in these days of share-the-wealth Socialism, taxation strikes at the very core of aristocratic Britain.

Heads of once-wealthy, land-owning families like the Earl of Derby, Marquess of Salisbury, Duke of Sutherland and Marquess of Bath, now frankly admit they have to find new way of raising cash. The Lords of Derby once were called the uncrowned Kings of Lancashire. Today's holder of the 15th-century Earldom now inherits only three half crowns than in Lancaster's mythical crown.

Guided Tours

Like many other peers, Lord Derby has opened his home to the public gaze. Guided by nylon ropes, sightseers pied through the great halls and crowns of Knowsley Hall, the family's Lancashire seat.

Admission charge is a half crown (50 cents).

Silver pieces soon add up and there is real economy in raising money this way. The exchequer can't get at it.

And No Taxes

The treasury ruling is that these visits to the historic houses of Britain are "educational." Thus there is no entertainment tax. And there isn't any income tax either because the money is ploughed back into the upkeep of the house and grounds.

It takes ingenuity, and sometimes hard work, to hang on to a fortune in Britain. Even if a family chieftain can get by property and income taxes, the inheritance tax will hit the estate hard when he dies.

One unusual case of taxation and double jeopardy which recently came to light concerned the late Lord Tredegar whose family had long held large estates in Wales.

Escaping Death Duties

Being childless, Lord Tredegar's heir was his 75-year-old uncle, a man crippled with arthritis who readily conceded he had not long to live.

The problem was this: Inheritance taxes would have to be paid twice within a short period—once when Lord Tredegar died then again on the death of his ailing uncle. And that, said a family spokesman, would wipe out the whole estate.

Lord Tredegar got around it by transferring the estates to this cousin, John Morgan, son of the uncle who would have inherited the title.

So when the peer died last April 26, the title went to the uncle but the money and properties were already in the hands of the second in succession.

STRANDED

Swept by a gale on to a sandbar at Pelee Island, Ont., the S.S. Pelee, shown here, listed so badly that four passengers had to be removed. Two women and a child were among the passengers who were rowed to safety by crew members before dawn. U.S. and Canadian tugs were dispatched to pull the ship free of the sandbar. —Central Press Canadian.

Watch Helplessly As Home Burns

Kirkland Lake, May 25 (CP)—Fern Vellette, his wife and their two young daughters watched helplessly Tuesday as their one story home on the city outskirts burned to the ground. The Vellettes lost almost all their belongings in the fire.

Lacking proper water facilities, firemen and volunteer firefighters battled the blaze for more than an hour with buckets of water and makeshift hose lines, but were unable to douse the flames.

Vellette said his wife carried their children from the burning home which they had occupied only last Friday. All escaped injury.

Gives Million To Aid Study Of Microbes

A million dollars might seem important to most people, but to Dr. Selman Waksman the money itself is rather unimportant. As the discoverer of streptomycin, his royalties amounted to nearly that sum last year. But, almost casually, Dr. Waksman has assigned $1,000,000 to Rutgers University to establish an Institute of Microbiology, $250,000 for ongoing expenses and with the further provision that additional proceeds shall go into fundamental research. We doubt that Dr. Waksman gave much thought to the fundamental decision. Research had produced the money as a by-product of the growing conquest of man's illnesses, and the scientist's view would be that of mere trusteeship over dollars of be directed back to the beginning point.

Fittingly enough, Dr. Waksman is the first director of the new Institute at Rutgers. Born in Russia, he came to this country in 1910 graduated from Rutgers in 1915, and remained at Rutgers to study the microbial world. Out of these years of fundamental research came ultimately the antibiotic called streptomycin, the drug which among its many powers has raised great hope in the battle against tuberculosis. Obviously a man whose devotion is to molds and microbes, to the advancement of knowledge which breaks barriers, is indifferent to the ordinary conception of wealth. His riches are far more solid and satisfactory. Rutgers is fortunate to have a home-grown trustee-ship of equality whose scientific eminence will now attract microbiologists from over the world to the institute which is really Dr. Waksman's succession. He shuns this son of Rutgers, who tapped the organic soil to release streptomycin and in the process was able to treat a million dollars as so insignificant. This is man at his best.—New York Herald Tribune.

MINTO

Minto—Miss Frances Sullivan, Belleville, visited Mr. and Mrs. Will Courtney on Sunday.

St. Thomas' Anglican W.A. held a dinner and quilting at the home of Mrs. Will Joyce on Thursday.

Sorry to report Mr. Ernest Broadworth is suffering from toothitis.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Harrington and Billie, of Toronto, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Will Donald.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Barker and boys, of Eldorado, visited Mr. and Mrs. Will Joyce on Sunday.

Sunday evening visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Lindsay Tanner and Mrs. Morgan were Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morgan and Beverley and Mr. and Mrs. Verna Heath, all of Stirling, and Mrs. D. Golian, of Batavia, N.Y.

Mr. and Mrs. Will Wright entertained Mr. and Mrs. S. Wright, of Belleville, and Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morrow and son of Frankford, on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Orval Jackson spent Sunday evening with Mr. and Mrs. Ern Broadworth.

Several Minto people unsuccessfully attended the funeral of the late William Johnson, which was held from the home of his sister, Mrs. Garnett Grills, on Wednesday of last week and also the funeral of the late Mr. George Heagle, uncle of the late William Johnson, which was held on Tuesday of this week. Sympathy is extended to both families.

NEW WASHING DISCOVERY WITH SUPER-WETTING ACTION

washes everything FASTER, CLEANER, EASIER than any soap on earth!

FAB's Super-Wetting Action means that when you wash with FAB, the FAB-activated water solution instantly penetrates materials . . . soaks them more thoroughly. FAB—with Super-Wetting Action—gets inside materials; pushes dirt out!

FAB means faster, cleaner, easier washing of dirtiest overalls, towels, work and play clothes . . . FAB brings extra-dirt-removing power for extra-dirty wash! FAB—with Super-Wetting Action—does away with clinging soap scum! Brings you softer shirts, towels, and sheets!

Don't miss FABulous FAB . . . the only thing you'll need for everything you wash!

New scientific washing proposition by Colgate-Palmolive-Peet, is a FABulous wash saver for the dirtiest overalls, work shirts, children's clothes, towels, sheets—everything that's extra dirty!

WHAT IS SUPER-WETTING ACTION?

See for yourself! Take a length of cotton sewing thread. Roll it into a ball. Drop it into a glass of water. It floats! Soon it will be completely wet for a long time.

Now drop another little ball of thread into a glass of water and FAB. It sinks, because completely soaked at once. This simple test shows you how FAB makes water wetter . . . instantly penetrates all washable materials faster . . . pushes dirt out!

That's FAB's FABulous Super-Wetting Action . . . something no soap on earth can give you!

FAB WASHES DIRTIEST CLOTHES CLEANER THAN ANY SOAP

FAB—with Super-Wetting Action—instantly penetrates materials; pushes dirt out. Washes grimiest overalls faster than soap! Makes tough kids like the "first" on shirt collars disappear like magic! FAB leaves no soap scum to "grey" or "yellow" white wash . . . Wash is whiter, cleaner when washed with FAB!

FAB BRIGHTENS SOAP-DULLED COLORS!

Soap-dulled washables look FABulously brighter, fresher, and newer after being washed with FAB. That's because anything washed with soap is made duller and grayer looking by soap scum . . . FAB—with Super-Wetting Action—removes that soap scum . . . leaves no film or scum of its own even in hardest water.

FAB WASHES CHEAPER... IN HARDEST WATER

Laboratory tests prove that one cup, or cup and a half, FAB washes up in twice as much family wash as soap. This economy is another FABulous miracle. Yes . . . FAB—with Super-Wetting Action—is up to twice as economical as soap in hard water. You'll notice that all of FAB washes is . . . Nothing is wasted in soap scum!

Faster And Better for all family wash and Dishes

It is Well to be Informed Before Hunting for Uranium

BY FORBES REDDE
(Canadian Press Business Editor)

Going out to hunt uranium? If you are thinking of it, you had better read up a bit on it first.

Not here, but in the literature which federal and provincial departments of Mines will be glad to give you.

For know, don't forget that uranium, in a limited way, is widely distributed, or that other things may set a Geiger-counter ticking.

Dr. A. H. Lang, of the geological survey of Canada, has this to say:

"It (uranium) is generally dispersed in small quantities, so that the problem of the prospector is not merely to find uranium, but to find it in workable concentrations.

"This statement may seem trite, but experience shows that it needs to be emphasized. It is not meant to detract from the wonderful work of those who have made discoveries that proved to be of small or of low grade, because all information regarding radioactive occurrences is important."

The reason it is timely to mention these things is that probably thousands of people will be looking for uranium this summer. Some even think of using their holidays to join in the hunt.

That's all right. It's probably a healthy pastime in the open air, you will at least get sun tan and wind burn, and perhaps have a better time than playing golf, at no more expense. And, who knows, you might find yourself a fortune.

But it is common sense to get first the information which is easily available from the various mine departments.

As a recent publication of the Ontario Department of Mines says:

"The first step is to become familiar with the regulations affecting staking of discoveries and claim-marking. Copies can be obtained by writing to the chief of the Geological Survey of Canada, Ottawa."

The departments won't be dogmatic. They know where the best findings have been made to date, but as the Ontario publication adds:

"While it is possible to offer some advice in directing the research, it would be unwise to eliminate any areas on the basis of present knowledge. The intensive search for radioactive deposits now being carried out has already produced results under a wide variety of geological conditions.

"Uranium, of course, is the element which plays the chief part in the production of atomic energy."

COSTLY THROW OF FIRECRACKERS

Timmins, May 26 (CP)—When John Cuschro tossed a firecracker across the street, here, more than $15 of his went up in smoke. He was fined $15 and costs Wednesday for throwing the firecracker which almost struck a woman in the face. The woman was uninjured.

Building Strike Nearing End in Toronto

Toronto, May 26 (CP)—The longest and most widespread strike in the history of Toronto's building industry may end today.

Labor Minister Daley is expected to announce a formula for settlement of the strike, now in its fourth month, which has thrown 6,000 building laborers and tradesmen out of work and tied up $80,000,000 in industrial and commercial construction. Wage losses for the four-day week period are estimated at $1,440,000.

The formula was called by the Hod Carriers and Common Laborer's Union (A.F.L.) to end demands for an agreement with the Toronto Builders Exchange which represents the majority of construction firms in the city. The union is seeking a modified closed shop, under which all non-union members would be compelled to join the union within 30 days.

A labor department spokesman said settlement on eight terms of settlement have been worked out during the last few days and appeared acceptable "in principle" to both parties.

Although the settlement formula was not disclosed, it appeared likely that it would include a wage guarantee and a quota for certification on behalf of all laborers employed by exchange members.

Radio-Active Isotopes

British Scientists Boost Output A-By-products for World Use

BY H. L. JONES
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, May 26 — (CP) — British science, making vast strides in development and production of radio - active isotopes, soon will be selling these vital atomic by - products to the world for the advancement of medical and industrial techniques.

From Britain's laboratories at an increasing rate come such things as radon "seeds" and radium needles — by - products of radium used in treatment of cancer. Also produced are a whole range of isotopes now coming into wide use as "tracers" in medicine and industry.

Both private and government laboratories have a hand in this production. And recently it was stepped up when a large, modern radio - chemical laboratory designed by Americans, Buckinghamshire, by the Ministry of Supply, went into full output.

At present the United States is the only world exporter of isotopes. But a spokesman for supply ministry said Britain now is almost ready to go into the world market. A campaign is to be launched to make industry isotopes-conscious and point out how their use can cut costs and time in testing metal castings for flaws.

The Amersham establishment dates from 1940 when an old country house with a flower garden and two cottages was converted to turn out processed radium for use on night dials of wristplanes. In 1946 the supply ministry took it over.

Hospitals all over Britain are being supplied with radium by-products from this centre where more than 70 scientists are employed. Capable of handling radium on a scale never before attempted in Britain, the centre has in two years doubled the amount available to British doctors.

The centre is divided into three "factories" each of which contains the "hot" laboratories where radioactive work is carried on, the "yellow" area containing changing rooms and maintenance services and the safe "green" area housing administration staff.

About 40 scientists, including 3 women, work in the "hot" laboratories.

Britain an added precaution all carry x-ray film in their pockets to measure exposure to gamma 1975.

DREW, DUPLESSIS IN "ALLIANCE" SAYS COLDWELL

Claims Union Nationale Machine Being Thrown Behind Drew

By Canadian Press Staff Writer

Brantford, May 26 (CP)—M. J. Coldwell, national C.C.F. leader, said Wednesday night that if the Tories are elected to power June 27 the federal government will be controlled by Premier Duplessis of Quebec.

"A vote for a Tory candidate is a vote for another form of Duplessis government at Ottawa controlled by irresponsible hand of Maurice Duplessis," he told an election campaign meeting in this Western Ontario industrial centre.

Mr. Coldwell, who speaks in Windsor, tonight, said he was reading reports that Premier Duplessis' Union Nationale machine was being thrown behind Progressive Conservative candidates in Quebec in the federal election.

It was an "unholy alliance between the ultra-Nationalist, anti-British followers of Premier Duplessis" and the "Imperialist Tory followers of Progressive Conservative leader George Drew."

It was also another indication of "an insincere, hypocritical attempt by the Conservatives to achieve power by any means — political, moral or otherwise."

Mr. Coldwell denied he had advised anyone to vote for the Liberal candidate and not vote for a C.C.F. candidate.

He was replying to remarks made by Mr. Drew in Flin Flon, Man., by a Conservative candidate there. "I have said no such thing," Mr. Coldwell said. "Mr. Drew must have been referring to the meeting I addressed in Westmoreland where we do not have any candidates in the provincial election."

In St. Johns, one of our supporters asked me at a meeting whom he should vote for in a C.C.F. candidate.

"I told him to use his own intelligence and vote for the less of two evils."

N.S. Premier Gives Platform For Liberals

Halifax, May 26 —(CP)— A $100,000,000 series of highways and public works projects during the next five years was promised Liberal Wednesday night in the latest Liberal election manifesto issued by Premier Macdonald. The Nova Scotia general election is June 9.

Other highlights of the Liberal platform:

1. Public works, now a $5,000,000 business annually, probably will increase to separate department to enable highways officials to give full attention to purely road transport problems.

2. Early appointment of an education minister and further expansion of land settlement activities.

3. Revision of the common school curriculum, improved teacher training, improved college facilities, $4,000,000 grants to cities and towns for the building of modern high schools and five more rural high schools.

4. Free medical care for all pensioners and dependents; allowance beneficiaries and financial assistance for the Maritimes School for social work.

5. "Special stress" on work of the housing commission.

6. Hard surfacing of highways will continue at about 500 miles a year. Secondary roads will be improved.

7. Financial aid for the Canso and Halifax-Dartmouth bridges; 40,000 acres of marshland to be reclaimed; the Nova Scotia Agricultural College rebuilt; a $4,000,000 fund will back the government's search for new industries; $7,410,000 annually to assist municipalities.

The 3,000 word platform also outlined the Liberal record since 1933.

Justice Minister Says Drew Has Not Changed Stand

Emerson, Man., May 26 (CP)— Justice Minister Garson said Wednesday night Manitoba is not likely to obtain a successful renewal of its five-year fiscal agreement with the Dominion government if the Progressive Conservative party is elected in the June 27 federal election.

Speaking at a Liberal party rally here Mr. Garson said the Dominion-Provincial relations policy of Progressive Conservatives changed "one iota" from his stand as minister of finance.

Mr. Drew was Premier of Ontario when that province and Quebec abstained from signing agreements with the Dominion whereby the provinces vacated certain tax fields in return for federal grants.

"Now he is demanding an entire new inquiry to determine methods for distribution of federal payments to the provinces," the Justice Minister said.

The present agreements signed in 1947 by the other seven provinces with the Dominion, because of Mr. Drew's "preposterous and ridiculous" position, Premier of Ontario at the 1946 conference, represent only "about 40 per cent" of the federal government's original offer, he said.

Refusal of Ontario and Quebec to join in the agreements meant the withdrawal of security and public investment proposals.

SENATE REFORM PROMISED BY PC LEADER

Drew Moves Into Alberta After Conducting Campaign in Saskatchewan

(By Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Saskatoon, May 26 — (CP) — Progressive Conservative leader George Drew today turned his guns on Alberta after concluding the Northern Saskatchewan leg of his current western campaign tour with speeches at Biggar and Saskatoon.

In his Biggar address in the afternoon, Mr. Drew said that for many years the communists claimed that the Progressive Conservative party represented big interests and reactionaries. Such charges, however, had got the communists nowhere, because the Progressive Conservative party under his leadership had been repudiated in Ontario for the third successive time in 1948.

Speaking at Saskatoon in the evening, Mr. Drew again referred to communism after which he briefly outlined by the Saskatoon committee of the Labor - Progressive party were looked on all persons entering the meeting. There was no disturbance.

Comments of Mr. Drew: "Imagine anyone taking their stand with the communists."

Communists, he added, stood for the repudiation of everything Canadians loved.

The Progressive Conservative leader said if the party is elected to power June 27, would reform the Senate with a joint Senate - Commons committee set up to determine nature of the reform.

The present government had treated the Senate with contempt, he said. As far back as 1921, the Liberals government attempted reform of the Senate but since then had done more and more to deny that decision an opportunity to be useful.

Ambush-Attempt On Victor Reuther Studied by Police

Detroit, May 26 (AP)— Police sifted scant clues today in the ambush attempt on the life of Victor Reuther, United Automobile Workers official, who blinked one eye by an unknown attacker's gunfire.

At the same time the Federal Bureau of Investigation was considering whether to enter the investigation after a stream of requests from a number of quarters, including Congress, the C.I.O. and the State of Michigan.

Governor Williams' director for the C.I.O.'s big U.A.W. union, was shot through a window of his home Tuesday night.

The police clues were the weapon, a double-barreled, 12-gauge shotgun discovered in the Reuther yard, and a heel print.

Except for neighbors' reports of seeing a "big model car" drive off rapidly after the shot, authorities had no other clues.

Surgeons at Henry Ford hospital Wednesday removed Reuther's left eye which a shotgun pellet had virtually ripped to pieces.

Reuther, 37, also shot in the face and neck, was reported in "satisfactory" condition after the operation.

His brother, Walter, president of the U.A.W., on whose life a similar attempt was made 13 months earlier, charged a communist plot, or other subversive plans, is responsible for both attacks.

Premier Frost Takes Part in By-Election

Cochrane May 26 (CP)— Premier Frost said Wednesday night that, in June 8 Ontario by-election, Cochrane north, the voters must choose between socialism and free enterprise.

The premier, fighting his first by-election campaign since he took office last month, addressed a public meeting in a Cochrane theatre.

The by-election was called to elect a successor to John H. Cochrane, Progressive Conservative killed in an automobile accident here June last October. The candidates are Marcel Leger of Hearst, Progressive Conservative and Roy Kenzory of Kapuskasing C.C.F.

The Progressive Conservative party is, like the Liberal party a free enterprise party believing that the great driving powers of individual initiative are necessary in the development of a great new land such as ours," said Premier Frost.

"The party believes in the political liberty and the economic liberty of the individual and that the state should be the protector of the helper, neither destroying nor destroying the rights and liberties of the subject.

"Communism and, indeed, modern socialism, which both arise from economic theories, both decry free enterprise and believe in the concentration of what we call economic power in the state, with the result that all economic forms and drive become concentrated in the state and, therefore in a few individuals. That, in the end, destroys liberty.

Elora County Home Inmates Complain Of Lack of Food

Two Elderly Men Tell Of Conditions After Escape

Elora, Ont., May 26 (CP) — Two elderly inmates of the Wellington County Home for the Aged who escaped Wednesday because they were "ill treated and starved" were returned to the home today.

Reeve W. MacDonald, who ordered their return, said he had given officials at the home instruction not to punish the two men.

The two men, Aubrey Lawson, 67, and Andrew Robertson 68, said they left the institution to return to their homes because they "got nothing to eat and were locked up all the time."

The aged pair set out 15 their night attire in near-freezing temperature to walk the 20 miles to their homes. But after two miles they reached Elora, 15 miles northwest of Guelph, and sought shelter in the home of Mrs. Pat Kirvan who dotticed them huddled in her back yard at 7 a.m. Reeve Lecessed

Reeve MacDonald, who has been leading a campaign in county council for an investigation into the home said the matter will be heard of this matter."

Lawson, a painter because of failing eye-sight, said he had eaten an egg only once in the four months he had been in the home.

Silx hogs had been slaughtered but all the pork he had eaten was a piece of the hide.

Robertson, who looks out once before, but was returned by a man who gave him a ride, said he was "afraid to return."

"He said he was afarid they would take his teeth and not give them back," said Peter Chody, a neighbor of Mrs. Kirvan. "He said he went to the home voluntarily two years ago and has been trying to get out ever since."

Chody said Robertson told him the food was "terrible."

For breakfast Roberton said they were given a small bowl of porridge, water syrup, weak tea and two pieces of stale bread. The bread was buttered "as if with a spray gun" it was put on so thin.

Boy Says He Got up Out of Bad Dream And Shot Two

Cumberland, Md., May 26 (AP) — A 16-year-old boy said he got up from a bad dream and shot his brother and sister-in-law and held here dead on a charge of murder.

The sister-in-law, 18-year-old Mrs. Katherine Brewster, died Wednesday of two shotgun wounds in the neck. Her 23-year-oht husband, Thomas, was shot in the leg.

State's Attorney said the youth, Randolph Brewster, told him he "had a bad dream" while sleeping in his brother's home.

"When I got awake I was dazed," he said. "Something told me to get the gun and I got it and shot him and she jumped up and screamed and I shot her."

Extra Benefits FOR YOUR BABY

Libby's
The Only Baby Foods Homogenized For Easy Digestion

In preparing foods for your baby, Libby's alone use a double process, straining plus homogenization. Homogenization breaks up the food so that it is at least ten times smaller than foods which are strained only. This makes Libby's Baby Foods so easy-to-digest that clinics testify that even a six-week-old baby can digest Libby's easily, without feeding as much earlier age than would be possible with strained foods, in cases where he deems it advisable. It has also been proved that baby gets more actual nourishment from the same amount of foods with Libby's.

Make sure your baby enjoys the extra benefits which Libby's straining plus homogenization offers.

SHANNONVILLE

R.G. Williams Explains X-ray At H. & S. Meeting

The Shannonville Home and School Association held their regular monthly meeting in the local school, the president, Mr. William Slavin, presided.

The committee appointed for the purchase of a piano for the school, reported little success for their efforts as yet. Mrs. F. Louis and Mrs. R. Brant were elected to attend a sale in Belleville to investigate the possibilities of a suitable piano.

Mrs. Helen Louis reported on the last sewing meeting which was held at the home of Mrs. Stanley MacDonald on May 3rd with 16 ladies in attendance.

Generous Donations

Mrs. Louis reported the following generous donations: Two cushion tops from Mrs. Kleburn; printed cloth from Mrs. Stanley MacDonald, and a pink crochet baby set from Mrs. Herb Brant. The ladies planned for a bazaar in the future, and also would sell any of their finished articles privately. Mrs. H. Brant having all sewing which could be viewed at her home.

Mrs. A. Spencer read a letter from the pupils of the Shannonville School who had visited Toronto recently, thanking the Home and School Association for their assistance in making this enjoyable trip possible.

The principal of the school, Mr. F. Reynolds, read the financial report concerning this journey and also thanked the Home and School Association for their aid and the members who transported the pupils to and from the train in Belleville.

Field Day Arrangements

Final arrangements were made for a Field Day to be held in the local Fair Grounds on Wednesday, June 1st. Mrs. Kenneth Vivian having previously reported that permission had been received from the Fair officials to hold this meet on their grounds. Mrs. Stanley MacDonald, Mrs. Ray Reid, and Mrs. Kenneth Vivian were elected to act as a booth committee for that day and to purchase supplies for same.

Mr. Reynolds reported that the teachers of the school area had met recently and had set up a schedule as regards to age limits for the sports events. Mrs. Kenneth Juby said she had received generous donations from the Shannonville merchants toward the purchasing of large cups for the winners of the boys' and girls' events. Mrs. A. Spencer reported that she had arranged about the ribbons for the first, second and third place winners in each event. Mr. Reynolds, Mr. Carman Brant and Mr. William Slavin, in case of the following afternoon to draw up the final rules and regulations for the event.

It was decided to hold a meeting of the Home and School Executive on Tuesday evening at the home of the Treasurer, Mr. Wilson.

The following nominating committee was appointed to draw up a slate of officers for the Fall Term, this slate to be presented at the June meeting—Mrs. Clifford Maracle, Mrs. G. M. Fraser, Mr. O. Reynolds.

Guest Speaker

The guest speaker of the evening, Mr. R. G. Williams, of the X-ray department of the Belleville General Hospital, was introduced by Mrs. Ray Reid.

Mr. Williams gave an educational talk, illustrated by showing of X-ray slides.

X-ray Discovered

He mentioned that X-ray was discovered in Germany in 1894. An investigation was being conducted as to gases when subjected to an electric current. When a photographic plate was developed it was found that a shadow had been produced on this plate. He stated that there was nothing leading up to this, as to many other discoveries, but was a purely accidental discovery.

He explained that X-ray was a form of ray that cannot be seen. He also explained that X-rays pass through some substances more easily than others, and showed a picture to prove this point. This showed that X-rays pass more easily through aluminum than lead.

The use of the fluoroscope also was explained. This is preferable to the X-ray in some cases, as it shows the organs of the body in motion. X-ray films still penetrate some substances in the body better than others, in a different way, depending upon the density of the substance, said Mr. Williams.

X-ray Destroys Disease Tissue

X-ray is also used for destroying disease tissue in the body, said Mr. Williams. This has helped so much in the case of cancer. This use of the X-ray was discovered by accident when it was found the X-ray workers' tissues were being damaged by close contact. This need never purposely occur today, explained Mr. Williams.

The latter part of Mr. Williams' talk composed of interesting X-ray slides with thorough explanations on fractures, the stomach, the lungs, and the kidneys.

Mr. Slavin thanked the speaker for his extremely interesting talk.

Refreshments were served by the social committee, the convener, Mrs. James Vesterfelt, being absent as she was sailing the following day for her home in Leeds, England.

The men of the Association are to have charge of the refreshments for the next meeting.

MELROSE

Melrose — Mrs. Chas. Macfarlane, of Belleville, is staying for a time with Mrs. Geo. Badgley and visiting former friends and neighbors in this community.

Mr. Mac McLaren, who was home from Oshawa for the week-end and Mrs. Mac McLaren, called on Mr. and Mrs. Russell Macfarlane on Sunday afternoon.

Miss Marion English spent the week-end with her parents. Marion is one of the class of nurses to graduate at the Belleville Hospital the first of June.

Rev. A. W. Lougheed and Mrs. Lougheed spent the Sunday dinner hour at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur English.

Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Sexsmith entertained a group of children on Tuesday afternoon, the occasion being Beverley's sixth birthday.

The Township Council with the Road Superintendent, and H. A. Small, district municipal engineer of Kingston, made a tour of the township roads on Monday of this week.

Mrs. Frank McLaren had the misfortune to fracture a bone in her ankle and will have it in a cast for the next three weeks.

The Tuesday evening bridge game was not completed due to the rain. Corbyville was playing the remainder.

Tomato planting will be on very short as the rush of delivering the plants this week.

Sympathy is extended to the relatives of the late Mrs. Mastin whose interment took place at Melrose Cemetery on Wednesday afternoon. This is the second bereavement in just a few weeks.

Mr. Wm. Blatherwick and Marcia, of Belleville, spent the week-end with Mrs. I. Blatherwick and Marion.

Congratulations to Harold Osborne on winning one of the valuable door prizes at the Motor Show at the armouries in Belleville, on Friday night.

Shannonville— A number from the vicinity visited the Canadian Legion Carnival, and motor show in the Belleville Armouries on last week and report a very enjoyable event. None in this district have yet wrestle in winning the valuable prizes offered each evening.

The many friends of Mrs. East Capson (nee Edith Cook) will be interested to hear that a young son, born Sunday May 15. Edith is the daughter of Mrs. Hudson Cook and spent most of her life in this community. She and her husband now reside in Bradford Ontario.

All are pleased to see Mr. and Mrs. George Caldwell back in our community after being away for some time, due to Mrs. Caldwell's ill health. It is good news to hear Mrs. Caldwell is feeling much better at this time.

Mr. and Mrs. J. McCormick, Switzerville; Mr. William Ballance of Napanee; and Mr. Clarence McCormick of Oshawa, were recent guests at the home of Dr. H. Eckardt.

Mr. and Mrs Willis Wilson, and daughter Mary, and Mrs. Robert Kincaid were recent guests of the former's brother, Mr. Russell Grills, and Mrs. Grills of Thomasburg.

Archbishop Lyons and Mrs. Lyons of Kingston, will be guests of Rev. and Mrs. E. M. Caldwell next Wednesday. Archbishop Lyons will officiate at the Confirmation Service in Holy Trinity Anglican Church that evening. The following will receive confirmation: Misses Betty Marion; Ruth Ann Kilburn; Mr. Ambrey Isaac Marsden; Mr. Vernon Hill; Misses Margaret Hill and Patricia Angevine.

Mr. and Mrs. Gregg are now occupying the house formerly occupied by Mr. and Mrs. Carman Brant and family.

Mrs. Hudson Cook was a guest last week of her son, Mr. Ray Cook, and family.

Mrs. Fraser Aylsworth, Mrs. June Aylsworth and Messrs. Wm. and Robert Aylsworth, all of Madoc, were recent guests of Dr. H. Eckardt, Miss Winnifred Eckardt and Mrs. Cecil Eckardt.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Starr and family of Oshawa were weekend guests of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brant and family.

The Ladies Guild of Holy Trinity Anglican Church, which was to have been held at Mrs. Peter Marsden's on Thursday, was not held as arranged, due to illness in Mrs. Marsden's family.

All offer sincere sympathy to Mrs. Robert Kincaid in the loss of her second eldest brother Samuel Francis Grills, who passed away suddenly in Saskatchewan a week ago. Mr. Grills had just recovered from pneumonia, and appeared to be improved. He was 71 years old and is the first of seven brothers to "pass on." Mr. Grills was born in Hungerford township, spending part of his life at Chapman's Corners, before going west. His funeral was held last Monday.

Rev. Savery, rector of Christ Church, Tyendinaga, was a Sunday guest of Rev. and Mrs. E.M. Caldwell. Mr. Savery exchanged services with Rev. Caldwell conducting the services at Point Anne and St. John's Mission, Herchimer Avenue. Mr. Caldwell was the guest speaker at Christ Church, it being the annual anniversary service to commemorate the coming of the Loyalists and Mohawks to this section of the country.

Mr. and Mrs. Ray Cook and Mr. and Mrs. Boyce recently motored to Aurora, Niagara Falls, and Syracuse, New York, where they visited friends and relatives.

Mrs. Joe Goold of Buffalo, New York; Miss Gladys Aylsworth, Reg. N., of Saskatoon, Saskatchewan; and Miss Jean Aylsworth of Point Anne were guests last week at the home of Dr. H. Eckardt, Miss Winnifred Eckardt and Mrs. Carl Eckardt.

Mr. and Mrs. John Kent motored to Bancroft last Friday. Mr. Kent has been in charge of the construction of the Red Cross Hospital in Bancroft, and it is now completed and a very beautiful structure. It is indeed a credit to Hill-Clark company, who were the contractors.

Miss Verna Fox and Mr. O. Reynolds were guests on Tuesday for dinner at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Walter Brant.

Mrs. Roy Cook is at present visiting Mrs. Hudson Cook.

H. & S. Dance

The Shannonville Home and School Association are planning for a dance in the local Orange Hall on Friday evening, June 10th, in order to augment their present funds. Mr. Carman Brant; Mrs. Peter Marion and Mrs. Gordon Johnson, have been elected to have charge of the sale of hot dogs and soft drinks in the Hall that evening.

The ladies of the local guild of Holy Trinity Anglican Church were invited last Tuesday afternoon, to attend a "Blossom Tea" in the rectory at Empey Hill. A number took advantage of this kind invitation and reported a lovely afternoon.

A number from the local United Church Women's Association are planning to attend their annual convention in Grace Church, Trenton, this Thursday, May 26.

Local friends of Miss Ruth Wellington will be interested to know that Ruth is one of the graduating class of the Kingston General Hospital School for Nurses. The graduation exercises are taking place in Kingston on Monday, Rev. and Mrs. Hayes and Ruth were former residents of Christ Church Rectory, prior to their moving to Wellington a year or ago.

The Women's Missionary Society of the United Church held a very successful Bake Sale on the Market Square.

Congratulations to Miss Marion English, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur English, of Melrose, who graduates Wednesday, June 1st, from Belleville General Hospital School for Nurses. It is understood Marion has been given the high honor of delivering the Valedictory at the graduation exercises.

Miss Jean Hawkins of Cobden, and Miss Helen Vivian, nurses-in-training at Kingston General Hospital were guests this past week of the latter's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Vivian.

Rev. and Mrs. A. W. Lougheed were Sunday dinner guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur English.

Mr. Leon Marion, of Hamilton, was a recent guest of his parents Mr. and Mrs. Peter Marion.

WOMEN ACCLAIM PURE JAM QUALITY, VALUE!

EVERYWHERE, CANADA — Long recognized as keen judges of value, Canadian women have created a growing preference for pure jam quality in the increased demand for E. D. Smith's . . . Canada's most famous brand of pure jam. The consensus seems to be that pure jam, because of their rich fruit flavor, spread most delicious per jar, making the few cents extra a good investment in economy as well as flavor enjoyment.

Canadian women are equally at delicious eating in Strawberry and Raspberry jams as two of the most popular varieties. E. D. Smith's Jams are also offer many other varieties that enjoy wide popularity in many thousands of Canadian homes, such varieties as Pure Cherry, Pure Peach, Pure Plum, Pure Damson, etc.

By BOB THOMAS

Hollywood, May 26 (AP)—A young cowpoke went ridin' to Hollywood one day.

The first line of Stan Jones' sensational song hit, "Ghost Riders in the Sky," almost fits his own story.

The haunting song astounded the music business last week by leaping to the top of the hit parade without a previous showing in the top nine list. Observers believe it's the first time this has happened. The event makes a Death Valley ranger the current king of tin pan alley.

The story of the song goes back to Jones' boyhood on the range near Douglas, Ariz. An old cowhand filled him with stories about a 'ghost herd in the sky' pursued by a band of bedeviled wranglers. The old-timer was said to have seen the ghost riders just before he died.

Serenade Tourists

After serving as a Red Cross worker during the war, he became park ranger. At night Jones would strum a guitar and sing his songs for the tourists. Last year, when a film company was shooting in Death Valley, Randolph Scott heard him and advised him to take his songs to Hollywood. Jones took the advice and tramped around the music publishers. They all shook their heads. "Too hymn-like," they shrugged. Finally Edwin H. Morris of Mayfair Music Publishers snapped up the song and it was started on the golden trail.

Success Reason?

Morris can't put his finger on the reason for the song's sudden success.

"It couldn't be the tune—everybody knows it's taken from 'Johnny Comes Marching Home'," Morris says.

Jones himself is astounded by the success. He hopes some day to retire with his wife to a little ranch in Nevada. And he's got a lot more songs in his bag which he thinks will bring that day closer.

HORSE SENSE BRIDGE

By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Elva Tyrus keeps asking how long a takeout is forcing. I keep saying "until the chain of new suit takeouts has been broken." She keeps wondering when the chain is broken.

To be technical, a takeout is never a no-trump bid. It means a bid in some suit. It is never an assist. It means a suit that has not been supported by a partner.

A rebid in your own suit is a takeout. If your suit has not had an assist from partner. But it is not a takeout to a new suit. Takeout to a new suit means a suit not mentioned before by either partner.

Unless a jump bid has been used, only a takeout to a new suit forces partner to bid. Not a takeout to a suit that has had a bid. Not a takeout to a suit that has been assisted. Not a no-trump bid.

As soon as there is anything except a takeout to a new suit, the forcing signal ceases. Thereafter, not even a new suit takeout is forcing. Because the chain of new suits was broken.

South opened with one spade when north held this hand:

♥ 3 2 Q 9 4
♦ K J 8 4
♣ 7 5 3

The first response by north is two hearts. This is a takeout to a new suit. South then bids three clubs. It is an unbroken chain of new suit takeouts. North must bid again.

The second bid by north is a takeout to three diamonds. It is a new suit. The chain of new suit takeouts has not been broken. South is forced to bid again. Likes it or not, he must bid again.

South may not have a rebiddable spade or club suit. He may not have adequate support for an assist of hearts or diamonds. No tricks enough for a raise. But he must bid again. He bids pot trump.

Had either partner bid no-trump, rebid a suit, or assisted, the three diamond bid would not be forcing. But here it was an unbroken chain of new suit takeouts. There is strength in the old boy yet.

STIRLING

Don Rose Named Recreational Director

Stirling — At a meeting of the Stirling Community Recreational Council held in the Council Chambers on Monday night, Ron Rose of Belleville was engaged as recreation director for the season.

His duties will commence on June 27th, and continue to August 27th., during which time he will supervise sports, particularly among the junior boys. Several ball teams will be organized while he will also give instruction in crafts, track and field events, hiking and swimming etc. Install Sandpits

It is planned to install a number of sandpits, swings and slides for the children at the recreational grounds. The local lawn bowling club will also be opened under the recreational council with the officers of the club acting as a sub committee to the council. It is also planned to have an official opening night with special features in the near future. President P. Mayhew presided over the meeting, which was well attended.

Farm Association

Operators of garages and service stations in Stirling held a meeting at McIntosh and Wells' garage on Monday evening and formed an organization.

Ed Warren was chosen president; Don Francis, secretary, and Wm. Montgomery treasurer. A lengthy discussion took place on the regulation of hours, and other matters affecting the local operators. It is expected at the next meeting a definite schedule of hours will be adopted.

Rotarians Meet

The weekly dinner meeting of the Rotary Club of Stirling was held in the Community Hall on Tuesday night. President "Dick" Hadley led a discussion of ways and means followed by a brief talk on crippled children's work by Dr. Bill Cornell.

Plans were made for holding a Rotary strawberry festival next month with a softball game to be staged between the Campbellford and Stirling Rotary Clubs. Guests included Bill Gardiner, Al Crossley and Fred Houchin, who presided at the piano for community singing.

AT THE BELLE — Jane Wyman plays her most dazzling role in Warner Bros. "Johnny Belinda," twelve different Academy-Award winning directors, star Lew Ayres and Jane Wyman, Monoghan, opening today and Friday at the Belle Theatre.

AT THE CAPITOL — Tim Holt upsets the plans of a crooked government official in RKO Radio's action-packed "Indian Agent," in which he is co-starred with Lee Patrick at the Capitol Theatre, Belleville, for the present showing. "Mexican Manhunt," starring Lee Roberts and Noah Beery, both hits are first city run. Matinee daily at 1.30p.

Brighteners

Eccles, England — (AP)—Luck was with fortune today.

Wife Geoffrey Fortune lost his wallet while flying upside down over Lancashire. He landed and telephoned police, who recovered the wallet in a garden within 15 minutes of the time it fell.

The wallet was returned with the £2 ($23) and hard-to-get gasoline ration coupons still in it.

Petersburg, N. Y. — (AP) — The woman who switches on the village fire alarm had to run next door to report a fire by telephone.

Lightning struck the home of Mrs. Lloyd B. Waters Tuesday night. It burned out the fire alarm controls and set the house ablaze.

She used a neighbor's phone to summon volunteer firemen.

Indianapolis — (AP)—A rabbit family sent the 10th Air Force into temporary retreat to a position — not previously prepared — on Schoen Field Wednesday.

In the midst of plane traffic on a taxi strip, the nest of papa and mama rabbit and their offspring was discovered by Sgt. Robert Brisen.

It didn't look good for the rabbits until Sgt. Brisen got permission to post a red flag. Now the planes that come in the headquarters hangar take a slight detour. They taxi into the hangar area on a bunny line instead of a bee line.

Hastings, Sussex, England (CP) — Screams in the night alarmed people at Hastings and police were called to search for a girl who, it was thought, was being murdered.

Nothing was found . . . but next day the screamer was seen in a wood nearby. The screams came from a female fox.

AT THE CAPITOL — Primitive pair — Lex Barker and Brenda Joyce co-star as the former and the latest in Edgar Rice Burroughs' "Tarzan" features, which are now showing at the Capitol Theatre. On the same program is "Indian Agent," starring Tim Holt. Matinee daily at 2:00.

WOMAN 'GETS' 10 DAYS FOR DRUNKEN DRIVING

Timmins, May 26 (CP)— Mrs. Rose Stady, a 32-year-old Timmins mother of three children was sentenced to 10 days in jail Wednesday on a charge of drunk driving. The Magistrate said had it not been for her children he would have given her the maximum of 30 days. The charge arose from an accident in which the truck driven by Mrs. Stady hit and turned upside down a taxi at a Timmins intersection on the night of May 13.

AT THE McCARTHY — Marjorie Main, who "put mules" on the list of "best dressed" women, wears Percy Kilbride in her most new undertaking. The lovable comedy team appears in Universal-International's "Ma and Pa Kettle", repeating the roles they created in "The Egg and I," starting Friday at Odeon's McCarthy Theatre.

Even Long-Distance Clouting Of Larry Doby Fails to Help Indians in Climbing Ladder

BY JACK HAND

Top is the word for Cleveland's first - eastern - trip - marred by long-distance clouting of Larry Doby.

Only the home - run hitting of the talented Negro outfielder saved the Tribe from complete disaster. But he couldn't do it all.

The world champions left Cleveland May 11 in second place. No matter what happens tonight when they wind up their tour at Washington, they'll go home in seventh place. No wonder owner Bill Veeck wants to start the season all over again.

As the Indians lost three at Chicago before they came east, they actually have a 12 - record against the Red Sox, Yankees, Athletics and Senators.

Wednesday night they lost again but Doby hit another home run. It hadn't been for that, Sid Hudson would have had a shutout. As it was, he won 2-1.

Things ever get tough at the Yankee Stadium, Tommy Byrne can make a living beating Detroit. The New Yorker did it for the fifth straight time of his career Wednesday, 8-2, striking out 12 men. That was the season high for strikeouts.

Hal Newhouser, having one of his poorer days, was Byrne's victim.

Protect Second Place

Connie Mack's Athletics protected second place in the American League by downing Chicago White Sox 6-4 Wednesday night. The A's remained 3½ games back of the league - leading Yankees.

A five - run spurt in the 4th inning against Marino Pieretti and Clyde Shoun did the job for the Mackmen. Dick Fowler of Toronto was forced to leave after five innings because of arm trouble but Alex Kellner saved the lead.

St. Louis Browns turned on Boston Red Sox to win an 8-4 decision. Veteran Galehouse helped the Brownies pile up their 11-hit lead for Cliff Fannin that Al Zarilla's three - run homer in the sixth couldn't overcome.

Tighten Loop

Brooklyn tightened the National League race by thumping Pittsburgh 8-6, while both Boston and New York were losing. The Dodgers are only a game out of first. Jackie Robinson continued his batting spree with a two-run homer and single, boosting his R.B.I. total to 34.

Hewie Pollet looked like the Pollet of 1946 as he pitched St. Louis Cardinals to a six-hit 3-0 victory over the last-place Boston Braves.

Chicago's Cubs took the best off themselves by defeating New York Giants 7-6 in the second straight day 9-2. Bob Rush declared Monte Kennedy with the help of Hank Edwards who drove in one run and scored another.

Bud Lively came through with another well - pitched effort as Cincinnati shaded the Phillies 3-2. Lively's eight - hitter was his 2nd victory.

Whipper Watson, Wee Willie Davis Clash Fri. Night

Whipper Billy Watson will defend his Monetville wrestling next Friday night according to announcement by Manager Walt Gecow. Gecow has signed the notorious Wee Willie Davis to meet the Whip in Friday's main mat bout. The Whipper since losing his British Empire Championship to Australian's Fred Atkins has been fighting harder and tighter than ever before. On two occasions he has come within a whisker of beating the Aussie and regaining the Empire crown but each time bad luck has dogged his steps.

On Friday night the Whipper will be going all out against Davis for a win over the big mean Russian from Los Angeles means plenty to the Canadian. A loss would be of equal importance especially at this time when Watson is so anxious to get into the ring once more with Atkins. The enormous Davis who weighs around 300 lbs. when bundled and stinky mark and all of it bone and muscle thinks he can lick anybody. His several years in Japan make a dashing smashing sort of an encounter and one that the fans at least can enjoy thoroughly.

Another colossus of the mat the Davis will be back on Friday's card against the famous Sliding Billy Hansen. Hansen electrified the fans here on several occasions with his sensational mat wrestling years ago. He is reported to be faster and tougher than ever in the feud bout a brilliant new-comer Tug Carlsen from Seattle, Wash. Sweet comes in against Ed Measke, to round out an all-star card.

Toronto Leafs In Third Place By 1-0 Victory

(By The Associated Press)

Seven straight victories for Wes Bailey should earn the Jersey City ace another look from the parent New York Yankees.

The big Giants' hurling staff is beginning to run into trouble, Leon Culberson across the river in the International League continues to shine.

The last - place Baltimore Orioles were Bailey's victims Wednesday night by a 4-3 score as he dished out only four hits to win a tight battle from Al Widmar.

Leon Culberson, a former big leaguer who has been around for a few years, hit a grand - slam homer to give Newark a 7-4 edge over Syracuse. Starter Wally Hood received his 5-0 going into the nine - run fourth because of homers by Bob Usher and Dutch Mele. After the big fifth, Hood settled down to throw a four - hitter, his third shutout of the season.

Max Peterson outpitched Cloyd Boyer in a tight duel to give Toronto a 1-0 victory over Rochester. The only run came in the second inning on a walk to Johnny Blatnik, a single by Bill Glynn and an infield out.
